SEC. 1236. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING THE USE OF CHILDREN AS SOLDIERS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) In the year 2000, approximately 300,000 individuals under the age of 18 are participating in armed conflict in more than 30 countries worldwide.

(2) Many children participating in armed conflict in various countries around the world are forcibly conscripted through kidnapping or coercion, while others join military units due to economic necessity, to avenge the loss of a family member, or for their own personal safety.

(3) Many military commanders frequently force child soldiers to commit gruesome acts of ritual killings or torture against their enemies, including against other children.

(4) Many military commanders separate children from their families in order to foster dependence on military units and leaders, leaving children vulnerable to manipulation, deep traumatization, and in need of psychological counseling and rehabilitation.

(5) Child soldiers are exposed to hazardous conditions and risk physical injuries, sexually transmitted diseases, malnutrition, deformed backs and shoulders from carrying overweight loads, and respiratory and skin infections.

(6) Many young female soldiers face the additional psychological and physical horrors of rape and sexual abuse, being enslaved for sexual purposes by militia commanders, and forced to endure severe social stigma should they return home.

(7) Children in northern Uganda continue to be kidnapped by the Lords Resistance Army (LRA), which is supported and funded by the Government of Sudan and which has committed and continues to commit gross human rights violations in Uganda.

(8) Children in Sri Lanka have been forcibly recruited by the opposition Tamil Tigers movement and forced to kill or be killed in the armed conflict in that country.

(9) An estimated 7,000 child soldiers have been involved in the conflict in Sierra Leone, some as young as age 10, with many being forced to commit extrajudicial executions, torture, rape, and amputations for the rebel Revolutionary United Front.

(10) On January 21, 2000, in Geneva, a United Nations Working Group, including representatives from more than 80 governments including the United States, reached consensus on an international agreement, referred to in this case as an ''optional protocol'', on the use of child soldiers.

(11) This optional protocol, upon entry into force, will—

(A) raise the international minimum age for conscription and will require governments to take all feasible measures to ensure that members of their armed forces under age 18 do not participate directly in combat;

(B) prohibit the recruitment and use in armed conflict of persons under the age of 18 by nongovernmental armed forces;

(C) encourage governments to raise the minimum legal age for voluntary recruits above the current standard of 15, and

(D) commit governments to support the demobilization and rehabilitation of child soldiers and, when possible, to allocate resources to this purpose.

(12) On October 29, 1998, United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan set minimum age requirements for United Nations peacekeeping personnel that are made available by member nations of the United Nations.

(13) The United Nations Under-Secretary General for Peace-keeping, Bernard Miyet, announced in the Fourth Committee of the General Assembly that contributing governments of member nations were asked not to send civilian police and military observers under the age of 25 and that troops in national contingents should preferably be at least 21 years of age but in no case should they be younger than 18 years of age.

(14) On August 25, 1999, the United Nations Security Council unanimously passed Resolution 1261 (1999) condemning the use of children in armed conflicts.

(15) In addressing the Security Council on August 26, 1999, the Special Representative of the Secretary General for Children and Armed Conflict, Olara Otunnu, urged the adoption of a global three-pronged approach to combatting the use of children in armed conflict that would—

(A) first, raise the age limit for recruitment and participation in armed conflict from the present age of 15 to the age of 18;

(B) second, increase international pressure on armed groups which currently abuse children; and

(C) third, address the political, social, and economic factors that create an environment in which children are induced by appeal of ideology or by socio-economic collapse to become child soldiers.

(16) The United States delegation to the United Nations working group relating to child soldiers, which included representatives from the Department of Defense, supported the Geneva agreement on the optional protocol.

(17) On May 25, 2000, the United Nations General Assembly unanimously adopted the optional protocol on the use of child soldiers.

(18) The optional protocol was opened for signature on June 5, 2000.

(19) The President signed the optional protocol on behalf of the United States on July 5, 2000.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL STATEMENTS ON CHILD SOLDIERS.—Congress joins the international community in—

(1) condemning the use of children as soldiers by governmental and nongovernmental armed forces worldwide; and

(2) welcoming the optional protocol on the use of child soldiers adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on May 25, 2000, as a critical first step in ending the use of children as soldiers.

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON FURTHER ACTIONS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) it is essential that the President consult closely with the Senate with the objective of building support for ratification by the United States of the optional protocol and that the Senate move forward as expeditiously as possible;

(2) the United States should provide assistance, through a new fund to be established by law, for the rehabilitation and reintegration into their respective civilian societies of child soldiers of other nations; and

(3) the President, acting through the Secretaries of State and Defense and other appropriate officials, should undertake all possible efforts to persuade and encourage other governments to ratify and endorse the optional protocol on the use of child soldiers.

(d) ESTABLISHMENT OF PLAN FOR RESPONDING TO UNDERSEA ACCIDENTS OR INCIDENTS.—Congress urges the President of the United States and the President of the Russian Federation, in coordination with the leaders of other maritime nations that possess undersea naval and research vessels and undersea rescue capabilities, to cooperate in establishing a plan for—

This title may be cited as the ''Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program Act of 2000''.

SEC. 3602. FINDINGS; SENSE OF CONGRESS.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) Since World War II, Federal nuclear activities have been explicitly recognized under Federal law as activities that are ultra-hazardous. Nuclear weapons production and testing have involved unique dangers, including potential catastrophic nuclear accidents that private insurance carriers have not covered and recurring exposures to radioactive substances and beryllium that, even in small amounts, can cause medical harm.

(2) Since the inception of the nuclear weapons program and for several decades afterwards, a large number of nuclear weapons workers at sites of the Department of Energy and at sites of vendors who supplied the Cold War effort were put at risk without their knowledge and consent for reasons that, documents reveal, were driven by fears of adverse publicity, liability, and employee demands for hazardous duty pay.

(3) Many previously secret records have documented unmonitored exposures to radiation and beryllium and continuing problems at these sites across the Nation, at which the Department of Energy and its predecessor agencies have been, since World War II, self-regulating with respect to nuclear safety and occupational safety and health. No other hazardous Federal activity has been permitted to be carried out under such sweeping powers of self-regulation.

(4) The policy of the Department of Energy has been to litigate occupational illness claims, which has deterred workers from filing workers' compensation claims and has imposed major financial burdens for such employees who have sought compensation. Contractors of the Department have been held harmless and the employees have been denied workers' compensation coverage for occupational disease.

(5) Over the past 20 years, more than two dozen scientific findings have emerged that indicate that certain of such employees are experiencing increased risks of dying from cancer and non-malignant diseases. Several of these studies have also established a correlation between excess diseases and exposure to radiation and beryllium.

(6) While linking exposure to occupational hazards with the development of occupational disease is sometimes difficult, scientific evidence supports the conclusion that occupational exposure to dust particles or vapor of beryllium can cause beryllium sensitivity and chronic beryllium disease. Furthermore, studies indicate than 98 percent of radiation-induced cancers within the nuclear weapons complex have occurred at dose levels below existing maximum safe thresholds.

(7) Existing information indicates that State workers' compensation programs do not provide a uniform means of ensuring adequate compensation for the types of occupational illnesses and diseases that relate to the employees at those sites.

(8) To ensure fairness and equity, the civilian men and women who, over the past 50 years, have performed duties uniquely related to the nuclear weapons production and testing programs of the Department of Energy and its predecessor agencies should have efficient, uniform, and adequate compensation for beryllium-related health conditions and radiation-related health conditions.

(9) On April 12, 2000, the Secretary of Energy announced that the Administration intended to seek compensation for individuals with a broad range of work-related illnesses throughout the Department of Energy's nuclear weapons complex.

(10) However, as of October 2, 2000, the Administration has failed to provide Congress with the necessary legislative and budget proposals to enact the promised compensation program.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) a program should be established to provide compensation to covered employees;

(2) a fund for payment of such compensation should be established on the books of the Treasury;

(3) payments from that fund should be made only after—

(A) the identification of employees of the Department of Energy (including its predecessor agencies), and of contractors of the Department, who may be members of the group of covered employees;

(B) the establishment of a process to receive and administer claims for compensation for disability or death of covered employees;

(C) the submittal by the President of a legislative proposal for compensation of such employees that includes the estimated annual budget resources for that compensation; and

(D) consideration by the Congress of the legislative proposal submitted by the President; and

(4) payments from that fund should commence not later than fiscal year 2002.

(1) The types of compensation and benefits, including lost wages, medical benefits, and any lump-sum settlement payments, to be provided under the compensation program.

(2) Any adjustments or modifications necessary to appropriately administer the compensation program under subtitle B.

(3) Whether to expand the compensation program to include other illnesses associated with exposure to toxic substances.

(4) Whether to expand the class of individuals who are members of the Special Exposure Cohort (as defined in section 3621(14)).

(b) ASSESSMENT OF POTENTIAL COVERED EMPLOYEES AND REQUIRED AMOUNTS.—The President shall include with the proposal for legislation under subsection (a) the following:

(1) An estimate of the number of covered employees that the President determines were exposed in the performance of duty.

(2) An estimate, for each fiscal year of the compensation program, of the amounts to be required for compensation and benefits anticipated to be provided in such fiscal year under the compensation program.

SEC. 3614. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 3103(a), $25,000,000 may be used for purposes of carrying out this title.

(b) COMPENSATION FUND.—There is hereby authorized to be appropriated $250,000,000 to the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Fund established by section 3612.

SEC. 3623. EXPOSURE IN THE PERFORMANCE OF DUTY.

(a) BERYLLIUM.—A covered beryllium employee shall, in the absence of substantial evidence to the contrary, be determined to have been exposed to beryllium in the performance of duty for the purposes of the compensation program if, and only if, the covered beryllium employee was—

(1) employed at a Department of Energy facility; or

(2) present at a Department of Energy facility, or a facility owned and operated by a beryllium vendor, because of employment by the United States, a beryllium vendor, or a contractor or subcontractor of the Department of Energy; during a period when beryllium dust, particles, or vapor may have been present at such facility.

(b) CANCER.—An individual with cancer specified in subclause (I), (II), or (III) of section 3621(9)(B)(ii) shall be determined to have sustained that cancer in the performance of duty for purposes of the compensation program if, and only if, the cancer specified in that subclause was at least as likely as not related to employment at the facility specified in that subclause, as determined in accordance with the guidelines established under subsection (c).

(c) GUIDELINES.—(1) For purposes of the compensation program, the President shall by regulation establish guidelines for making the determinations required by subsection (b).

(2) The President shall establish such guidelines after technical review by the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health under section 3624.

(3) Such guidelines shall—

(A) be based on the radiation dose received by the employee (or a group of employees performing similar work) at such facility and the upper 99 percent confidence interval of the probability of causation in the radioepidemiological tables published under section 7(b) of the Orphan Drug Act (42 U.S.C. 241 note), as such tables may be updated under section 7(b)(3) of such Act from time to time;

(B) incorporate the methods established under subsection (d); and

(C) take into consideration the type of cancer, past health-related activities (such as smoking), information on the risk of developing a radiation-related cancer from workplace exposure, and other relevant factors.

(d) METHODS FOR RADIATION DOSE RECONSTRUCTIONS.—(1) The President shall, through any Federal agency (other than the Department of Energy) or official (other than the Secretary of Energy or any other official within the Department of Energy) that the President may designate, establish by regulation methods for arriving at reasonable estimates of the radiation doses received by an individual specified in subparagraph (B) of section 3621(9) at a facility specified in that subparagraph by each of the following employees:

(2) The Secretary of Health and Human Services and the Secretary of Energy shall each make available to researchers and the general public information on the assumptions, methodology, and data used in establishing radiation doses under subsection (d). The actions taken under this paragraph shall be consistent with the protection of private medical records.

(2) The President shall make appointments to the Board in consultation with organizations with expertise on worker health issues in order to ensure that the membership of the Board reflects a balance of scientific, medical, and worker perspectives.

(3) The President shall designate a Chair for the Board from among its members.

(b) DUTIES.—The Board shall advise the President on—

(1) the development of guidelines under section 3623(c);

SEC. 3626. DESIGNATION OF ADDITIONAL MEMBERS OF SPECIAL EXPOSURE COHORT.

(a) ADVICE ON ADDITIONAL MEMBERS.—(1) The Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health under section 3624 shall advise the President whether there is a class of employees at any Department of Energy facility who likely were exposed to radiation at that facility but for whom it is not feasible to estimate with sufficient accuracy the radiation dose they received.

(2) The advice of the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health under paragraph (1) shall be based on exposure assessments by radiation health professionals, information provided by the Department of Energy, and such other information as the Advisory Board considers appropriate.

(3) The President shall request advice under paragraph (1) after consideration of petitions by classes of employees described in that paragraph for such advice. The President shall consider such petitions pursuant to procedures established by the President.

(b) DESIGNATION OF ADDITIONAL MEMBERS.—Subject to the provisions of section 3621(14)(C), the members of a class of employees at a Department of Energy facility may be treated as members of the Special Exposure Cohort for purposes of the compensation program if the President, upon recommendation of the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health, determines that—

(1) it is not feasible to estimate with sufficient accuracy the radiation dose that the class received; and

(2) there is a reasonable likelihood that such radiation dose may have endangered the health of members of the class.

(c) ACCESS TO INFORMATION.—The Secretary of Energy shall provide, in accordance with law, the Secretary of Health and Human Services and the members and staff of the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health access to relevant information on worker exposures, including access to Restricted Data (as defined in section 11 y. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2014(y)).

SEC. 3627. SEPARATE TREATMENT OF CHRONIC SILICOSIS.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—The Congress finds that employees who worked in Department of Energy test sites and later contracted chronic silicosis should also be considered for inclusion in the compensation program. Recognizing that chronic silicosis resulting from exposure to silica is not a condition unique to the nuclear weapons industry, it is not the intent of Congress with this title to establish a precedent on the question of chronic silicosis as a compensable occupational disease. Consequently, it is the sense of Congress that a further determination by the President is appropriate before these workers are included in the compensation program.

(b) CERTIFICATION BY PRESIDENT.—A covered employee with chronic silicosis shall be treated as a covered employee (as defined in section 3621(1)) for the purposes of the compensation program required by section 3611 unless the President submits to Congress not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act the certification of the President that there is insufficient basis to include such employees. The President shall submit with the certification any recommendations about the compensation program with respect to covered employees with chronic silicosis as the President considers appropriate.

(c) EXPOSURE TO SILICA IN THE PERFORMANCE OF DUTY.—A covered employee shall, in the absence of substantial evidence to the contrary, be determined to have been exposed to silica in the performance of duty for the purposes of the compensation program if, and only if, the employee was present for a number of work days aggregating at least 250 work days during the mining of tunnels at a Department of Energy facility located in Nevada or Alaska for tests or experiments related to an atomic weapon.

(d) COVERED EMPLOYEE WITH CHRONIC SILICOSIS.—For purposes of this title, the term ''covered employee with chronic silicosis'' means a Department of Energy employee, or a Department of Energy contractor employee, with chronic silicosis who was exposed to silica in the performance of duty as determined under subsection (c).

(e) CHRONIC SILICOSIS.—For purposes of this title, the term ''chronic silicosis'' means a nonmalignant lung disease if—

(1) the initial occupational exposure to silica dust preceded the onset of silicosis by at least 10 years; and

(2) a written diagnosis of silicosis is made by a medical doctor and is accompanied by—

(A) a chest radiograph, interpreted by an individual certified by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health as a B reader, classifying the existence of pneumoconioses of category 1/1 or higher;

(B) results from a computer assisted tomograph or other imaging technique that are consistent with silicosis; or

(C) lung biopsy findings consistent with silicosis.

SEC. 3628. COMPENSATION AND BENEFITS TO BE PROVIDED.

(a) COMPENSATION PROVIDED.—(1) Except as provided in paragraph (2), a covered employee, or the survivor of that covered employee if the employee is deceased, shall receive compensation for the disability or death of that employee from that employee's occupational illness in the amount of $150,000.

(2) A covered employee shall, to the extent that employee's occupational illness is established beryllium sensitivity, receive beryllium sensitivity monitoring under subsection (c) in lieu of compensation under paragraph (1).

(b) MEDICAL BENEFITS.—A covered employee shall receive medical benefits under section 3629 for that employee's occupational illness.

(c) BERYLLIUM SENSITIVITY MONITORING.—An individual receiving beryllium sensitivity monitoring under this subsection shall receive the following:

(1) A thorough medical examination to confirm the nature and extent of the individual's established beryllium sensitivity.

(2) Regular medical examinations thereafter to determine whether that individual has developed established chronic beryllium disease.

Following is explanatory language on H.R. 5408, as introduced on October 6, 2000.

References in the following to a provision of the conference agreement refer to that provision in H.R. 5408.

SUMMARY STATEMENT OF CONFERENCE ACTION

The conferees recommend authorization for the Department of Defense for procurement, research, and development, test and evaluation, operation and maintenance, working capital funds, military construction and family housing, weapons programs of the Department of Energy, and the civil defense that have budget authority implications of $309.9 billion.

SUMMARY TABLE OF AUTHORIZATIONS

The defense authorization act provides authorizations for appropriations but does not generally provide budget authority. Budget authority is provided in appropriations acts.

In order to relate the conference recommendations to the Budget Resolution, matter in addition to the dollar authorizations contained in this bill must be taken into account. A number of programs in the defense function are authorized permanently or, in certain instances, authorized in other annual legislation. In addition, this authorization bill would establish personnel levels and include a number of legislative provisions affecting military compensation.

The following table summarizes authorizations included in the bill for fiscal year 2001 and, in addition, summarizes the implications of the conference action for the budget totals for national defense (budget function 050).

Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army

The budget request for the Army included $1.0 billion for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army.

The House bill would authorize no funding for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army, but contained a provision (sec. 106) that would authorize $877.1 million for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Defense, for destruction of the lethal chemical agents and munitions stockpile pursuant to section 1412 of the Department of Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 (Public Law 99–45) and destruction of chemical warfare materiel not covered by section 1412 of the Act, a decrease of $126.4 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize no funding for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army, but contained a provision (sec. 106) that would authorize $1.0 billion for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Defense.

The conferees agree to authorize $980.1 million for Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army, including $274.4 million for research and development, $105.7 million for procurement, and $600.0 million for operations and maintenance.

Section 1521(f) of title 50, United States Code, requires that funding for the chemical agents and munitions destruction program, including funds for military construction projects, shall be set forth in the budget of the Department of Defense as a separate account, and shall not be included in the budget accounts for any military department. The conferees expect that the Secretary of Defense will comply with these requirements in any future budget request for the chemical agents and munitions destruction program.

The conferees recognize that uncertainties in program requirements and execution create the potential for additional funding requirements that may have to be addressed during fiscal year 2001. The conferees encourage the Secretary to identify requirements for additional funds that may be required in fiscal year 2001 to ensure execution of the program and to make appropriate recommendations for reprogramming or other actions necessary to provide those funds at the earliest opportunity.

Chemical stockpile emergency preparedness project

The budget request for the chemical agents and munitions destruction program included $600,000 in procurement funds for minor equipment replacement and $66.7 million for chemical stockpile emergency preparedness program (CSEPP) operations and maintenance. The conferees note that funds provided for CSEPP in fiscal years 1999 and 2000 were subject to a decrease of approximately nine percent and eight percent, respectively, as a pro-rata share of the decrease to the chemical agents and munitions destruction account. Because of the potential impact of such reductions on the safety of those living and working near or on the chemical stockpile storage and destructions sites, the conferees direct that funding for CSEPP shall be at the requested level.

Non-stockpile chemical materiel project

The House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616) noted that an independent assessment of the non-stockpile project had raised several issues with respect to the project and recommended examination of project schedule and cost risks to quantify the potential risks, ultimate costs, and time required to complete the project. The report expressed the belief that these issues must be addressed before proceeding further with development and acquisition of integrated transportable treatment systems for non-stockpile chemical materiel. The conferees note that following submission of the fiscal year 2001 budget request, the project manager for chemical demilitarization, conducted a major review of the non-stockpile project, rebaselined the current project, and is considering the results of on-going analysis and non-stockpile cost containment efforts that could result in significant further changes to the project that would have both cost and schedule implications. The conferees direct that these issues, and planned and recommended changes to the non-stockpile chemical materiel project, schedule, and funding requirements be addressed in an addendum to the fiscal year 2000 annual report to Congress on the chemical demilitarization program to be submitted with the fiscal year 2002 budget request.

Destruction of non-stockpile chemical materiel in stockpile facilities

Section 141 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) amended subsection 1412(c) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1986 (Public Law 99–45) to allow non-stockpile chemical agents, munitions, or related materials specifically designated by the Secretary of Defense to be destroyed at stockpile facilities if the affected states have issued the appropriate permits. In the statement of managers accompanying the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000, the conferees stated the expectation that site specific decisions relative to the issue of such permits would be arrived at in accordance with review processes that permit the views of the local jurisdictions to be considered.

The conferees note that federal, state, and local environmental laws and regulations require the Army to obtain permits for construction and the conduct of operations at each of the chemical weapons destruction facilities that are specific to the particular disposal site and the proposed chemical destruction operations to be conducted at the site. The conferees also note that established procedures for the review and approval of such statements, assessments, and permits provide for periods of public review and comment, and opportunities for consideration of the views of the local jurisdictions.

The conferees further note that the Environmental Protection Agency has delegated to the individual states the authority to administer and enforce the hazardous waste disposal requirements relative to those sites, and consequently decisions to approve permits required for the construction and operation of the chemical stockpile demilitarization facilities and for destruction of non-stockpile material are reserved to the states in which those sites are located. The conferees reiterate that it is the intent of Congress that the views of local jurisdictions in which the sites are located are a major factor to be considered in the permit and review process and in any decision by state authorities regarding such permits.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2001 included an authorization of $7,963.9 million for Aircraft Procurement, Navy in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $8,205.8 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $8,686.0 million.

The conferees recommended an authorization of $8,394.3 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

F–16C aircraft

The budget request included no funding for the procurement of F–16C aircraft.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $51.7 million for the procurement of three block 50/52 F–16C aircraft, and would require the Department to combine $24.0 million of advance procurement funds appropriated in fiscal year 2000 for this purpose. The House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616) directed the Secretary of the Air Force to assign block 40 or later F–16 aircraft to Air National Guard fighter units whose capabilities have been downgraded as a result of the substitution of older block F–16 aircraft.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $51.7 million for the procurement of two F–16 block 50/52 aircraft, recognizing that the fiscal year 2000 funds were rescinded. The conferees agree to accept the Air Force proposal to upgrade the capability of Air National Guard fighter units, whose capabilities have been downgraded, with F–16C block 30 or better aircraft equipped with advanced targeting pods. The conferees understand that these advanced targeting pods are necessary to enable the aircraft to accomplish precision strike missions. The conferees expect the Air Force will provide an adequate number of these advanced targeting pods for Air National Guard units to support peacetime training and, when tasked, operational deployments.

C–17 aircraft

The budget request included $2.212 billion for the procurement of 12 C–17 aircraft under a multi-year program.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $41.0 million in response to an Air Force request for transfer to advance procurement, a total authorization of $2.171 billion.

C–17 advance procurement

The budget request included $266.8 million for advance procurement for the C–17 multi-year program.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $9.0 million, as follows:

(1) an increase of $41.0 million transferred from the C–17 aircraft program; and

MH–60 aerial refueling probes and 200 gallon fuel tanks

The budget request included $68.5 million for Procurement, Defense-wide, Special Operations Forces (SOF) rotary wing upgrades, but included no funding to continue the effort to upgrade the entire MH–60 fleet with aerial refueling probes and new, internal fuel tanks.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $18.9 million to procure and install the aerial refueling probes and 200 gallon fuel tanks required to complete the upgrade of the SOF MH–60 fleet.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million in Procurement, Defense-wide, for SOF rotary wing upgrades for the purpose of procuring and installing aerial refueling probes and 200 gallon fuel tanks to continue the upgrade of the SOF MH–60 fleet.

Special operations forces small arms and support equipment

The budget request included $11.8 million for Procurement, Defense-wide, Special Operations Forces (SOF) small arms and support equipment, but included no funding to continue the procurement of SOF body armor load carriage systems (BALCS), the modular integrated communications helmet (MICH), or the SOF peculiar modifications to the M–4 carbine (SOPMOD).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $21.7 million to procure approximately half of the equipment required to fully equip all SOF operators.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $12.4 million in Procurement, Defense-wide, SOF small arms and support equipment, including $4.9 million for BALCS, $2.5 million for MICH, and $5.0 million for SOPMOD.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Air Mobility Command

The conferees are aware that regional commanders in chief (CINCs) continue to highlight a requirement for improved strategic lift capabilities, which remains the most compelling deficiency that our CINCs face in meeting their responsibility to execute the National Military Strategy. The conferees are also concerned to note the recent statements that confirm our total airlift capability is insufficient to execute the National Military Strategy. The conferees note that the Joint Chiefs of Staff Mobility Requirements Study of Fiscal Year 2005 (MRS–05) will not take into account certain fact-of-life changes in airlift requirements, specifically the transformation by the Army. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to deliver an analysis to the congressional defense committees by March 15, 2001. This analysis should use MRS–05 results and fiscal year 2000 readiness statistics for the C–141, C–5, and C–17 fleets. The analysis should determine readiness levels that are required to execute the National Military Strategy, and should explore alternatives to existing aircraft stationing plans for both active and reserve component airlift forces that are available to support existing lift requirements.

Intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance programs

It is clear to the conferees that the Department of Defense (DoD) will place increasing reliance upon intelligence, surveillance and reconnaissance (ISR) programs in future operations. Experience in supporting DoD operations, including recent experience in the Balkans, has shown that relatively small numbers of ISR forces will be in high demand to provide information superiority. DoD has identified this information superiority as a ''critical enabler'' in the ongoing transformation of the Department.

The Department has identified shortages of some of these ''high demand/low density'' assets in various reports. The conferees are also aware that the Department has conducted and has underway studies on various pieces of the ISR puzzle, many at request of Congress.

The various reports of ''lessons learned'' from Kosovo operations, the fiscal year 2001 budget request, and the unfunded priority lists for fiscal year 2001 identified some specific fixes to specific problems. What is less clear is whether the Department, in view of these ''lessons learned'', has attempted to provide an overarching vision for ISR forces, to include sustaining and modernizing the current force, and improving ISR capabilities in the future.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide an analysis concurrent with the submission of the fiscal year 2002 budget request, that:

(1) evaluates the current ISR capability and forces;

(2) identifies those ISR capabilities and forces that need to be sustained and modernized;

(3) enumerates those capabilities that need to be created or enhanced to ensure that ISR forces can contribute to achieving the information superiority for the transformed military forces; and

(4) itemizes how the budget and the Future Years Defense Program supports these needs.

LPD–17 amphibious ships

The budget request included $1.5 billion for procurement of two San Antonio-class LPD–17 amphibious ships: LPD–21 and LPD–22. In addition, the budget request included $20.7 million for advance procurement for two San Antonio-class LPD–17 amphibious ships.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees fully support the LPD–17 program and recognize the requirement to deliver these ships to the Navy and Marine Corps as soon as possible to support a key element of split amphibious ready group operations and the Marine Corps operational maneuver from the sea (OMFTS) concept.

Concerns regarding LPD–17 first ship design completion prior to transition to production led to congressional reassessment of the LPD–17 procurement request. The reassessment centered on the question of whether delays in the start of production of the lead ship would translate into schedule delays for subsequent ships, LPD–21 and LPD–22. This reassessment, in light of overall national defense budget realities, led to a shift in appropriations procurement strategy for LPD–21 and LPD–22.

However, subsequent to passage of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2001, the following significant actions occurred which led authorization conferees to conduct a further review of the progress of the LPD–17 program:

(1) The Navy commenced full rate construction of the lead ship, LPD–17, based on an extensive Production Readiness Review;

(2) Unprecedented levels of design completion were achieved prior commencing full production of LPD–17; and

(3) The Secretary of the Navy stated that fiscal year 2001 full funding for the LPD–21 and LPD–22 will permit the Navy to execute construction on schedule due to the achievement of 75 percent total ship design completion and 95 percent individual ship unit design completion prior to initial construction.

Based on this new information regarding significant program actions, the conferees agree to authorize the budget request.

The conferees expect the Navy to submit budget requests that include full funding for future San Antonio-class LPD–17 ships and adequate advance procurement to ensure that production continues at an efficient level and without interruption.

The conferees note with concern the adverse impact that reducing ship procurement has on the requirement for annual investment of $10.0 to $12.0 billion for ship construction necessary to maintain a Naval force structure of 300 ships. Therefore, the conferees support appropriation of additional procurement funds for LPD–17 in fiscal year 2001 should additional appropriations for the Department of Defense become available.

Multipurpose individual munition

The conferees believe the capabilities represented by the multipurpose individual munition (MPIM) system are critical to future requirements associated with the national military strategy. The conferees are concerned with recent actions taken by the Secretary of the Army to begin termination of the MPIM program after a significant investment and an extensive research and development effort. The Army has noted that the system has not met specified weight requirements and has historically suffered from technical and performance difficulties. While the conferees believe that most of the technical issues can be resolved, weapon system weight appears to be the compelling reason for program termination. The conferees believe, however, in light of the fact there is no other system in the inventory to fulfill MPIM requirements, no clarity on the final weight alternatives, and no program exists to meet these requirements, the Army should not terminate the MPIM program until these facts are reviewed.

The conferees agree with Army requirements documents that suggest there are clear and compelling needs to field a system, such as MPIM, to support soldiers for either combat or peacekeeping missions. Therefore, the conferees expect the Secretary of the Army to conduct a final, thorough review of the status of this program, alternatives to the status quo, and provide a plan to the congressional defense committees, no later than January 30, 2001, on how these requirements will be met as soon as practicable.

Shipbuilding overview

The conferees note that on June 26, 2000, the Secretary of Defense delivered to Congress the long-range shipbuilding report required by section 1013 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65).

The conferees agree that the report provides a framework for discussion of new ship construction plans necessary to maintain the number of ships required to carry out the national security strategy through fiscal year 2030. The report of the Secretary concludes that a steady state building rate of 8.7 ships annually is required to maintain at least 306 ships. The Secretary's report states that, ''. . . the annual funding required to sustain the force . . . will require an average of $14 billion per year.'' The report of the Secretary also acknowledges the discrepancy between: (1) the requirement to buy 8.7 new construction ships annually to maintain at least 306 ships; and (2) according to the Secretary's report, ''. . . the President's Budget for FY 2001–2005 which funds an average of 7.8 ships.''

The conferees note two deficiencies in the report of the Secretary. Consistent with the 1999 attack submarine study developed by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the report of the Secretary uses a larger nuclear attack submarine (SSN) force structure of 55 SSNs, versus the original Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) goal of 50 SSNs. However, the shipbuilding plan in the report does not achieve a force level of 18 Virginia-class SSNs that the CJCS report states is required in fiscal year 2015 to counter the technologically pacing threat. The shipbuilding plan in the report would only provide 16 Virginia-class submarines by fiscal year 2015.

The second flaw in the report of the Secretary is its supposition that a delay in required annual investments is possible due to the size of the fleet and the average age of the ships in the fleet.

The Secretary's report fails to assess the risks associated with having to ramp-up to a higher level of investment later in the planning period. The report discusses risks associated with deviation from the long-range shipbuilding plan, but focuses primarily on the shipbuilding industrial base. There is no discussion of the risks associated with pursuing the shipbuilding plan's uneven investment strategy, particularly a plan that defers near-term investment and requires that the Navy double the annual shipbuilding procurement rate by fiscal year 2013 just to support the currently envisioned force structure. Whereas the report acknowledges that there may be additional future requirements for ships (i.e. for ballistic missile defense and sea-based land attack), it does not include an evaluation of the risks of not including the additional ships in the shipbuilding plan.

The conferees are concerned with the gap between the requirement stated in the long-range shipbuilding plan and the ships included in recent budget requests submitted to Congress by the President. Unfortunately, the Secretary's long-range shipbuilding report does not provide a clear plan to maintain the force structure recommended in the report, required to carry out the national security strategy. The conferees expect the Secretary of Defense to address these concerns in the fiscal year 2002 budget request.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Authorization of appropriations (secs. 101–106)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 101–107) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 2001 funding levels for procurement for the Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, Air Force, Defense-Wide Activities, Defense Inspector General, Chemical Demilitarization Program, and the Defense Health Program.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

Subtitle B—Army Programs

Multiyear procurement authority (sec. 111)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 111) that would authorize the Secretary of the Army to enter into a multiyear procurement contract for the M2A3 Bradley fighting vehicle, the UH–60 Blackhawk helicopter, and, acting as executive agent for the Department of the Navy, the CH–60 Knighthawk helicopter.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 111).

The Senate recedes.

The conferees agree that the Secretary of the Army shall certify that the M2A3 Bradley fighting vehicle has successfully completed the initial operational test and evaluation and milestone III review prior to awarding the multiyear contract.

Increase in limitation on number of bunker defeat munitions that may be acquired (sec. 112)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 112) that would amend section 116 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103–337) to increase the quantity of bunker defeat munitions by 2,500 that the Army is authorized to procure.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Reports and limitations relating to Army transformation (sec. 113)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 112) that would require the Secretary of the Army to provide reports on the process associated with the development of an objective force and the fielding of an interim force for the Army transformation initiative. The provision also required the Secretary of the Army to conduct a comparative evaluation of interim armored vehicles (IAV) to be selected for the fielding of interim brigade combat teams (IBCT) with equipment already in the Army inventory.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of the Army to conduct an evaluation, as described in the conference agreement, at a level to be determined in conjunction with the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation prior to the obligation of funding for a third IBCT.

The conferees strongly support efforts designed by the Chief of Staff of the Army to transform the service into a lighter, more lethal, and survivable force able to deal effectively with the wide range of national security challenges that will face our nation in the 21st Century. The conferees look forward to receiving a well-defined road map that lays out the course of the Army transformation initiative through fiscal year 2012. The conferees continue to be concerned about the level of funding provided to the Army by the Department of Defense in support of the transformation initiative. The conferees do not understand how the Secretary of Defense can assert his support for the Army initiative while providing inadequate funding to facilitate the transformation process.

The conferees would expect the evaluation called for in the conference agreement to illustrate differences in capabilities that new IAVs may provide when compared to vehicles the Army currently has fielded. The conferees expect the Army to provide a plan to conduct a comparative evaluation, which will be subject to the approval of the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation prior to execution.

The conferees understand the IBCT force is designed to operate across the full spectrum of conflict. Current Army plans call for the first IBCT to be evaluated at the Joint Readiness Training Center in a range of environments largely focused on low intensity conflict and peacekeeping. The conferees believe it is important that the Army also plan and conduct an operational evaluation of these forces in a high intensity conflict environment. The Chief of Staff of the Army has highlighted a critical requirement for a new force that is able to quickly deploy with greater lethality and survivability than our light forces possessed during Operation Desert Shield when the 82nd Airborne Division was quickly deployed in response to Iraqi forces moving south toward Saudi Arabia. An operational evaluation of IBCTs in this type of an environment would facilitate an understanding of the overall capabilities that these forces possess to meet this type of challenge. The conferees, therefore, direct the Army to evaluate the capabilities of IBCTs in a high intensity combat environment and provide a report on the demonstrated combat capabilities these forces possess.

Subtitle C-Navy Programs

CVNX–1 nuclear aircraft carrier program (sec. 121)

The budget request included $21.9 million for advance procurement and advance construction of long lead time components for CVNX–1.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to operate one squadron of SH–2G aircraft in the Navy in fiscal year 2001. The conferees direct that the Navy fully man and equip the SH–2G aircraft in a manner consistent with normal fleet operations.

V–22 cockpit aircraft voice and flight data recorders (sec. 129)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1037) that would require the Secretary of Defense to require all V–22 aircraft to be equipped with state-of-the-art cockpit voice and flight data recorders.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees recommend that appropriate measures be taken to ensure that the design, integration, and use of these recorders take into account the security of potentially sensitive tactical information.

Subtitle D—Air Force Programs

Annual Report on the B–2 bomber (sec. 131)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 131) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide an annual report on the operational status and technology insertion plans for the B–2 bomber and would repeal the requirement for an annual report on B–2 production contained in section 112 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991 (Public Law 101–189).

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 131) that would repeal the requirement for an annual report on B–2 production contained in section 112 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide an annual report on: (1) the capability of the B–2 bomber to carry out assigned missions; (2) ongoing and planned technology efforts to improve B–2 capabilities; (3) new technologies to meet any expanded threats; and (4) a fiscally-phased program for each of these technology efforts in three funding scenarios. The funding scenarios include the President's budget, the President's budget plus funding for the Department of Defense unfunded priority list, and maximum executable funding consistent with the need to maintain the B–2 in an operationally ready status. The provision would also repeal the requirement for an annual report on B–2 production contained in section 112 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Years 1990 and 1991.

Report on modernization of Air National Guard F–16A units (sec. 132)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1070) that would express the sense of the Senate that certain Air National Guard units were flying F–16A aircraft without the upgrades that would allow them to be effectively deployed to contingency theaters of operation, and that the Air Force should provide a plan to Congress on how these units could be modernized.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of the Air Force to submit a report to Congress on how Air National Guard units flying F–16A aircraft will be modernized and upgraded.

Tactical High Energy Laser

The budget request included no funding to complete development and testing of the Tactical High Energy Laser (THEL) program.

The House bill would authorize $5.0 million in PE 63308A for mobile THEL development.

The Senate amendment would authorize $15.0 million in PE 63308A to support continued THEL testing and deployment preparation activities.

The conferees agree to authorize $15.0 million in PE 63308A to support continued THEL development and testing.

The conferees note that the current THEL configuration lacks the mobility to be a truly effective operational system. Therefore, the conferees agree that, of the funds authorized to be appropriated for THEL, up to $5.0 million may be made available to evaluate and develop technologies that would support eventual development of a mobile THEL system.

Emergency preparedness training

The budget request included no funding in PE 23610A for domestic preparedness against weapons of mass destruction.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 23610A to continue the development for Selected Reserve component forces of training programs for response to, and management of, the consequences of potential terrorism involving weapons of mass destruction.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 23610A.

High energy laser research and development

The budget request included no funding in defense-wide science and technology accounts for high energy laser (HEL) research and development, no funding in PE 62307A for solid state laser research, $10.5 million in PE 62605F for solid state laser research, no funding in the Navy science and technology accounts for solid state laser research, no funding in PE 62111N for free electron laser (FEL) research, and $14.5 million in PE 65803A for the High Energy Laser System Test Facility (HELSTF).

The House bill included approval of the Department of Defense Laser Master Plan of March 24, 2000, and emphasized greater attention to, and priority for, HEL research and development (R&D) investments. Consequently, the House bill would authorize $10.0 million in PE 61108D and $25.0 million in PE 62890D8Z for HEL research and development, an increase of $10.0 million in PE 62307A for solid state laser research, the budget request in PE 62605F, an increase of $5.0 million in PE 62111N for FEL development, and an increase of $5.0 million in PE 65803A for research and development activities at HELSTF.

The Senate bill would authorize the budget request in PE 62307A, the budget request in PE 65803A for HELSTF, an increase of $5.0 million in PE 62111N for FEL development, the budget request in PE 62605F, and no funding in defense-wide science and technology accounts for HEL research and development. As described elsewhere in this report, the Senate bill also included approval of the Department of Defense Laser Master plan.

The conferees agree to authorize $30.0 million in PE 62890D8Z for HEL research and development, the budget request in PE 62307A, the budget request in PE 62605F, an increase of $5.0 million in PE 62111N for FEL development, an increase of $13.0 million in PE 65803A at HELSTF, of which $10.0 million is for solid state laser research and $3.0 million is for research and development activity at HELSTF. The conferees, as described elsewhere in this report, endorse the implementation of the management plan developed by the Secretary of Defense and submitted to Congress on March 24, 2000. The conferees continue to support service management of laser programs, but recognize the central role of the Office of the Secretary of Defense in developing and implementing an overall strategy to manage laser research effectively.

Funding actions related to the Tactical High Energy Laser, the Airborne Laser, and Space Based Laser are described elsewhere in this report.

Advanced tank armament system

The budget request included $118.1 million for advanced tank armament system research and development requirements.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $40.0 million to support Army transformation initiative test and evaluation requirements.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $150.0 million for Army transformation research and development requirements.

Defense manufacturing technology program

The budget request contained a total of $149.1 million for the Department of Defense manufacturing technology (ManTech) program, including $29.3 million in PE 78045A for the Army ManTech program, $59.6 million in PE 78011N for the Navy program, $53.1 million in PE 78011F for the Air Force program, and $7.1 million in PE 78011S for the Defense Logistics Agency's ManTech program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $10.0 in PE 78045A for the Army manufacturing technology program, an increase of 10.0 million for the Navy ManTech program, and an increase of $4.5 million in PE 78011F in the Air Force program.

The Senate would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 78045A for the Army ManTech program, an increase of $10.0 million in PE 78011N for the Navy ManTech program, and an increase of $3.8 million in PE 78011F for the Air Force ManTech program, as recommended in the House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616).

Section 217 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) established as the overall purpose of the Department of Defense ManTech program the development and application of advanced manufacturing technologies and processes to reduce acquisition and support costs, and manufacturing and repair cycle times for defense weapons systems. Section 217 emphasized the program's focus on the development and application of advanced manufacturing technology and processes that are essential to national defense, including repair and re-manufacturing operations, in support of systems commands, depots, air logistics centers, and shipyards. Section 217 also required the participation of the prospective users of the technology in the establishment of requirements for, and the periodic review of advanced manufacturing technologies or processes. Finally, Section 217 also included the requirement for an assessment of program effectiveness, cost sharing, and technology and process implementation plans in the annual update of the program's five-year plan. In the statement of managers accompanying the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (H. Rept. 105–736), the conferees expressed the expectation that additional funds provided for the manufacturing technology program would be awarded using competitive procedures established by the military departments for their respective manufacturing technology programs.

The conferees direct the Comptroller General to conduct an assessment of the implementation of the manufacturing technology program within the Department of Defense with regard to the achievement of the goals established for the program and execution of the program in accordance with the provisions of the public law and the intent of Congress, as stated in the statement of manager's language with regard to competitive award procedures. The conferees direct the Comptroller General to submit the results of that assessment to the congressional defense committees by March 31, 2001.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2001 contained an authorization of $8,476.7 million for Navy, Research and Development in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $8,834.5 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $8,665.9 million.

The conferees recommended an authorization of $8,715.3 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Biodegradable polymers

The budget request included no funding for biodegradable polymers (PE 62121N).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.25 million in PE 62121N to aid in the development of polymer membrane methods for treating graywater (kitchen, shower, and cleaning solution), blackwater (sewage), and bilge water (oily contaminants) to acceptable levels prior to shipboard release.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $1.25 million in PE 62121N for biodegradable polymers.

Torpedoes and unmanned undersea vehicles

The budget request included $35.0 million in PE 62633N for undersea warfare weapons technology development.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request for improvements to torpedoes and unmanned undersea vehicles.

The conferees agree to an increase of $2.0 million in PE 62633N for development of improvements for current and future torpedoes and unmanned undersea vehicles.

DP–2 thrust vectoring system proof-of-concept demonstration

The budget request included $39.7 million in PE 63217N for air systems and weapons advanced technology development and $9.0 million for NATO research and development. The budget request did not include funds for continuation of the DP–2 thrust vectoring system proof-of-concept demonstration. The budget request did include $6.4 million for the vectoring extremely short takeoff and landing (ESTOL) control tailless operation research (VECTOR) program, an international cooperative research program between the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany, as follows: $4.1 million in PE 63217N and $2.3 million in PE 63790N.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $9.5 million in PE 63217N to continue the DP–2 development program leading to a proof-of-concept demonstration of a one-half scale flight test vehicle.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $4.5 million for DP–2 demonstration in PE 63790N.

The conferees direct the Secretary of the Navy to provide an assessment of the program progress, plans and funding requirements for completion of the flight-test demonstration to the congressional defense committees with the submission of the fiscal year 2002 budget request.

The conferees are aware that a funding shortfall has developed in the VECTOR program. Given the cooperative nature of this program, along with the substantial benefits to future carrier aviation development, the conferees urge the Secretary of the Navy to review the program funding deficiencies and, if necessary, request a reprogramming action.

Virtual test bed for reconfigurable ship

The budget request included no funding for a virtual test bed for a reconfigurable ship.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63508N for a virtual test bed for advanced electrical ship systems.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 63508N for a virtual test bed for a reconfigurable ship.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 63508N for a virtual test bed for a reconfigurable ship, as recommended in the House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616) and the Senate report accompanying S. 2549 (S. Rept. 106–292).

Fleet health technology and occupational lung disease

The budget request included $10.1 million in PE 63706N for medical development, including $4.8 million for the fleet health technology program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63706N, including $500,000 to establish an occupational lung disease assessment program to determine if the incidence of sarcoidosis among naval personnel could be attributable to service aboard Navy ships. The House bill also noted and expressed concern about the reduction in the Department of the Navy's fleet health technology program from previous years' funding levels and in the priority given to the medical and occupational health and safety of Navy and Marine Corps personnel.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees note that recent developments of immune therapies by investigators at the Naval Medical Research Center have been shown to prevent the rejection of transplants without the need for continuous immunosuppressive drugs. The ability to transplant massive tissue segments without rejection could revolutionize the treatment of combat casualties who suffer significant tissue loss or organ damage from blast, missile fragments, or burns. Results obtained from testing in the laboratory show promise and the Chief of Naval Research has initiated a program to capitalize on these newly developed methods of treatment. The conferees believe that the further development of these therapies and confirmation of these therapies in definitive clinical trials could have profound effects upon the treatment of combat casualties and of civilians with organ failure.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63706N for fleet health technology for the Navy's program for the development of new immune strategies and procedures for tissue transplantation for the treatment of combat casualties with massive tissue loss.

The conferees also agree to authorize an increase of $500,000 in PE 63738D for the conduct of the occupational lung disease assessment as discussed in the House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616).

Common towed array

The budget request included $113.3 million in PE 63561N for advanced submarine systems development, including $4.5 million for the development of advanced towed array technology for submarines and surface ships.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $10.2 million in PE 63561N to accelerate the development and demonstration of advanced towed array systems for surface ships and submarines. The House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616) indicated that these additional funds were to be particularly focused on developing multiple-line and fiber optic affordable towed array technology that could result in high gain, volumetric towed arrays with significantly improved sonar system performance for both submarines and surface vessels.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million in PE 63561N to accelerate the development and demonstration of advanced towed array systems for surface ships and submarines. The conferees agree that these funds are not being designated for a specific program effort or contractor program, but that the Navy should use the additional funds to continue the efforts as described in the House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616).

Advanced land attack missile

The budget request included $19.8 million for research and development of the advanced land attack missile (ALAM) in PE 63795N.

The House bill and the Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees note that the House report accompanying H.R. 1401 (H. Rept. 106–162) directed the Secretary of the Navy to report to the congressional defense committees the program plan and funding requirements for development of an advanced land attack missile (ALAM) system for the DD–21 land attack destroyer and other Naval combatants with the submission of the fiscal year 2001 budget request. The conferees also note the letter from the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition and Technology) to the Chairman, House Armed Services Committee, dated August 25, 1999, which stated that the Navy would pursue a multi-team industry competition for development of ALAM, and the Milestone 0 Acquisition Decision Memorandum, dated February 22, 2000, that designated the ALAM as a major defense acquisition program. The conferees further note that the Navy's ALAM program plan and funding included in the fiscal year 2001 budget request provide for completion of an ALAM analysis of alternatives and entry into the program risk and reduction phase in fiscal year 2001, competition and early prototyping by three to four contractors leading to an ALAM down-select/''fly-off'' by the end of fiscal year 2003, engineering and manufacturing development, initial procurement, and delivery of the ALAM system to the fleet in early fiscal year 2009 for the DD–21 Zumwalt-class destroyer.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $10.8 million in PE 63795N for ALAM based on information made available to the conferees subsequent to passage of the House bill and the Senate amendment. The conferees place a high priority on completing the analysis of alternatives to determine the appropriate course of action for providing Naval fire support. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Navy to report to the congressional defense committees concurrent with the submission of the fiscal year 2002 budget request on recommended revisions to the ALAM program plan and the funding required to deploy a system as soon as technically feasible.

Joint strike fighter

The budget request included $131.6 million in PE 63800N and $129.5 million in PE 63800F to complete the demonstration and validation (DEMVAL) phase for the joint strike fighter (JSF) program. The budget request also included $296.0 million in PE 64800N and $299.5 million in PE 64800F to initiate the engineering and manufacturing development (EMD) phase for the JSF.

The House bill would authorize the budget request and contained several provisions related to JSF discussed elsewhere in this conference agreement.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $212.1 million in PE 63800N and an increase of $212.1 million in PE 63800F to extend the DEMVAL phase. The Senate amendment would also authorize a decrease of all funding requested for the EMD phase, $296.0

million in PE 64800N and $299.5 million in PE 64800F, due to slips in program schedule. The Senate amendment contained a JSF provision discussed elsewhere in this conference agreement.

The conferees agree to authorize an overall decrease of $168.0 million in the JSF program, as follows:

(1) an increase of $111.5 million in PE 63800N;

(2) an increase of $113.5 million in PE 63800F;

(3) a decrease of $194.7 million in PE 64800N; and

(4) a decrease of $198.3 million in PE 64800F.

The conferees remain concerned about the readiness of the JSF program to enter the EMD phase, and note that significant delays in the schedule, particularly the flight program for the short take-off, vertical landing (STOVL) variant of the JSF, further increase the technical risk for entry into the EMD phase. A JSF provision discussed elsewhere in this conference agreement addresses conferee concerns surrounding the technical risk of premature entry into EMD.

The conferees are also concerned about the apparent pattern of additional contractor funding required to sustain the current DEMVAL activities of the program. Since the JSF program is potentially one of the largest acquisition programs in the Department of Defense, both competing contractors in this winner-take-all competition realize the significance of winner selection. However, the conferees are opposed to the requirement for industry to make additional, unreimbursed investments in the JSF program beyond existing contractual agreements. The conferees view the additional DEMVAL funding as necessary to provide for the execution of those projects presented in the budget request on the extended schedule. The conferees expect that risk mitigation projects, including the alternate engine, will be funded to the levels presented in the budget request.

Nonlethal research and technologies

The budget request included no funding for nonlethal research and technologies in PE 63851M.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $8.0 million for nonlethal research and technologies in PE 63851M.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $4.0 million in PE 63851M. Of the increased amount, $2.0 million will be used to develop a program in nonlethal environmental effects and remediation as recommended in the Senate report accompanying S. 2549 (S. Rept. 106–292).

Power node control centers

The budget request included no funding for power node control centers (PNCC) for integrating shipboard power functions such as switching, conversion, distribution, and system operation and protection.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63508N for PNCC.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 64300N for PNCC.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 64300N for PNCC.

Advanced food service technology

The budget request included no funding for research and development of technologies that could lead to manpower reductions resulting from altering food service operations on ships.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 64300N for advanced food service technology testing.

The conferees agree to authorize a an increase of $2.0 million in PE 64307N for advanced food service technology testing.

F–14 tactical reconnaissance

The budget request included $1.2 million for operational systems development of the F–14 aircraft.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $7.0 million in aircraft procurement for the integration and demonstration of a commercial synthetic aperture radar (SAR) in the F–14 tactical airborne reconnaissance pod system (TARPS). This demonstration was intended to mitigate the risk associated with the development of a SAR capability for the shared airborne reconnaissance program (SHARP).

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $9.0 million in PE 25667N for a similar purpose.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $9.0 million in PE 25677N to demonstrate the military utility of a tactical SAR reconnaissance capability by modifying and integrating non-developmental SAR technology into the F–14 TARPS.

The conferees note that this effort is specifically intended to mitigate the risk associated with providing an all-weather capability for SHARP. The conferees agree that these funds are not being designated for a specific contractor's program. The conferees also agree that, if the technology proves attractive during the risk mitigation program, the Navy should select SAR technology for the SHARP application using appropriate competitive procedures.

Marine Corps ground combat/supporting arms systems

The budget request included $22.1 million for Marine Corps ground combat and supporting arms systems research and development requirements.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $17.3 million in PE 63635M to support efforts by the Marine Corps to evaluate the potential that the high mobility artillery rocket system (HIMARS) might have to meet critical Marine Corps fire support requirements.

The Senate amendment would authorize an identical increase.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $17.3 million in PE 26623M to support Marine Corps plans to evaluate the ability of HIMARS to address deficiencies in organic fire support for Marine Corps forces ashore.

Tactical unmanned aerial vehicles

The budget request included $113.1 million for tactical unmanned aerial vehicles (TUAVs).

The House bill would authorize an increase of $1.0 million for the joint operational test bed (JOTB), and an increase of $7.0 million for TUAV multi-function, self-aligned gate array (MSAG) technology.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $1.0 million for the JOTB and an increase of $7.0 million for TUAV MSAG technology, a total authorization of $121.1 million in PE 35204N.

The conferees note that the Joint Forces Command is tasked with ensuring interoperability among military forces. The conferees are aware that the Joint Requirements Oversight Council endorsed the tactical control system (TCS) to provide this interoperability among unmmanned aerial vehicles (UAVs), and that the Joint Forces Command has recently established the JOTB to develop this capability, using a TCS and two Predator UAVs. The conferees strongly support UAV interoperability, the establishment of the JOTB, and the use of TCS and Predator UAVs to achieve this goal.

The conferees are also encouraged by results of MSAG antenna technology testing, and reaffirm their support for the ongoing MSAG advanced concept technology demonstration (ACTD). The JROC approved this ACTD based on the recommendation of the operational commanders in chief, who rated the MSAG effort number one of twelve candidates. The conferees are aware that the Navy may consider withdrawing its sponsorship of the ACTD. The conferees believe that the MSAG ACTD program should move forward. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to ensure that no change in the ACTD content or schedule will be effected by a change in sponsorship of the program.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2001 contained an authorization of $13,685.6 million for Air Force, Research and Development in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $13,677.1 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $13,897.3 million.

The conferees recommended an authorization of $13,779.1 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

XSS–10 micro-satellite technology demonstration

The budget request included no funding to complete and launch the XSS–10 micro-satellite technology demonstration.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize $12.0 million in PE 63401F to complete, launch, and operate the XSS–10 technology demonstration satellite.

The conferees agree to authorize $8.0 million in PE 62602F to complete the XSS–10 technology demonstration satellite. The conferees are aware that additional funds may be required to fully fund the launch and operation of the XSS–10. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to reallocate the funds to complete the XSS–10 satellite and support its launch and operation from within funds authorized to be appropriated in PE 62601F and PE 63401F, as necessary.

Specialty aerospace metals

The budget request included $72.8 million for PE 62102F for applied research, $21.7 million in PE 63112F for advanced development of materials technologies for aerospace systems, and $53.1 million in PE 78011F for the Air Force's manufacturing technology program. The budget request included $57.7 million in 62601F for space technology.

The House bill would authorize a total increase of $15.0 million as follows: $5.25 million in PE 62102F; $5.25 million in PE 63112F; and $4.5 million in PE 78011F to establish an integrated program for the development and demonstration of special aerospace materials and materials manufacturing processes. The House bill would also encourage the Secretary of the Air Force to establish a continuing program for special aerospace metals and alloys as an integral part of the Air Force's science and technology and manufacturing technology programs.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 62601F for the aluminum aerostructures initiative.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $1.8 million in PE 62601F for the aluminum aerostructures and an increase of $12.8 million for aerospace specialty metals, of which $1.2 million would be used for the aluminum aerostructures initiative. The $12.8 million would be distributed as follows: $4.5 million in PE 62102F; $4.5 million in PE 63112F; and, $3.8 million in PE 78011F.

The conferees note the continuing need for advances in special aerospace metals and metal alloys for aircraft and space vehicle structures, propulsion, components, and weapon systems. Both the Navy and the Air Force are seeking access to materials that are lightweight, high strength, high performance, and capable of withstanding the stressing environments that are experienced by aerospace systems, and for the development and optimization of manufacturing processes for these materials. The conferees support the Air Force's efforts to develop and demonstrate a methodology for producing advanced aluminum aerostructures generating improved affordability, maintainability, and enhanced performance of current and future Air Force systems within the Advanced Aluminum Aerostructures initiative.

The conferees request that the Secretary of the Air Force assess requirements for advanced special aerospace metals and alloys and to report to the congressional defense committees on the plan for meeting those requirements with the submission of the fiscal year 2002 budget request.

Space-based radar

The budget request included $129.0 million for the Discoverer II space-based radar (SBR) program.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize $30.0 million for continued SBR risk reduction and technology development.

The conferees strongly support an effort to develop the technologies and operational concepts that could enable deployment of an SBR system to perform ground moving target indications (GMTI), digital terrain elevation data (DTED) collection, and synthetic aperture radar (SAR) imaging. The conferees believe that such a system may offer a cost-effective way to provide valuable new technical capabilities while complementing, and perhaps replacing, the capabilities of other existing systems. The conferees believe that the Secretary of Defense should evaluate options for eventual development and deployment of an operational SBR system. In addition, the conferees believe that the Air Force, U.S. Space Command, the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, and the National Reconnaissance Office should continue to work together to mature the necessary technologies, conduct an analysis of alternatives, and develop operational concepts to provide better information for this evaluation and to support a potential deployment.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to prepare an SBR roadmap to guide this overall effort. The roadmap should address several concerns: (1) the operational requirements for space-based GMTI, DTED, and SAR capabilities; (2) the relationship of an SBR system to other current and planned air and space-based assets that might provide such capabilities; (3) the technologies needed to enable an affordable and operationally effective SBR system; and (4) if a requirement for an SBR system is established, whether a space-based technology demonstrator would be cost-beneficial prior to an SBR system acquisition. The conferees direct the Secretary to submit a report to the congressional defense committees on the SBR roadmap by May 1, 2001.

Space maneuver vehicle

The budget request included no funding for the Space Maneuver Vehicle (SMV).

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $15.0 million in PE 63401F for the SMV program.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.5 million in PE 63401F for acquisition of the ''second tail number'' X–40B demonstrator.

The conferees note that SMV development has been funded through congressional increases and are disappointed at the failure of the Secretary of the Air Force to request funding or provide efficient management for this program, notwithstanding repeated statements by Air Force and U.S. Space Command leaders indicating the importance of this program. The conferees urge the Air Force to request funding in future budget requests to support expeditious development.

The conferees also note that the full benefit of the Military Spaceplane concept, including the SMV, will not be realized without a low-cost reusable lower stage booster. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to provide a report to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 2001, on concepts, critical development paths, and applications for such a booster, and how it could fit into an overall Military Spaceplane system.

Space Based Laser program

The budget request included $137.7 million for the Space Based Laser (SBL) program, $63.2 million in the Air Force budget and $74.5 million in the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization budget.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $30.0 million in PE 63876F to support acceleration of the SBL Integrated Flight Experiment (IFX) and the SBL integrated test facility.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 63876F to support acceleration of the IFX and the integrated test facility.

Electronic warfare development

The budget request included $58.2 million in PE 64270F for electronic warfare development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $17.7 million in PE 64270F to continue development of the precision location and identification (PLAID) program, and an increase of $7.0 million in PE 64270F to increase the suitability of the miniature air-launched decoy (MALD) for operational use.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 226) that would authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 64270F for continued development of PLAID.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $8.6 million in PE 64270F, a total authorization of $49.6 million in electronic warfare development, as follows:

(1) an increase of $10.0 million for PLAID;

(2) an increase of $1.2 million for MALD; and

(3) a decrease of $19.8 million to reflect reapplication of prior year funds available due to Air Force withdrawal from the common missile warning system (CMWS) program.

Satellite control network

The budget request included $58.6 million in PE 35110F for satellite control network research and development.

The House bill would authorize the budget request and would require that $1.5 million be used for the Space Battlelab to evaluate the utility of commercial antenna networks for satellite control.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize the budget request without the restriction contained in the House bill.

The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to conduct an evaluation of commercial technologies and services relevant to modernization of the satellite control network. The conferees believe that commercial technology may offer significant possibilities for modernizing the network, including its antennas, in a cost effective manner. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to submit a report on his evaluation to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 2001.

The budget request included no funding in PE 35207F for manned reconnaissance systems.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $2.0 million to complete a multi-link antenna system demonstration program on RC–135 aircraft.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $9.5 million to demonstrate the potential to integrate the data from an offboard intelligence sensor controlled by RC–135 Combat Sent aircraft into the Combat Sent processing system. This concept would involve adapting the expeditionary common automatic recovery system (ECARS) to control and precisely position the offboard platform to technically extend the reach of the Combat Sent aircraft into denied areas during a conflict. This concept would also provide for the safe, unassisted recovery of the offboard sensor. Since this data can be critical to responding to emerging threats during high intensity operations, the conferees believe that this effort should be supported.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2001 contained an authorization of $10,238.2 million for Defense-Wide, Research and Development in the Department of Defense.

The House bill would authorize $11,077.8 million.

The Senate amendment would authorize $11,043.1 million.

The conferees recommended an authorization of $10,681.7 million. Unless noted explicitly in the statement of managers, all changes are made without prejudice.

Chemical and Biological Defense Program

The budget request included $835.8 million for the Chemical and Biological Defense Program (CBDP), including $473.9 million for procurement and $361.9 million for research and development.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $4.5 million in PE 61384BP, including $3.0 million for chemical and biological defense basic research and $1.5 million for chemical agent detection via optical computing; and $5.0 million in PE 62384BP for chemical and biological defense applied research.

The Senate amendment would authorize increases for the following chemical and biological defense program activities: $2.0 million for chemical agent detection via optical computing and $3.0 million for thin film technology in PE 61384BP; $8.0 million to accelerate development of a light-weight, man portable hybrid sensor using thin film technology in PE 62384BP; $2.7 million for the chemical-biological individual sampler, $6.4 million for the consequence management information system, $3.5 million for the evaluation of advanced materials that contain reactive technologies to be added to textiles for protection against chemical and biological warfare agents, and $8.5 million for the Small Unit Biological Detector in PE 63384BP; $2.1 million for a next generation anthrax vaccine in PE 64384BP; $2.5 million for the procurement of thirteen enhanced nuclear, biological, and chemical (NBC) kits; and $1.8 million for the procurement of equipment in support of Weapons of Mass Destruction, Civil Support Teams (WMD–CST).

The conferees agree to authorize an increase for the following chemical and biological defense program activities: $6.7 million in PE 61384BP for chemical and biological defense basic research, including $3.0 million for chemical and biological defense, $2.0 million for chemical agent detection via optical computing, and $1.7 million for thin film technology in PE 61384BP; $4.8 million in PE 62384BP for a hybrid sensor suite using thin film technology; and $9.55 million in PE 63384BP, including $2.0 million for the chemical and biological individual sampler, $4.0 million for the consequence management information system, $2.8 million for evaluation of advanced materials containing reactive materials that may be added to textiles for protection against chemical and biological warfare agents, $750,000 for the small unit biological detector, and $1.0 million for second generation anthrax vaccine development. The conferees also agree to authorize increases of $2.5 million for procurement of NBC Defense Enhancement kits for Marine Expeditionary Units and $900,000 for procurement of equipment for Weapons of Mass Destruction, Civil Support Teams.

The conferees support initiatives for research, development, and demonstration of advanced chemical and biological defense technologies and systems. The conferees note, however, the growing tendency to fund individual chemical and biological defense projects directly within the budget accounts of the military services. The conferees emphasize that this practice violates the intent and purpose of Congress in establishing the consolidated chemical and biological defense program. The conferees direct the Under Secretary of Defense (Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics) to ensure that such initiatives compete for funding within the appropriate program elements of the joint chemical and biological defense program and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency's biological defense program on the basis of technical merit and the anticipated ability of the technology or system to meet joint and service unique needs.

Nuclear sustainment and counterproliferation technologies

The budget request included $230.9 million in PE 62715BR for nuclear sustainment and counterproliferation technologies, including $60.7 million for weapons effects technologies.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $3.0 million for thermionics for space powered systems and a decrease of $20.0 million to adjust for program growth in PE 62715BR.

The Senate amendment would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.5 million for thermionics for space powered systems and a decrease of $21.0 million to adjust for program growth in PE 62715BR.

The conferees note that partnerships between universities, government laboratories, and industry accelerate the testing, development, and fielding of blast mitigation technologies for protection of U.S. missions and military installations abroad. The conferees strongly support such partnerships and encourage the Defense Threat Reduction Agency to continue to provide funding for this important initiative.

Blast mitigation testing

The budget request included $10.0 million in PE 63122D for blast mitigation testing.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63122D for blast mitigation testing.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63122D to accelerate the testing and certification of blast mitigation effects technology.

The conferees note these funds would allow the Department of Defense to accelerate the testing and analysis of building components and improve building design standards and guidelines for use in new construction applications.

Chemical and biological detectors

The budget request included $300,000 in PE 63122D to continue to develop aerogel and fiber optic based technologies for chemical and biological collector and detector prototypes.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 63122D for aerogel and fiber optic based technologies for chemical and biological collector and detector prototypes.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63122D for aerogel and fiber optic based technologies for chemical and biological collector and detector prototypes.

Facial recognition access control technology

The budget request included no funding in PE 63122D for facial recognition access control technology.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $4.0 million in PE 63122D for facial recognition access control technology.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 63122D for facial recognition access control technology.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 63122D for facial recognition access control technology.

The conferees note these funds will be used to further the efforts of the Department of Defense to develop, test and evaluate this surveillance, identification, and access control technology, and allow prototype development and testing.

Technologies for detection and transport of pollutants attributable to live-fire activities

The budget request included $9.0 million for research, development, testing, and evaluation (RDT&E) related to the environmental remediation of unexploded ordnance (UXO), $5.0 million in PE 63716D for development of UXO technology through the Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program (SERDP) and $4.0 million in PE 63851D for demonstration/validation through the Environmental Security Technology Certification Program (ESTCP).

The House bill would authorize $3.0 million within SERDP for the Texas Regional Institute for Environmental Studies (TRIES).

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 222) that would authorize an increase of $5.0 million in SERDP (PE 63716D) for the development of technologies to map the presence and transport of constituents related to live-fire activities. The Senate amendment would also authorize an increase of $10.0 million in ESTCP (PE 63851D) for demonstration/validation of UXO remediation technology.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

The conferees agree to authorize $2.0 million within SERDP (PE 63716D) for TRIES. The conferees also agree to authorize an increase of $4.0 million for ESTCP (PE 63851D) and $4.0 million for SERDP (PE 63716D) to conduct RDT&E activities that will begin to address the full range of issues associated with the detection and remediation of constituents attributable to military live-fire training activities that impact a variety of hydrogeological areas.

The Department of Defense (DOD) has informed the conferees that its potential liability for remediation of unexploded ordnance may exceed $100.0 billion. It is evident to the conferees that increased emphasis in this area is essential.

Specifically, the conferees expect that the increased funding will be used for the research, development, and demonstration/validation of viable, cost effective technologies to detect, analyze, and map the presence and transport of live-fire constituents. Demonstration/validation of these technologies shall to the extent practicable be conducted at sites where detection and possible remediation of live-fire constituents is underway. Such efforts will help the military departments meet the extraordinary environmental detection and remediation challenges at active, inactive, closed, transferred, and transferring ranges. Performance measures shall be established for all technologies developed with these additional funds to facilitate implementation and utilization by the DOD.

The budget request included $56.971 million in PE 63832D for the Joint Wargaming Simulation Management Office.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.0 million in PE 63832D for the development and installation of a weapon of mass destruction attack-effects-response assessment capability for the Joint Task Forces-Civil Support that was recently established as part of the U.S. Joint Forces Command (USJFCOM). This program will allow USJFCOM, along with government agencies, state, and local authorities, to model chemical, biological or radiological incidents from the initial detection of the attack and initial effects through the medical response to the incident in an integrated, interoperable manner.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63832D for the development and installation of a weapon of mass destruction attack-effects-response assessment capability at USJFCOM.

Ballistic Missile Defense Organization funding and programmatic guidance

The budget request included approximately $4.5 billion for the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO), including Procurement, Research, Development, Test and Evaluation (RDT&E) and military construction.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $669.6 million in RDT&E funding for BMDO, including transfers of funds from the Air Force for the Space Based Infrared System (SBIRS) Low and the Airborne Laser Program.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $240.0 million in RDT&E funding for BMDO.

The conferees agree to authorize an overall increase of $264.1 million for BMDO RDT&E, as specified below. The conferee's recommendations for BMDO military construction are provided elsewhere in this conference agreement. The conferees' recommendations regarding the Airborne Laser and SBIRS-Low programs are also provided elsewhere in this conference agreement.

SUPPORT TECHNOLOGY

The conferees continue to support BMDO's efforts in the area of wide bandgap electronic materials and devices. To support this important technology effort, the conferees recommend an increase of $2.0 million in PE 62173C and an increase of $10.0 million in PE 63173C.

The conferees continue to support the Atmospheric Interceptor Technology (AIT) program to develop advanced interceptor kill vehicle technologies. The conferees recommend an increase of $9.0 million in PE 63173C to support the AIT program.

The conferees have supported BMDO's efforts to evaluate innovative and low-cost launch technologies. The conferees recommend an increase of $6.5 million in PE 63173C to support low cost launch technology, including the Excalibur concept. The conferees also agree to authorize an increase of $6.5 million in the Air Force budget (PE 63401F) for low cost launch, including the Scorpius concept.

The conferees note that the Director of BMDO has identified a need for additional funding to develop robust adaptive algorithms to counter evolving and off-nominal ballistic missile threats. The conferees recommend an increase of $2.8 million in PE 63173C to support such algorithm development.

The conferees remain concerned that funding for innovative ballistic missile defense technology projects continues to be insufficient to support BMDO's future needs. The conferees recommend that the Director of BMDO identify funds throughout the Future Years Defense Program sufficient to support a technology program that hedges against rapidly evolving missile threats.

NATIONAL MISSILE DEFENSE

The budget request included approximately $1.8 billion for the National Missile Defense (NMD) program, including Procurement and RDT&E. The conferees note that the Director of BMDO has identified a number of areas in which additional funds could be utilized to enhance risk reduction and testing activities. The Director identified $129.0 million in critical risk reduction unfunded requirements. Therefore, the conferees recommend an increase of $129.0 million in PE 63871C for NMD risk reduction.

The conferees understand that BMDO is considering entering into a competition for the NMD X-band ground-based radars (GBR) that would be deployed following the initial deployment of the GBR site in Alaska. The conferees direct the Director of BMDO to conduct an analysis of the advantages and disadvantages of a competitive approach to follow-on GBR development and deployment, and provide a report to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 2001. The conferees also agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million in PE 63871C to support initial technology development and evaluation for the NMD capability–2 (C–2) radar.

The conferees are concerned by potential delays in the NMD program associated with the development of the ground-based interceptor (GBI) booster. The conferees believe that BMDO should evaluate options for reducing technical and schedule risks associated with the GBI, including the development of a backup booster option involving proven technologies. The conferees direct the Director of BMDO to submit a report to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 2001, on plans for mitigating the booster problems.

NAVY THEATER WIDE

The conferees continue to support the Navy Theater Wide (NTW) program and urge the Secretary of Defense to accelerate this important program to the extent permitted by the pace of technological development. The conferees agree to authorize an overall increase of $80.0 million in PE 63868C to accelerate the NTW program and to begin work on an advanced technology kill vehicle. Of this amount, the conferees agree to authorize the use of $65.0 million for acceleration of the Standard Missile–3 (SM–3) and to support continuation of NTW radar competition.

The conferees believe that BMDO should immediately begin to define and develop the necessary technology for the SM–3 block II kill vehicle. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $15.0 million in PE 63868C to support the development of advanced NTW kill vehicle concepts employing light-weight non-toxic pumped-propulsion and active/passive sensor technology.

The conferees are concerned that the Navy has relied on congressional increases in the NTW program to support development of radar technologies and systems to support the ballistic missile defense mission. The conferees note that neither the Navy nor BMDO has budgeted for Navy missile defense radar requirements, as identified in the Navy's radar roadmap. The conferees believe that acceleration of the NTW program may be problematic unless these requirements are clearly defined. Such efforts are too important to remain unfunded in upcoming budget requests. The conferees believe that radar upgrades are primarily a Navy responsibility because they must be thoroughly integrated across the range of Navy missions, and that such upgrades cannot be funded exclusively through BMDO or through congressional increases. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to define the appropriate management and funding responsibilities between the Navy and BMDO regarding the development and acquisition of radars that support the Navy ballistic missile defense mission, and to ensure that appropriate funds are requested to support these activities.

MEDIUM EXTENDED AIR DEFENSE SYSTEM

The budget request included $63.2 million for the Medium Extended Air Defense System (MEADS). The conferees recommend a decrease of $9.7 million in PE 63869C due to growth in the MEADS program.

BMD TECHNICAL OPERATIONS

The conferees continue to support BMDO's effort to develop a theater missile defense surrogate target based on a liquid fuel engine. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.5 million in PE 63874C to continue this effort.

The conferees continue to support the Army Space and Missile Defense Command's Advanced Research Center (ARC) and agree to authorize an increase of $6.0 million in PE 63874C in support of the ARC.

The conferees support BMDO's efforts to improve missile defense technologies and capabilities against advanced theater ballistic missile threats. One promising area of research is in optical data and sensor fusion for detection and discrimination of advanced threats, missile plumes, and penetration aids using advanced image processing and optical discrimination algorithms. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $3.0 million in PE 63874C for BMDO to continue this work.

BMDO has succeeded in employing wideband information technologies to link geographically dispersed radar and missile hardware-in-the-loop test facilities to improve ground testing of theater missile defense systems and increase the probability of successful flight testing. The conferees believe that this approach can be used in other areas, including battle management and command, control, communications, and intelligence (C3I). Therefore, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $9.0 million in PE 63874C to support continued development of a wide-band information infrastructure for BMDO.

INTERNATIONAL COOPERATIVE PROGRAMS

The budget request included $117.0 million for BMDO International Cooperative Programs, including $81.2 million for Israeli Cooperative Projects and $35.8 million for the Russian-American Observation Satellites (RAMOS) program.

The conferees acknowledge that the budget request included $45.0 million to support continued acquisition of the Arrow Third Battery. The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 63875C to initiate the Arrow System Improvement Plan.

Defense imagery and mapping program

The budget request included $75.0 million in PE 35102BQ.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $22.0 million in PE 35102BQ: $4.0 million for Rome Laboratory moving target exploitation efforts; $3.0 million for the National Technology Alliance and the National Imagery and Mapping Agency (NIMA) Viewer development; and $15.0 million for the Geo-Synthetic Aperture Radar (GeoSAR) program.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $7.0 million in PE 35102BQ: $5.0 for the NIMA Viewer; and $2.0 million for the ''Smart Maps'' initiative.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $20.0 million in PE 35102BQ: $3.0 million for the development of a Commercial Mapping and Visualization Toolkit, which includes the NIMA Viewer concept; $15.0 million for the GeoSAR program; and $2.0 million for the ''Smart Maps'' initiative.

The conferees agree that the mapping and visualization toolkit development funds are not being designated for a specific contractor program, but that NIMA should use the additional funds to continue efforts to upgrade its commercial mapping and visualization toolkit, and give appropriate consideration to competitive commercial sources for conducting this work.

Special operations tactical systems development

The budget request included $133.5 million for special operations tactical systems development in PE11644BB. The budget request did not include funding to continue the development of many programs, including the MC–130 autonomous landing guidance system, the CV–22 terrain following radar upgrades, or the advanced lightweight grenade launcher.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $14.2 million in PE 11644BB, as follows: $9.2 million for the CV–22 terrain following radar improvements; and, $5.0 million for continued development of the MC–130 autonomous landing guidance system.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $5.6 million in PE 11648BB, Special Operations Forces operational enhancements, for the purpose of continuing research and development of the advanced lightweight grenade launcher.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $13.3 million in PE 11644BB, special operations tactical systems development to be distributed as follows: $4.5 million for the MC–130 autonomous landing guidance system; $6.0 million for the CV–22 terrain following radar upgrades; and, $2.8 million for the advanced lightweight grenade launcher.

The conferees also understand that there may be slippage in the CV–22 post initial operational capability block 10 changes. Additionally, the C–130 engine infrared suppression program has been canceled due to higher priority requirements. Therefore, the conferees agree to a reduction of $3.0 million for the CV–22 block 10 changes and a reduction of $5.0 million for the C–130 engine infrared suppression program.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Common imagery processor

The House report accompanying H.R. 4392, the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (H. Rept. 106–620), would direct that, of the amounts appropriated pursuant to that Act in PE 35208F and PE 35208N for the distributed common ground system (DCGS), no more than 25 percent could be obligated or expended until the Department of Defense submits a plan to the congressional defense and intelligence committees that details how the common imagery processor (CIP) will be integrated into the Navy imagery system (NAVIS) and how the NAVIS funcionality could be incorporated into the common imagery ground/surface system (CIGSS) structure.

The conferees agree that the Department should take full advantage of functions and capabilities already owned by the government. In general, the conferees do not support expenditure of funds to recreate existing capabilities absent compelling arguments. In this light, the conferees believe there is potential for integrating capabilities of the CIP, NAVIS, and CIGSS.

Therefore, the conferees direct the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Contol, Communications, and Intelligence, in consultation with the Director, National Imagery and Mapping Agency, to submit a plan to the congressional defense and intelligence agencies by March 15, 2001, which outlines an appropriate path for migrating tactical imagery programs, including the CIP, NAVIS, and CIGSS, to integrated solutions within the CIGSS architecture.

Defense Space Reconnaissance Program

The Defense Space Reconnaissance Program (DSRP) has served an important role in providing direct interactions between the National Reconnaissance Office (NRO) and operational military commanders and other elements of the Department of Defense. In recent years, however, the DSRP has become a less uniquely effective entity as overt NRO support to the military has increased and reduced classification barriers have greatly increased military customer knowledge of space-based systems. In fact, the NRO now maintains a Military Support Division, directed by a general officer tasked to interact directly with the military customers of the NRO.

The conferees understand that the Director of the NRO has recently recommended that the DSRP be reestablished as the budgetary mechanism for defense augmentation of NRO programs to meet tactical military needs. The conferees believe that this proposal merits careful consideration.

At the same time, the conferees believe that the Secretary of Defense needs to evaluate the overall role of the NRO in supporting tactical military forces. The conferees believe that the following issues must be addressed as part of an overall review of space intelligence support to the warfighter: (1) the appropriate role for the NRO to play in supporting military operations and exercises, such that the NRO does not duplicate unnecessarily the responsibilities and capabilities of organizations, such as the National Imagery and Mapping Agency, the National Security Agency, or U.S. Space Command that are specifically tasked to support their various military customers; (2) whether some or all of the funds and responsibilities currently included in the NRP, the DSRP, and the service Tactical Exploitation of National Capabilities (TENCAP) programs for supporting military operations and exercises should be consolidated; (3) whether a revitalized DSRP would be the best mechanism for giving the Unified Commands a role in determining future space intelligence and reconnaissance capability requirements and raising the visibility of space reconnaissance matters within the Department of Defense program planning and resource allocation process; and (4) the role of a revitalized DSRP in funding NRO system developments to satisfy unique military or service requirements.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide the congressional defense and intelligence committees a report by May 1, 2001, on his assessment and recommendations regarding these matters.

Future scout and cavalry system

The conferees have strongly supported the Army's future scout and cavalry system (FSCS) development effort in a joint program with the United Kingdom and are concerned to note actions taken by the Army to eliminate funding for the FSCS engineering and manufacturing development phase. As a result, funding for the Advanced Technology Demonstration (ATD) phase was eliminated in the fiscal year 2001 Department of Defense Appropriations Conference Report. The conferees note the Army has recently developed a plan to include FSCS technologies within its transformation efforts and recognize the FSCS ATD will provide a basis to evaluate the integration of land-system technologies through a platform demonstration. The conferees believe the FSCS program is well positioned to develop leap-ahead technologies for future land systems and support Army intentions to request reprogramming authority necessary to carry this program through the ATD phase of the development effort.

Modernized hellfire/common missile

The budget request included $5.0 million for the modernized Hellfire program to explore risk reduction opportunities. The conferees understand the Army is considering the possibility of moving toward a common chemical energy missile and that the modernized Hellfire program would serve as the baseline for this effort. The conferees fully support the Army's goal to reduce the different types of anti-tank missile systems in its future tactical inventory. However, this goal was not supported by a request for funds in the fiscal year 2001 budget. Therefore, the conferees direct the Army to ensure that fiscal year 2001 funds for the modernized Hellfire are used, in part, to initiate a program definition study to determine the potential of a common ground and air-to-ground missile. Furthermore, the conferees expect the Army to begin funding this effort in the fiscal year 2002 budget submission.

National Imagery and Mapping Agency pre-acquisition activities

Congress has repeatedly addressed the critical need to conduct thorough and effective pre-acquisition activities before embarking on a path to make the necessary improvements to the National Imagery and Mapping Agency's (NIMA) tasking, processing, exploitation, and dissemination (TPED) capabilities. The conferees agree that NIMA needs to conduct comprehensive pre-acquisition activities and will require substantial additional funds for this purpose.

The conferees believe that these pre-acquisition activities should accomplish several goals: (1) to apply new information technology and modern business practices across the imagery and geospatial enterprise, to include such concepts as federated management and migrating legacy systems based on proprietary software to an open systems architecture; (2) to develop a realistic program plan and acquisition strategy related to the role of NIMA, its oversight mechanisms, and its contractors, including the use of an overarching systems integration contract (perhaps along the lines of the National Missile Defense Lead Systems Integrator contract), unless the Department of Defense (DOD) can demonstrate that it would be more efficient and effective for the government to retain the integration role; (3) to develop a realistic plan to manage the transition of the current systems and personnel of the United States Imagery and Geospatial Information System (USIGS) to the new, modern architecture; (4) to ensure that all imagery and geospatial systems within DOD and other intelligence community agencies (including tactical programs, airborne systems, and commercial capabilities) are incorporated into an integrated imagery TPED architecture; and (5) to provide appropriate basis for migrating the TPED architecture from an imagery and geospatial TPED architecture to one capable of processing intelligence of multiple types (a so-called ''MULTI-INT'' architecture).

The conferees understand that the plan of the NIMA Director is to consider all options for TPED, to include making significant changes to the current architecture. The conferees agree that the review should be thorough, and that NIMA should retain only those previous architectural efforts and program planning that withstand fresh scrutiny. The conferees do not intend for NIMA to delay progress in important ongoing activities (including such programs as NIMA libraries and softcopy exploitation, now in the fielding phase) while the pre-acquisition effort is underway.

The conferees believe that direct and personal involvement by the Deputy Secretary of Defense and the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI) are necessary to ensure that the large resource investment to correct TPED deficiencies is properly managed and adequately supported by all DOD and Intelligence Community components. Therefore, the conferees request the Deputy Secretary and the DCI to direct all subordinate departments, agencies, and organizations to fully support NIMA TPED pre-acquisition activities. This must include providing overall guidance, developing concepts and system technical interfaces, and organizing and training intelligence providers and customers to maximize the imagery TPED functions. As noted above, the scope of this effort clearly must involve all imagery and geospatial information systems, including open-source systems. It should also include: all collection systems (spacecraft, aircraft, unmanned aerial vehicles, etc.); all tasking, data, storage, processing, exploitation, analysis, dissemination (including communications) and collaboration systems; and all databases and the specific interfaces. In short, this pre-acquisition effort should refine and define the end-to-end information management processes for U.S. imagery and geospatial data systems so that intelligence can be provided to all customers at all levels.

The conferees expect that the policy and programmatic knowledge gained and the system-level specifications that result from the pre-acquisition activity will be used to focus NIMA's TPED development and acquisition efforts. The conferees expect the Deputy Secretary of Defense and the DCI to develop a realistic TPED transition plan with rigorous cost assessments and to submit that plan to Congress concurrent with future budget requests.

The conferees recognize that the fiscal year 2001 budget request and the Future Years Defense Program (FYDP) reflected additional resources to satisfy TPED requirements. This reflects the first firm commitment by the Deputy Secretary of Defense that the Department would provide additional resources to support TPED modernization. Although the conferees recognize that better funding estimates will result from the pre-acquisition activities addressed above, the administration must continue near- and long-term efforts to identify funding commitments in the fiscal year 2002 budget request and the FYDP that match the critical requirements in this area.

In the near-term, the conferees believe that the Department should take a number of steps to ensure the TPED efforts begin efficiently and promptly. These actions should include the following:

(1) NIMA should establish a focused, capable, and empowered program office that:

(a) remains separate from ongoing acquisition efforts;

(b) reports directly to the NIMA corporate acquisition executive for the Director of NIMA; and

(c) maintains clear and agreed upon relationships with the management oversight staffs, partnering program offices, and customers.

(2) NIMA should modify the current TPED study contracts as necessary to develop or to assist the Department in developing the following:

(a) a NIMA enterprise-wide 2005-era vision for the imagery TPED architecture, as modernized by new information management technology and business practices;

(b) a 2005-era concept of operations for all products, services, and business operations;

(c) a range of architectural approaches for a 2005-era USIGS that would account for current and near-term systems, and that are designed to facilitate transition from the current architecture;

(d) an acquisition strategy and program plan that clearly outlines program management, including the role of the NIMA program office and use of a systems integrator, contracts for advisory and assistance services (CAAS), and federally funded research and development centers;

(e) a source selection strategy;

(f) draft interface control documents, interagency memoranda, and one or more requests for proposal (as determined by the acquisition strategy) with all reference documents, to include statements of objectives, requirements, and operational concepts;

(g) a draft transition plan for all segments of the imagery and geospatial architecture, both internal and external to NIMA; and

(h) cost estimates and budget profiles for complete life cycle costs.

(3) NIMA's plan to achieve the actions in item (2) above shall be reviewed by the Assistant Secretary of Defense for Command, Control, Communications, and Intelligence, and the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence for Community Management.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense, in coordination with the DCI, to take these actions by February 1, 2001, and submit a report by that date to the congressional defense and intelligence committees that describes the implementation of these actions.

Nuclear Detonation Detection System

The conferees note that the Nuclear Detonation (NUDET) Detection System (NDS) Electromagnetic Pulse (EMP) V sensors are currently scheduled to fly on the next generation Global Positioning System (GPS) Block IIF satellites. These sensors support the mission areas of Integrated Tactical Warning and Attack Assessment (ITWAAA), Treaty Monitoring, and Nuclear Force Management (NFM). The conferees recognize that these sensors are necessary to providing the Commander in Chief of U.S. Strategic Command with the robust battle damage assessment capability required to adequately advise the National Command Authority during Single Integrated Operations Plan (SIOP) execution. In addition, these sensors are critical for arms control monitoring and verification.

Therefore, the conferees support efforts to procure the NDS EMP V sensors in time to fly on the first GPS IIF satellites. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to ensure that there is no loss in sensor coverage.

Radar technology insertion program

The conferees understand that the Air Force recently conducted a review of the Joint Surveillance and Target Attack Radar System (JSTARS) acquisition program, and confirmed the requirement for the Radar Technology Insertion Program (RTIP). Conferees note that RTIP capability will offer a major enhancement to the current JSTARS fleet and strongly urge the Air Force to install RTIP into any JSTARS aircraft produced after RTIP goes into production.

Space launch ranges

The conferees are concerned that continuing to vest the Air Force with sole fiscal responsibility for the space launch ranges is increasingly problematic. The conferees note that several recent congressional hearings and governmental studies indicate that: (1) the Air Force is transitioning to use of commercial launch services and the commercial launch industry is, and will remain, the predominant user of these ranges; (2) because it does not recover the costs of its management, operation, and modernization of the ranges, the Air Force provides a substantial subsidy to the commercial launch industry, which is less justifiable as the commercial launch industry matures; (3) the Air Force has done an inadequate job of maintaining and modernizing the ranges, and inadequate funding for the ranges is causing equipment to become outdated; and (4) the commercial launch industry does not believe that the Air Force manages the ranges efficiently, often leading to costly launch delays.

The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to give consideration to expanding the sources of funding for range modernization, maintenance, and operations and to transition responsibility for range management, modernization, maintenance, and operations from the Air Force to joint responsibility between a combination of the Air Force, other state and federal agencies, and the commercial sector. The conferees believe that such approaches may offer the opportunities to improve both military and commercial launch capabilities.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Authorization of appropriations (secs. 201–202)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 201–202) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 2001 funding levels for all research, development, test, and evaluation accounts.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

Subtitle B—Program Requirements, Restrictions, and Limitations

Management of Space-Based Infrared System-Low (sec. 211)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 212) that would transfer during fiscal year 2001 the management authority over the Space-Based Infrared System (SBIRS) Low program from the Air Force to the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would delay the transfer of the SBIRS-Low program to BMDO until fiscal year 2002.

Joint strike fighter program (sec. 212)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 213) that would require the Secretary of Defense to certify to the congressional defense committees that the joint strike fighter (JSF) is technologically mature enough prior to allowing the JSF program to enter the engineering and manufacturing development (EMD) phase.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 215) that would require a report from the Secretary of Defense on the technical exit criteria for the JSF to enter EMD and on the impact of any changes the Department of Defense had made to the acquisition strategy. The Senate amendment would also provide a waiver of an amount of funds from the transfer authority ceiling in the event the Department decided to reprogram funds within the JSF program to support EMD activities.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide a report on the technical exit criteria for the JSF to enter EMD. The provision would require that, prior to entering EMD, the Secretary of Defense would have to certify to the congressional defense committees that the technical exit criteria have been met, that key technologies are sufficiently mature, and that the short takeoff and vertical landing variant of the design selected for EMD has accumulated at least 20 flight test hours. The provision would also provide a waiver of transfer authority ceiling in the event the Department were to decide that it needed to reprogram funds within the JSF program.

Fiscal year 2002 joint field experiment (sec. 213)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 211) that would require the Secretary of Defense to plan in fiscal year 2001, and execute in fiscal year 2002, a major joint field experiment. This experiment would include elements from all military services and special operations forces that represent equipment, organizations, and concepts intended to counter threats to U.S. national security in the year 2010 and beyond.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to submit to the congressional defense committees by March 1, 2001, a report on the concept plan for this joint field experiment that includes: (1) the objectives of the experiment; (2) participating forces; (3) experiment schedule and location(s); (4) funding requirements for each participating joint command, defense agency, and service component; and (5) identified shortfalls in funding required for the experiment that are not included in the fiscal year 2002 budget request for each of the participating joint commands, defense agencies, and service components.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $2.0 million in PE 63727N to facilitate the planning in fiscal year 2001 of this major joint field experiment to be executed in fiscal year 2002.

Nuclear aircraft carrier design and production modeling (sec. 214)

The budget request included $38.3 million in PE 64567N for aircraft carrier contract design. The budget request did not include funds specifically designated for converting nuclear aircraft carrier designs to a three-dimensional, computer-based system.

The House bill would authorize $5.0 million of the budget request to begin development of an aircraft carrier design product model for the CVNX.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 212) that would authorize an increase of $10.0 million in PE 64567N to develop an electronic product model of the CVNX–1 and applicable sections of CVN–77 nuclear aircraft carrier design. The Senate amendment would also direct the Navy to provide an analysis of the potential costs and benefits of extending this product model effort for use in supporting the Nimitz-class ships in the fleet.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize an increase of $8.0 million in PE 64567N to develop an electronic product model of the CVNX–1 and applicable sections of CVN–77. The amendment would also require the Secretary of the Navy to provide a report on the cost effectiveness of converting design data to an electronic form and developing a three-dimensional design product model for the CVNX class aircraft carrier.

DD–21 class destroyer program (sec. 215)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 213) that would authorize the Secretary of the Navy to pursue a technology insertion approach to DD–21 that would commence construction of the first DD–21 in fiscal year 2004 followed by a fiscal year 2009 delivery. The provision would also express the sense of Congress that there are compelling reasons to commence DD–21 construction in fiscal year 2004 followed by sequential construction of DD–21 destroyers until a total of 32 are built. The provision would further direct the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of the Navy to submit certain reports on DD–21.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Limitation on Russian American Observation Satellites program (sec. 216)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 219) that would prohibit the expenditure or obligation of funds for the Russian American Observation Satellites (RAMOS) program until 30 days after the Secretary of Defense submits to Congress a report concerning the protection of advanced military technology that may be associated with the RAMOS program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Joint Biological Defense Program (sec. 217)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 220) that would prohibit the obligation of funds to procure the vaccine for the biological agent anthrax until the Secretary of Defense makes a notification and delivers a report to the congressional defense committees.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would establish permissible actions related to the obligation of funds to procure the anthrax vaccine and would require the Secretary to report within seven days to the Congress all obligations in connection with the qualified procurement of anthrax vaccine with a value greater than $5.0 million.

The conferees note that the anthrax virus is only one of several biological agents Department of Defense officials have testified could pose a threat to military personnel. The conferees are concerned that the myriad issues associated with the production and acquisition of the anthrax vaccine may also apply to other biological warfare defense vaccine research, development, and procurement programs. It is incumbent on the Secretary to develop a plan, including milestones, for modernizing all vaccines used or anticipated to be used to immunize military personnel against biological agents. In the development of that plan, the Secretary should take such action, including procuring vaccines from more than one manufacturer, if necessary or appropriate, to ensure military personnel immunization policies and plans can be effectively implemented.

Section 1703 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103–160) required the Secretary of Defense to report annually on the status and plans of chemical and biological defense research, development and procurement programs. In the report to be submitted in calendar year 2001 and the subsequent three reports, the costs incurred by, and payments made to, each contractor or other entity engaged in the production, storage, distribution, or marketing of the anthrax vaccine administered by the Department of Defense should be provided. In the report to be submitted in calendar year 2001, the following information should be included: (1) an estimate and update of the life cycle costs of the anthrax vaccination program; (2) a description of the anthrax vaccine acquisition strategy; (3) an assessment of government requirements (defense and non-defense) for the anthrax vaccine; (4) an assessment of the financial and manufacturing ability of the manufacturer of the anthrax vaccine to meet government requirements; and (5) a description of any activity related to any anthrax vaccine license with significant implications for the Department of Defense.

Report on biological warfare defense vaccine research and development programs (sec. 218)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 221) that would direct the Secretary of Defense to report on the Department of Defense (DOD) program to develop and procure vaccines for biological warfare agents no later than February 1, 2001. The provision would require the Secretary to develop a design for a government-owned, contractor-operated (GOCO) vaccine production facility and provide a determination on the utility of such a facility to support civilian vaccine production, and an analysis of possible vaccine production for international use.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would modify the requirements of the report to include an estimated establishment cost and schedule for the GOCO facility, and an evaluation of the non-military use of such a facility on the production of vaccines for U.S. Armed Forces.

Cost limitations applicable to F–22 aircraft program (sec. 219)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 214) that would provide one percent relief on the engineering and manufacturing (EMD) development cost cap for the F–22 aircraft if the funds are required for testing, as certified by the Director of Operational Test and Evaluation (DOT&E) and the Undersecretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology, and Logistics (USD AT&L).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would provide one and one half percent relief on the EMD cost cap for the F–22 aircraft program, if the use of these funds is required for testing, as certified by DOT&E after consultation with USD AT&L. The amendment would also reestablish the EMD and production cost caps, as established by section 217 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85).

Unmanned advanced capability combat aircraft and ground combat vehicles (sec. 220)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 217) that would establish an initiative to promote the use of unmanned combat systems and technologies with the goal that, within 10 years, one-third of U.S. military operational deep strike aircraft will be unmanned and, within 15 years, one-third of all ground combat vehicles will be unmanned. The Senate amendment would authorize $200.0 million in research, development, test and evaluation in PE 62702E to accelerate the technologies that will lead to the development and fielding of remotely controlled air combat vehicles by 2010 and remotely controlled ground combat vehicles by 2015.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment.

The conferees support the need to strengthen Army, Navy, and Air Force efforts to exploit the significant potential of unmanned combat aircraft and ground vehicles to effectively accomplish many critical combat missions while avoiding risk to aircraft and ground vehicle crews. The amendment reaffirms the goal established in section 217 of the Senate amendment of developing and fielding advanced capability unmanned combat aircraft and ground vehicles such that one-third of the operational deep strike aircraft in the year 2010 and one-third of the ground combat vehicles acquired through the Army's future combat system development program by the year 2015 could be unmanned.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees that describes the development and demonstration efforts of the services together with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) that will be required to support the established goals. The report shall be submitted in conjunction with the fiscal year 2002 budget request and will include the acquisition strategy required to achieve the established goals, including necessary funding, analysis of alternatives, and potential contributions to, or impacts to current and planned deep strike combat aircraft and ground combat vehicles.

The conferees recommend that efforts to develop and to demonstrate unmanned combat aircraft and ground combat vehicles should be focused initially on the highest risk mission areas. For aircraft, this mission area is defined as those early entry deep strike missions for suppression of enemy air defenses and other highest priority targets. The amendment also addresses commonality between the Air Force and Navy programs. The conferees expect that significant air vehicle systems commonality and interoperability between the Navy and Air Force variants is achievable, specifically in the areas of electronics, avionics, datalinks, and operating stations. The conferees also recognize the importance of low observable (LO) designs in future systems. To that end, Air Force should proceed with development of air vehicle three and validate the LO design of the unmanned combat air vehicle (UCAV) system. Accordingly, the Navy should fully explore the advantages of LO technology in their design of the unmanned combat air vehicle (UCAV-N) system.

In its analysis of alternatives, the Navy should examine a force of 10 to 20 UCAVs per carrier airwing. For ground combat vehicles, the capabilities currently anticipated for the Army's new objective force currently under development in collaboration with DARPA offer the most appropriate focus for application of unmanned vehicle capability.

To accelerate efforts toward achieving these aggressive goals, the conferees authorize an increase of $100.0 million in PE 62702E, as follows: $50.0 million for the Air Force's UCAV program; $25.0 million for the Navy's UCAV-N program; and, $25.0 million for the Army-DARPA joint program on the Future Combat System (FCS). The conferees expect DARPA and the services to work the additional funding, responsibilities, and timelines into the existing memorandum of agreements for these three programs.

The conferees recognize that an increase of $46.0 million is authorized in PE 63005A for enabling technologies for the FCS, as noted elsewhere in this report. The request for the additional funds came from the Department of the Army's unfunded priority list. The conferees note that the Army transformation program hinges on the success of FCS as it is the centerpiece of the service's new ground warfare strategy. The conferees urge the Department to fully fund this critical program in the future.

Global Hawk high altitude endurance unmanned aerial vehicle (sec. 221)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 216) that would require a demonstration of the Global Hawk high altitude endurance unmanned aerial vehicle (HAE UAV) in a counter-drug surveillance scenario.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to initiate this demonstration no later than March 1, 2001. The provision would also direct the Secretary to conduct the demonstration and the parallel radar development effort using funds authorized to be appropriated for Drug Interdiction and Counter-drug Activities, Defense.

Army space control technology development (sec. 222)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 218) that would authorize $20.0 million for the Kinetic Energy Anti-Satellite (KE-ASAT) program, $5.0 million for other Army space control technology development, and prohibit the obligation of funds for other Army space control technology until funds for the KE-ASAT program have been released to the KE-ASAT program manager.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would specify that, of the funds authorized to be appropriated for Army space control technology development, $3.0 million shall be available for the KE-ASAT program.

Subtitle C-Ballistic Missile Defense

Funding for fiscal year 2001 (sec. 231)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 231) that would authorize funds for the National Missile Defense Program, including funds for the Space-Based Infrared System (SBIRS)-Low program.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would authorize funds for the National Missile Defense program, but not the SBIRS-Low program. Matters related to SBIRS-Low are addressed elsewhere in this report.

Reports on ballistic missile threat posed by North Korea (sec. 232)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 233) that would require that, not later than two weeks after the next flight test by North Korea of a long-range ballistic missile, or 60 days after enactment of this Act, the President shall submit to Congress a report on the North Korean ballistic missile threat to the United States.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require that, not later than two weeks after the next flight test by North Korea of a long-range ballistic missile, the President shall submit to Congress a report on the North Korean ballistic missile threat to the United States.

Plan to modify ballistic missile defense architecture (sec. 233)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 234) that would require the Director of the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization to develop a plan to adapt ballistic missile defense systems and architectures to counter threats to the United States, U.S. Armed Forces deployed outside the United States, and other U.S. national security interests that are posed by ballistic missiles with ranges of 1,500 to 2,500 miles.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Management of Airborne Laser program (sec. 234)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 235) that would designate the Airborne Laser (ABL) program as a program element of the ballistic missile defense program managed by the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of the Air Force to obtain the approval of the Director of BMDO before making any change to the ABL funding profile, schedule, or technical requirements, and for the Director of BMDO, in coordination with the Secretary of the Air Force, to submit a report to the congressional defense committees on the role of the ABL in current U.S. missile defense architecture.

As addressed elsewhere in this conference agreement, the conferees recommend a funding increase of $85.0 million for the ABL program, the amount needed in fiscal year 2001 to keep the Program Definition and Risk Reduction aircraft on schedule to conduct the first lethal demonstration during fiscal year 2003. The conferees direct the Secretary of the Air Force to spend these additional fiscal year 2001 funds consistent with the fiscal year 2000 program plan. Absent the development of technical problems, the conferees believe that the ABL program should remain on schedule for a lethal demonstration in fiscal year 2003 and initial operational capability in fiscal year 2008.

Subtitle D—High Energy Laser Programs

High energy laser programs (secs. 241–250)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 211) that would authorize funding for high energy laser (HEL) research and development, and would require the Secretary of Defense to designate a senior civilian official in the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) to oversee, coordinate, prioritize, and conduct planning and programming for the HEL programs. The provision would also express a sense of Congress concerning the appropriate funding levels for HEL research and development, require the establishment of a memorandum of agreement between the Secretary of Defense and the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration to conduct joint laser research programs, and establish certain reporting requirements.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 917) that would authorize funding for HEL programs, require the Secretary of Defense to implement the organizational recommendations included in the High Energy Laser Master Plan of March 24, 2000, and require other actions related to the management of HEL.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to implement the recommendations included in the High Energy Laser Master Plan recommendations and would address other matters related to HEL program funding and management. The amendment would also require the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Deputy Undersecretary of Defense for Science and Technology, to evaluate whether to include other directed energy science and technology programs in the new high energy laser management structure.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

Reports on mobile offshore base concept and potential use for certain purposes of technologies associated with that concept (sec. 251)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 241) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report on the mobile offshore base that would contain a cost-benefit analysis for the base and a recommendation on whether a program should be established, with lead service designation and schedule.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require an additional report from the Secretary of the Navy on the potential application and feasibility of using existing technologies, including those associated with the mobile offshore base concept, to a sea-based platform for support of naval aviation training. This report should be viewed as a matter totally disassociated with the potential requirement for a mobile offshore base, with the exception of potential sharing of technologies.

Battlefield Mobility Enhancement System

The budget request included no funding for the battlefield mobility enhancement system know as Military Gator (M-Gator).

The House bill would authorize $9.3 million for M-Gator.

The Senate amendment would authorize $10.0 million for M-Gator.

The conferees agree to authorize $3.0 million for M-Gator. The conferees commend the Department of the Army and, specifically, the XVIII Airborne Corps for their efforts in acquiring the M-Gator battlefield mobility enhancement system. The conferees note that these efforts substantially shortened the acquisition process for this system by using a commercial off-the-shelf vehicle and thereby resisted the oft-repeated mistake of excessive modifications and militarizations, saving both time and money. The conferees understand that it took the Army only three years from the execution of the operational needs statement to the initial fielding of the M-Gator. The conferees are also pleased to note that M-Gators are currently available for world-wide deployment by the 82nd and 101st Airborne Divisions and, within available funding, will soon be available in the 10th Mountain Division in New York and the 25th Infantry Division in Hawaii.

Cultural and historic activities

The budget request included $300,000 for the Legacy Resource Management Program.

The House bill would authorize an increase of $6.5 million in the Legacy program.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $6.1 million in the Legacy program for the recovery and preservation of three Civil War vessels: the H.L. Hunley, a Civil War submarine; the U.S.S. Monitor, a Civil War ironclad warship; and the C.S.S. Alabama, a Civil War commerce raider.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $6.5 million in the Legacy program. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense and the Secretary of the Navy to use the additional Legacy funds to accomplish the following: (1) To raise the H.L. Hunley, recover other remaining artifacts, and conduct related preservation activities; (2) to make preparations for the turret recovery of the U.S.S. Monitor and recover other remaining artifacts, including two cannons; and (3) to survey and recover the artifacts of the C.S.S. Alabama, including the aft pivot gun and the lifting screw. The conferees further direct that, not later than April 1, 2001, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report that completely describes all prior and current use of Legacy funds and relevant state funds, and the status of recovery and preservation activities related to the H.L. Hunley, the U.S.S. Monitor, and the C.S.S. Alabama.

MOCAS enhancements

The budget request included $1.1 billion for the Defense Logistics Agency.

The House bill would authorize the budget request.

The Senate amendment would authorize an increase of $1.2 million for improvements to the Mechanization of Contract Administration Service (MOCAS) System. The increase in funding is necessary for the development of a query tool, enhanced shared data warehouse, and other improvements to bring the MOCAS system in compliance with other provisions in the Act.

The House bill contained no similar provision and would authorize the budget request.

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $1.0 million for these purposes for the Defense Finance and Accounting Service.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Funding for Formerly Used Defense Sites and the Conway Bombing and Gunnery Range, Horry County, South Carolina

The Department of Defense (DOD) is responsible for cleaning up properties that it formerly owned, leased, possessed, or operated, known as Formerly Used Defense Sites (FUDS). The Army is the executive agent for the FUDS program, and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers (Corps) manages and executes actual remediation activities. Because DOD no longer owns or uses the FUDS properties, a Corps district commander is given direct oversight responsibility for execution of environmental restoration projects.

There are about 9,302 properties identified for inclusion in the FUDS program, hundreds of which could be categorized as former ranges. Unfortunately, there are significant funding shortfalls within the FUDS program, which makes it difficult to execute much needed remediation projects at these sites. In an effort to address this problem, the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2001 (Public Law 106–259) included an increase of $45.0 million for FUDS remediation. Although these additional funds should facilitate further remediation activities on FUDS properties, there remains a funding shortfall that must be comprehensively addressed through the Department of Defense budget process. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to work cooperatively with the Secretary of the Army to resolve effectively the funding shortfall in the FUDS program.

The conferees are particularly concerned about the lack of focus and support for remediation of former military ranges. Specifically, the conferees have been informed of potential safety and environmental issues at the former Conway Bombing and Gunnery Range (Range III), Horry County, South Carolina. The conferees encourage the Secretary of the Army to move forward with remediation at such ranges in accordance with existing Department of Army policy.

United States Army marksmanship program

The conferees believe that international marksmanship competitions are an excellent opportunity to showcase the skills of U.S. military personnel in a sport that many countries see as a paradigm of military preparedness.

The conferees note that since 1956, the United States Army Marksmanship Unit, including active and reserve participants, have made a significant contribution to the success of U.S. marksmanship teams. Since the 1988 Olympic Games, reserve component participation on the Department of Defense (DOD) contingent on U.S. shooting teams has averaged nearly one half of all DOD team members. The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to review the current Army Marksmanship program in order to maintain adequate opportunities for reserve component personnel to participate in future international marksmanship events.

Water quality issues at installations in Kaiserslautern, Germany

The conferees are concerned about contamination at approximately 36 locations recently identified on, or near, military installations supporting the missions of the U.S. Army and the U.S. Air Force in the area of Kaiserslautern, Germany. The conferees recognize the effort of the Secretaries of the Army and the Air Force to work cooperatively with local German authorities to resolve matters relating to environmental contamination of the water supply that supports the military installations and civilians in the area of Kaiserslautern, Germany. The conferees direct the Secretaries of the Army and Air Force to assess jointly the nature and extent of the water contamination issue, and develop a plan for the completion of remediation and restoration, to include related costs. The conferees direct the secretaries concerned to submit their findings and recommendations concurrent with the submission of the budget request for fiscal year 2002.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Authorization of Appropriations

Authorization of appropriations (secs. 301–302)

The House bill contained provisions (secs. 301–302) that would authorize the recommended fiscal year 2001 funding levels for all operations and maintenance and working capital fund accounts.

The Senate amendment contained similar provisions.

The conference agreement includes these provisions.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 303) that would authorize $69,832,000 from the Armed Forces Retirement Home Trust Fund to be appropriated for the operation of the Armed Forces Retirement Homes.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 303).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Transfer from National Defense Stockpile Transaction Fund (sec. 304)

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Subtitle B—Environmental Provisions

Establishment of additional environmental restoration account and use of accounts for operation and monitoring of environmental remedies (sec. 311)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 341) that would amend section 2703 of title 10, United States Code, to designate an account for formerly used defense sites within the Environmental Restoration Account (ERA), and to ensure that all site closeout activities would be funded by an appropriate ERA.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Certain environmental restoration activities (sec. 312)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 313) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense or the secretaries of the military departments to use funds available in the environmental restoration accounts (ERA), pursuant to section 2703 of title 10, United States Code, to permanently relocate facilities. The authorization would be subject to secretarial determination that permanent relocation was the most cost effective environmental restoration option and would sunset in three years. The provision would also limit the total funds available to five percent of the funds deposited in an ERA for a fiscal year.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 346), but made the authorization contingent upon a secretary's written determination that such permanent relocation is part of a response action that: (1) has the support of the affected community; (2) has the approval of relevant regulatory agencies; and (3) is the most cost effective response action available. The authority would terminate after September 30, 2003, and be subject to a five percent funding cap within each fiscal year for the funds available under section 2703. The secretary concerned would also be required to provide an annual report to the congressional defense committees on each response action for which there has been a written determination made under this provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

The conferees expect the Department of Defense to use this authority judiciously, and to ensure that funds are used only for legitimate environmental restoration priorities. Moreover, the conferees intend that this provision will allow for a flexible approach to environmental restoration at certain formerly used defense sites where progress has been slow.

Annual reports under Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program (sec. 313)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 343) that would modify the current reporting requirement for the Science Advisory Board to allow for its inclusion in the annual report for the Strategic Environmental Research and Development Program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Payment of fines and penalties for environmental compliance at Fort Wainwright, Alaska (sec. 314)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 342) that would require the Secretary of Defense or the secretaries of the military departments to seek congressional authorization prior to paying any fine or penalty imposed by a Federal agency for an environmental compliance violation if the fine or penalty amount agreed to is $1.5 million or more. Supplemental environmental projects carried out as part of fine or penalty for amounts $1.5 million or more and agreed to after the enactment of this Act would also require specific authorization by law.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Secretary of Defense or the Secretary of the Army to pay no more than $2.0 million in settlement for a $16.07 million notice of violation issued on March 5, 1999, by the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency at Fort Wainwright, Alaska.

The conferees note that a number of questions have been raised about the manner in which environmental compliance fines and penalties are assessed by state and federal enforcement authorities. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees no later than March 1, 2002, that includes an analysis of all environmental compliance fines and penalties assessed and imposed at military facilities during fiscal years 1995 through 2001. The analysis shall address the criteria or methodology used by enforcement authorities in initially assessing the amount of each fine and penalty. Any current or historical trends regarding the use of such criteria or methodology shall be identified.

Payment of fines or penalties imposed for environmental compliance violations at other Department of Defense facilities (sec. 315)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 311) that would authorize the payment of certain fines and penalties, or to carry out supplemental environmental projects in accordance with section 8149 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2000. The Secretary of the Army would be specifically authorized to pay following supplemental environmental projects carried out in satisfaction of an assessed fine or penalty: (1) $993,000 for Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Washington, D.C.; (2) $377,250 for Fort Campbell, Kentucky; (3) $20,701 for Fort Gordon, Georgia; (4) $78,500 for Pueblo Chemical Depot, Colorado; (5) $20,000 for Deseret Chemical Depot, Utah. The Secretary of the Navy would be specifically authorized to pay the following fines and penalties: (1) $108,000 for Allegany Ballistics Laboratory, West Virginia; and (2) $5,000 for Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, Texas.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 344) that would authorize an additional fine of $7,975 for Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize an additional fine of $1,650 imposed at Quantico, Virginia.

The conferees are pleased with the Army's most recent efforts to reduce the level of fines and penalties received.

Reimbursement for certain costs in connection with the former Nansemond Ordnance Depot Site, Suffolk, Virginia (sec. 316)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 345) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to pay not more than $98,210 from the Environmental Restoration, Formerly Used Defense Sites Account to reimburse the Nansemond Ordnance Depot Site Special Account of the Hazardous Substance Superfund, established by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 9507). The reimbursement would be for oversight costs incurred by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) on a time critical removal action at the Former Nansemond Ordnance Depot performed by the Department of Defense (DOD) under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA) (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) and the Defense Environmental Restoration Program (10 U.S.C. 2701 et seq.).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees direct the Department of Defense and the military departments to continue to seek congressional authorization prior to reimbursing EPA for any oversight costs incurred at environmental restoration sites where the DOD or the military departments have incurred liability under CERCLA.

Necessity of military low-level flight training to protect national security and enhance military readiness (sec. 317)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 312) that would mandate that any environmental impact statement completed, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, for each special use airspace designated by a military department for the performance of low-level training flights satisfy all future requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would provide, consistent with existing law, that NEPA does not require a programmatic, nation-wide environmental impact statement for low level flight training as a precondition to the use of any airspace by a military department for the performance of low-level training flights.

Ship disposal project (sec. 318)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 347) that would direct the Secretary of the Navy to continue to carry out a ship disposal project in fiscal year 2001 and to use competitive contracting procedures to award task orders within the ship disposal project. The provision would also direct the Secretary to submit, not later than December 31, 2000, a report to the congressional defense committees on the ship disposal project.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Defense Environmental Security Corporate Information Management Program (sec. 319)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 348) that would direct the Secretary of Defense to submit, not later than 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, a report to the congressional defense committees on the Defense Environmental Security Corporate Information Management (DESCIM) Program. The report would contain specific recommendations regarding the future mission of the DESCIM Program and address issues of concern within the Department of Defense.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would direct the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense (DOD) to ensure management and oversight of the DESCIM program consistent with: the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (42 U.S.C. 1401 et seq.); section 331(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (10 U.S.C. 2223); DOD Directives 5000.1, 5000.2–R, 5237.1; and all other statutes, directives, regulations, and management controls that are applicable to investments in information technology and related services.

The conferees remain concerned about evidence of mismanagement of the DESCIM program. The conferees note the nominal return on an investment of about $100.0 million.

Report on Plasma Energy Pyrolysis System (sec. 320)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 349) that would require the Secretary of the Army to submit, not later than October 1, 2000, a report to the congressional defense committees that includes the Army's analysis and recommendations regarding future applications for both phases of the Plasma Energy Pyrolysis System (PEPS) technology (PE 62720A).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would change the date for submission of the report to February 1, 2001.

Sense of Congress regarding environmental restoration of former defense manufacturing site, Santa Clarita, California (sec. 321)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 314) that would express the sense of Congress that every effort should be made to apply all known public and private sector innovative technologies to restore the Santa Clarita site to productive use.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would strike the original findings.

Subtitle C—Commissaries and Nonappropriated Fund Instrumentalities

Use of appropriated funds to cover operating expenses of commissary stores (sec. 331)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 321) that would authorize the Defense Commissary Agency to use appropriated funds to cover expenses of operating stores and central product processing facilities.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Adjustment of sales prices of commissary store goods and services to cover certain expenses (sec. 332)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 322) that would require the Defense Commissary Agency to adjust prices of goods and services to cover losses from shrinkage, spoilage, and pilferage, as well as the cost of first destination transportation.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Use of surcharges for construction and improvement of commissary stores (sec. 333)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 323) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to use proceeds solely from the commissary surcharge for acquisition, construction, conversion, expansion, improvement, repair, maintenance, and equipping commissaries or to cover environmental evaluation and construction costs, including surveys and similar expenses related to commissary construction.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Inclusion of magazines and other periodicals as an authorized commissary merchandise category (sec. 334)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 324) that would add magazines and other periodicals as an authorized merchandise category for sale in commissaries.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to promulgate policy guidance that would limit the display of magazines and other periodicals in commissaries to the immediate area of the checkout lanes.

Use of most economical distribution method for distilled spirits (sec. 335)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 325) that would authorize military exchanges to use private distributors to distribute distilled spirits in those cases in which such an option is determined to be the most cost-effective means of distribution.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec 369).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Report on effects of availability of slot machines on United States military installations overseas (sec. 336)

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Subtitle D—Department of Defense Industrial Facilities

Designation of Centers of Industrial and Technical Excellence and public-private partnerships to increase utilization of such centers (sec. 341)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 332) that would amend section 2474 of title 10, United States Code, to devolve the authority to designate the depot-level activities of the Department of Defense and the military departments to the respective secretaries of the military departments, including the arsenals and ammunition plants of the U.S. Army. The provision would also expand the activities authorized to be conducted at these centers by employees of the center, the private sector, or other entities outside the Department of Defense, to include the performance of work under contract, or subcontract, in any of the core competencies of the center; the performance of other depot-level maintenance and repair related to the core competencies at the center; or other work by the private sector that is not related to the core competencies of the center that requires the use of any facility or equipment of the center that are not fully utilized by a military department for its own production and maintenance requirements. The full costs of work performed by the employees of the center under contract from the private sector must be charged to the contract. Any revenues generated, by rents or through other mechanisms, by private sector use of facilities and equipment at these centers would be available to offset the costs of facility operations, maintenance, and environmental restoration at the center where the leased property is located. The provision would also include a loan guarantee program to encourage the private sector to participate in the public-private partnerships established in the centers.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would not include ammunition plants or arsenals under section 2474. The amendment would also authorize, rather than require, the secretary of a military department to allow centers to enter into public-private partnerships. Furthermore, the amendment would limit the work conducted at a center to work that is related to the core competencies of the center. Finally, rather than authorize a new loan guarantee program, the amendment would require the Secretary of Defense to provide the Congress with a report on the extent to which a loan guarantee program modeled after the loan guarantee program in the Armament Retooling and Manufacturing Support Program would help to achieve the objectives of section 2474.

Unutilized and underutilized plant-capacity costs of United States arsenals (sec. 342)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 335) that would prohibit the inclusion of the cost of unutilized or under utilized plant capacity in the evaluation of bids for the contracting of the arsenal to provide a good or service to a U.S. Government organization.

The House bill had no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Arsenal support program initiative (sec. 343)

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would establish a separate two year arsenal support demonstration program with authorities similar to those provided by the ARMS program.

Codification and improvement of armament retooling and manufacturing support programs (sec. 344)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 331) that would amend Part IV of subtitle B of title 10, United States Code, to make certain changes and codify the Armament Retooling and Manufacturing Support (ARMS) Initiative. The provision would expand the objectives of the program to include a reduction of the cost of ownership and/or disposal of ammunition plants, to enhance best business practices, and foster cooperation with the private sector at these facilities. The provision would also make it easier for non-federal entities to use excess capacity at these facilities, and offset the costs to the Federal Government of ownership by allowing revenues generated through private sector use to be applied to overhead and production costs.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would not further expand the use of the ARMS program to excess facilities or allow an ARMS facility to use contracts, leases, or other agreements for activities not traditionally associated with the ARMS program, unless approved by the Secretary of the Army.

Subtitle E—Performance of Functions by Private-Sector Sources

Inclusion of additional information in reports to Congress required before conversion of commercial or industrial type functions to contractor performance (sec. 351)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 331) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide the Congress with additional information before converting commercial or industrial functions to contractor performance. The additional information would include a certification that funds are specifically budgeted for conversion analysis, the date on which the analysis was initiated, and the number of Department of Defense civilians that would be adversely affected by the proposed conversion.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 366(b)).

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to identify the funding source for the conversion analysis and the number of Department of Defense civilians who will be terminated or otherwise affected by the proposed conversion. The amendment would also require the Secretary to include the estimated economic impact of the change and a certification that the factors considered in the examinations performed, and the decisions made, did not include any predetermined personnel constraint or limitation in terms of man-years, end strength, full-time equivalent positions, or maximum number of employees.

Effects of outsourcing on overhead costs of Centers of Industrial and Technical Excellence and Army ammunition plants (sec. 352)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 333) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to Congress 30 days prior to entering into a contract that would result in moving workload performed by 50 or more employees from a center or ammunition plant. The report should describe the impact of any reduction in workload at a center or ammunition plant as a result of a contract and describe the overhead costs of that facility.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would increase the waiting period from 30 to 60 days.

Consolidation, restructuring, or re-engineering of Department of Defense organizations, functions, or activities (sec. 353)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 364) that would prohibit the Secretary of Defense from initiating manpower reductions at organizations or activities, or within functions, that are commercial, commercial exempt from competition, military essential, or inherently governmental until the Secretary submits a report to Congress outlining the elements to be analyzed, the location and a description of the elements, the number of civilian or military personnel that would be affected, the cost of performance, and a certification that the decision is not the result of predetermined constraints or limitations on Department of Defense personnel. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to submit to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on any decision on consolidation or re-engineering if such action would eliminate 11 or more positions. The provision would also require the Comptroller General to review and to audit the findings of the Secretary of Defense.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide annually to Congress the Department's Strategic Sourcing Plan. The provision would also require that the Secretary of Defense provide a report to Congress outlining the results of the analysis performed for those elements when an action would result in a manpower reduction affecting 50 or more personnel. The Secretary could not implement the results of the analysis until 30 days after providing the Congress with the required report. This provision would not apply to the transfer of military units between locations.

Monitoring of savings resulting from workforce reductions as part of conversion of functions to performance by private sector or other strategic sourcing initiatives (sec. 354)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 366) that would require the Secretary of Defense to establish a system for monitoring the performance of functions of the Department of Defense that are performed by 50 or more employees of the Department and have been subjected to a review to determine whether the function should be performed by federal employees or a private sector workforce. The provision would also establish three performance measures, including the costs incurred, the savings derived, and the value of the performance by the selected workforce measured against the costs of the performance of the workload by the workforce at the beginning of the review. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to provide to the Congress with an annual report that outlines the results of the performance reviews conducted over the previous years.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the report provided by the Secretary of Defense to the Congress regarding the results of past performance reviews to include those reviews conducted over the previous five years. The report would compare the costs to perform the function before and after the review, and the anticipated savings from the review to the actual savings realized.

Performance of emergency response functions at chemical weapons storage installations (sec. 355)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 364) that would prohibit the Secretary of the Army from converting to contractor performance the emergency response functions of any chemical weapons storage installation currently performed by U.S. Government employees until the Secretary provides a certification to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that reiterates the responsibility of the Secretary to enforce section 2465 of title 10, United States Code.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 367) that would require the Secretary of the Navy to provide the congressional defense committees a report outlining the plans and justification for the reorganization of the Naval Audit service 60 days before consolidating the functions of the service currently performed at its primary East and West Coast locations to Washington, DC.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The report accompanying H.R. 4205 (House Report 106–616) directed the Secretary to wait 180 days before consolidating all activities in Washington.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to wait 180 days before proceeding with the consolidation.

New methodology for preparing budget requests to satisfy Army readiness requirements (sec. 375)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 362) that would require the Secretary of the Army to develop a new methodology to be used in preparing a budget request that more accurately reflects the Army's requirements. This methodology should be based on the level of training required to maintain essential readiness, the cost of conducting such training, and the cost of all other Army operations, including the cost of meeting its infrastructure requirements. This methodology should be used in the preparation of the fiscal year 2002 budget request.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House bill contained no similar provision

The House recedes.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Authority to ensure demilitarization of significant military equipment formerly owned by the Department of Defense

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 361) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to require the owner of significant military equipment formerly owned by the Department of Defense to demilitarize that equipment or return it to the Department of Defense for demilitarization.

The Senate amendment had no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that although the provision intended to address congressional concerns regarding the release of un-demilitarized military equipment to the public by the Department of Defense, the provision could have serious unintended consequences for legitimate owners of former military equipment, such as museums and ceremonial display organizations. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to reassess its approach for the recovery of un-demilitarized military equipment in a way that will not affect legitimate owners of former military equipment.

Close-in weapon system overhauls

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 319) that would provide $391.8 million for weapons maintenance including $10.0 million for close-in weapon system overhauls.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes on the provision.

The conferees agree to authorize $10.0 million in the operation and maintenance account of the Navy for overhauls of the close-in weapon system.

Industrial mobilization capacity at government-owned, government-operated army ammunition facilities and arsenals

Notice of use of radio frequency spectrum by a system entering engineering and manufacturing development

The Senate bill contained a provision (sec. 365) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the congressional defense committees before a new weapon system is acquired that would outline the frequency that the system will use. The report would also include a statement of whether the Department is designated as the primary user of that frequency and, if not, the unique technical characteristics that make it necessary to use that particular frequency, and a description of the protections that the Department of Defense has been given to ensure that it will not incur costs as a result of current or future interference from other users of that particular frequency.

The House amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees are concerned that in the past the Department of Defense has pursued the development of weapons systems utilizing portions of the radio frequency spectrum that are not designated for military use. This can lead to unintended interference between that system and a commercial system licensed to use the same frequency. This interference could then result in operational constraints, or expensive redesign of the weapon system.

The conferees note that the Department of Defense is implementing new procedures that are designed to ensure adequate coordination of the military services' efforts to develop new systems so that past problems with frequency interference do not take place. The conferees direct the Comptroller General to review these procedures and their implementation and provide the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives with a report outlining the extent to which they will prevent interference that would result in operational constraints or expensive redesigns.

Revision of authority to waive limitation on performance of depot-level maintenance

The Senate bill contained a provision (sec. 334) that would amend section 2466 of title 10, United States Code, to require the President of the United States, rather than the secretary of the respective military department, to waive the 50 percent depot maintenance requirement for reasons of national security.

The House amendment contained no similar provision.

The conferees are concerned that the Secretary of the Air Force has not taken the actions necessary to ensure the Air Force complies with the requirement contained in section 2466 of title 10, United States Code, that 50 percent of all depot maintenance funds of a military department be spent on depot maintenance services provided by employees of the Federal Government. The conferees believe that this requirement is essential to maintain the core maintenance capability necessary to preserve a ready and controlled source of repair and maintenance.

TITLE IV—MILITARY PERSONNEL AUTHORIZATIONS

Funding for Army Reserve Individual Mobilization Augmentees

The conferees are aware that projected fiscal year 2001 funding shortfalls within the Army Reserve have required that limitations be placed on the number of days that Individual Mobilization Augmentees (IMA) may serve on active duty. The conferees are also aware that many Army Reserve IMAs serve extended training tours in active component staffs and units, and that the imposed limits will significantly reduce, in some cases by as much half, the amount of support that IMAs may provide to the active Army. Believing that IMAs provide significant, critical support to the active Army, the conferees strongly urge the Secretary of the Army to address the funding shortfall expeditiously, either by transferring active military personnel funding to reserve personnel accounts, or by other means the Secretary considers appropriate.

The conferees are concerned with the piecemeal manner in which the reserve components are requesting increases to the control grade limits. This is the third consecutive year in which control grade tables for reserve officers on active duty in support of the reserves have been adjusted. The conferees strongly support the initiative in the House report accompanying H.R. 4205, (H. Rept. 106–616) to require a comprehensive approach to determining the appropriate control grade limits for each of the reserve components. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to study the requirements and force structure of the reserves on active duty in support of the reserves and to recommend a permanent solution for managing grade structure for these officers. In conducting the study, the Secretary of Defense shall include the following areas:

(1) the grade structure authorized for the active duty forces and rationale for why the grade structure for reserves on active duty in support of the reserves should be different;

(2) explain any differences between required force structure and authorized force structure for the controlled grades;

(3) the need for independent grade limits for each reserve component;

(4) the potential for repealing the current grade tables in favor of a system that would manage grades based on the grade authorized for the position occupied by a service member; and

(5) the current mix within each reserve component of traditional reservists, dual status technicians, active component service members and reservists on active duty in support of the reserves in each controlled grade and how that mix for each component might change over time under the Secretary's recommended solution.

The conferees direct that the Secretary of Defense submit a report of findings and recommendations to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives not later than March 31, 2001.

Subtitle E—Military Justice and Legal Assistance Matters

Recognition by states of military testamentary instruments (sec. 551)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 541) that would amend chapter 53 of title 10, United States Code, to exempt a military testamentary instrument from any requirement of form, formality, or recording before probate under the laws of a state, and would provide that such an instrument has the same legal effect as a testamentary instrument prepared and executed in accordance with the laws of the state in which it is presented for probate. The provision would define ''military testamentary instrument'' and would establish requirements for the execution of such an instrument.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 574).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Policy concerning rights of individuals whose names have been entered into Department of Defense official criminal investigative reports (sec. 552)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 542) that would require the Department of Defense to apply the ''probable cause'' standard before ''titling'' or designating a person as a suspect in any official report or in a central index. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to establish a uniform standard for removal of a person's name from an official report and any central index if it is subsequently determined that there is not probable cause to believe that that person committed the crime.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would direct the Secretary of Defense to establish policy that creates a uniform process that affords individuals titled in criminal investigative reports or indexed in a central index an opportunity to obtain a review of such actions. If it is determined that an entry was made contrary to Department of Defense requirements, the name and identifying information of the person would be expunged from these records.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to: (1) review policies and procedures addressing the degree of evidence or information that must exist before titling and indexing occurs, to include the weight, if any, given to initial allegations; (2) review the sufficiency of training provided to individuals with access to the Defense Clearance and Investigative Index (DCII) regarding the significance of criminal investigative entries in the DCII; (3) review the use of criminal investigative data in the DCII to determine if it is being used properly and examine the adequacy of available sanctions for those who improperly use such information; and (4) provide other pertinent information discovered in the review process. The Secretary shall submit a report, with findings and recommendations, to the congressional defense committees by April 1, 2001.

Limitation on secretarial authority to grant clemency for military prisoners serving sentence of confinement for life without eligibility for parole (sec. 553)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 544) that would amend Article 74 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (10 U.S.C. 874) to prohibit the secretary concerned from remitting or suspending that part of a court-martial sentence that extended to confinement for life without eligibility for parole, and would make conforming and clarifying amendments to other provisions of the Uniform Code.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would limit the authority of the secretary concerned to remit or suspend such a sentence to situations in which the person had served at least 20 years confinement. Such authority could not be redelegated.

Authority for civilian special agents of the military department criminal investigative organizations to execute warrants and make arrests (sec. 554)

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

Requirement for verbatim record in certain special court-martial cases (sec. 555)

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (sec. 556)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1051) that would request the President to issue a proclamation commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, which was enacted May 5, 1950, and call upon the Department of Defense, the armed forces, and the United States Court of Appeals for the Armed Forces to commemorate the occasion in a suitable manner.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Subtitle F—Matters Relating to Recruiting

Army recruiting pilot programs (sec. 561)

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would reduce the scope of the civilian contract recruiter pilot program and would require recruiters assigned to vocational schools and community colleges to be assigned those duties as their primary responsibility.

Enhancement of recruitment market research and advertising programs (sec. 562)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 552) that would direct the Secretary of Defense to take the necessary actions to enhance joint and service recruiting and advertising programs through an aggressive market research program, and would waive certain requirements of the Paperwork Reduction Act to enhance the flexibility of the Secretary of Defense and the military services to react to changes in the recruiting market.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Access to secondary schools for military recruiting purposes (sec. 563)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 553) that would, effective July 1, 2002, require local educational agencies to provide military recruiters access to secondary schools on the same basis as colleges, universities, and private sector employers, unless the governing body of the local educational agency acts by majority vote to deny access to military recruiters. The provision would also establish a process to ensure that secondary schools provide military recruiters access to the campus, directories, and student lists on the same basis as that afforded colleges, universities, and private sector employers. The provision would require the relevant military service to send a senior official to meet with the local educational agency within 120 days of a military recruiter being denied access. If the secondary school continues to deny access to military recruiters the Secretary of Defense shall, within 60 days, communicate with the governor of the state requesting assistance in restoring access for military recruiters. A copy of this correspondence shall be provided to the Secretary of Education. If, one year after the date of the transmittal of the letter from the Secretary of Defense, the local educational agency continues to deny access to at least two of the armed forces, the Secretary of Defense shall notify the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives, and the members of the House of Representatives and the Senate who represent the district or districts in which the local educational agency operates.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would expand the definition of the senior official who shall visit schools that deny access to include colonels, or in the case of the Navy, Captains, and would make other technical changes.

Pilot program to enhance military recruiting by improving military awareness of school counselors and educators (sec. 564)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 555) that would require the Secretary of Defense to conduct a three-year pilot program to improve communications with student counselors and educators by providing funding, assistance, and information to an existing interactive internet site designed to provide information and services to employees of local educational agencies and institutions of higher learning.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 506) that would authorize service members who simultaneously receive retired pay and voluntary separation incentive pay to terminate their eligibility for the voluntary separation incentive pay and would permit the retired member to reimburse the government for the amount of the voluntary separation incentive pay received without concurrently increasing the amount of the voluntary separation incentive pay that is owed.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Congressional review period for assignment of women to duty on submarines and for any proposed reconfiguration or design of submarines to accommodate female crew members (sec. 573)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 507) that would require the Secretary of Defense to provide Congress written notification and wait until 120 days of continuous legislative session pass prior to implementating any policy change affecting the current male-only assignment policy for submarines and prior to the expenditure of any funds to reconfigure or design a submarine to accommodate the assignment of female crew members.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would modify the required waiting period between notification of Congress and the implementation of any policy change with regard to the assignment of females to submarines or expenditure of funds for design or reconfiguration of a submarine to accommodate females to 30 days in which both the House of Representatives and the Senate are in session.

Management and per diem requirements for members subject to lengthy or numerous deployments (sec. 574)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 578) that would amend section 586 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) to change the requirement for an officer in the grade of general or admiral to approve deployments of personnel who would be away from home more than 200 of the past 365 days to require that the designated component commander for the member's armed force approve deployments of personnel who would be away from home more than 200 of the past 365 days; to change the point at which the high-deployment per diem allowance would be paid from 251 days or more of the preceding 365 days to 501 days or more of the preceding 730 days. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives not later than March 31, 2002, on the administration of this provision and make recommendations for revision, as the Secretary deems appropriate.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would change the point at which the high deployment per diem allowance would be paid from 501 days or more of the preceding 730 days to 401 days or more of the preceding 730 days.

The conferees strongly support the position of the Department of Defense that any high deployment per diem payments should be made from the operations and maintenance accounts. The conferees believe that deploying service members in excess of 400 days in any 730 day period cannot be attributable to any factor other than operational necessity. As such, high deployment per diem is an operational cost and must be paid from the operations and maintenance accounts.

Pay in lieu of allowance for funeral honors duty (sec. 575)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 551) that would authorize a reserve component member assigned to a funeral honors detail for the funeral of a veteran to be compensated at the same rate as the member would be compensated for participating in inactive-duty training.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

National Guard Challenge Program (sec. 577)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 553) that would authorize the head of a federal agency or department to provide funds to the Secretary of Defense to support the National Guard Challenge Program and would allow the Secretary of Defense to expend those funds notwithstanding the $62.5 million limit in defense funding established by section 509(b) of title 32, United States Code. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to establish regulations for the Challenge Program.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 910) that would transfer oversight responsibility for the National Guard Challenge Program from the Chief of the National Guard Bureau to the Secretary of Defense, and would amend the limitation on federal funding for the National Guard Challenge Program to only Department of Defense funding.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would combine the two provisions.

The conferees note that the intent of the transfer of responsibility for the National Guard Challenge Program to the Secretary of Defense is to reaffirm the role of the Secretary of Defense to establish policy for and oversight of the operation of Department of Defense programs. It is not the intent of the conferees that the National Guard Bureau should lose its ability to administer this highly successful program. Rather, the intent is that there be increased oversight and direction by the Secretary of Defense.

Study of use of civilian contractor pilots for operational support missions (sec. 578)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 554) that would require the Secretary of Defense to study the feasibility and cost of using civilian contractor personnel as pilots and other aircrew members to fly government aircraft performing non-combat operational support missions world-wide.

Authority for award of the Medal of Honor

Freeman of Idaho for valor during the Vietnam Conflict; to James K. Okubo of Detroit, Michigan for valor during World War II; and to Andrew J. Smith of Massachusetts for valor during the Civil War.

The conferees note that Public Law 106–223, enacted on June 21, 2000, waived the statutory time limits and authorized the President to award the Medal of Honor to Ed W. Freeman of Idaho for valor during the Vietnam Conflict; to James K. Okubo of Detroit, Michigan, for valor during World War II; and to Andrew J. Smith of Massachusetts for valor during the Civil War. The conferees recede from their respective provisions.

Collection and use of deoxyribonucleic acid identification information from violent and sexual offenders in the armed forces

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 543) that would require the secretaries of the military departments to collect a deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) sample from each member of the armed forces who is, or has been, convicted of a violent or sexual offense. The provision would further require the Secretary of Defense to analyze each sample and furnish the results of each analysis to the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) for use in the Combined DNA Index System.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees recognize that the collection and indexing of samples, as proposed in this provision, has merit, but believe that this matter would be better addressed by general legislation with government-wide application.

Contingent exemption from limitation on number of Air Force officers serving on active duty in grades above major general

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 511) that would exempt an Air Force officer serving in the grade of Lieutenant General or General from the limitations on the number of Air Force officers serving on active duty in grades above major general when either the Commander-in-Chief, United States Transportation Command, or the Commander-in-Chief, United States Space Command, is an officer from a service other than the Air Force.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Joint Officer Management

The Senate amendment contained provisions (sec. 521–527) that would streamline the designation and management of joint speciality officers by simplifying the requirements for designation as a joint speciality officer, requiring Joint Professional Military Education to be conducted in residence and by establishing promotion objectives for joint speciality officers.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Military Voting Rights Act of 2000

The Senate bill contained provisions (sec. 561–563) that would amend the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of 1940 (50 U.S.C. App. 501) to preclude a military member from losing a claim to state residency for the purpose of voting in federal and state elections because of absence due to military orders, and would also amend the Uniformed and Overseas Citizens Absentee Voting Act (42 U.S.C. 1973ff) to require each state to permit absent military voters to use absentee registration procedures and to vote by absentee ballot in elections for states and local offices, in addition to federal offices, as provided in current law.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Review of actions of selection boards

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 506) that would authorize the secretary concerned to correct a military personnel record in accordance with a recommendation made by a special board. The remedy could be restoration to active duty or status, if the person was separated, retired, or transferred to the retired or inactive reserve as the result of a recommendation made by a selection board; or the person could elect to receive back pay and allowances in lieu of restoration. If a special board did not recommend the correction, the action of the original selection board would be considered as final. The secretaries concerned shall prescribe regulations to carry out this provision, which would be subject to the approval of the Secretary of Defense.

The provision would require exhaustion of a person's administrative remedies within the military department concerned before the person could obtain relief in a judicial proceeding. The provision would not limit the jurisdiction of any federal court to determine the validity of any statute, regulation, or policy, and also would not limit the secretaries' authority to correct military records through boards for the correction of military records under section 1552 of title 10, United States Code.

The provision would also amend section 628 of title 10, United States Code, the statute dealing with promotion special selection boards, to require exhaustion of a person's remedies before a special selection board before relief could be obtained in a judicial proceeding.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees believe that, while such an approach may have merit, this issue requires further study.

TITLE VII-HEALTH CARE PROVISIONS

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A-Health Care Services

Provision of domiciliary and custodial care for CHAMPUS beneficiaries and certain former CHAMPUS beneficiaries (sec. 701)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 703) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to reimburse certain former Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) beneficiaries for costs incurred for custodial or domiciliary care services during a period of temporary ineligibility for such services under CHAMPUS. The provision authorized a maximum expenditure of $100.0 million for the program.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 732) that would cap the program at $100.0 million per year and would grandfather those that participated in the Department of Defense home health care demonstration to allow their continued participation in the case management program, without regard to age.

The House recedes with an amendment that would incorporate the reimbursement provision in the House bill and direct the Comptroller General to report on the effectiveness of the existing coordination of the basic TRICARE program with the program for persons with disabilities and the individual case management program, as they relate to meeting the health care needs of disabled dependents of active duty military members.

Chiropractic health care for members on active duty (sec. 702)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 737) that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a plan to phase in, over a period of five years, permanent chiropractic services for all active duty service personnel. The provision would also require the Secretary of Defense to continue to provide the same level of chiropractic health care services and benefits during fiscal year 2001 as were provided during fiscal year 2000.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 737) that would make permanent the provision of chiropractic health care services to military health care system beneficiaries who enroll in TRICARE Prime. Subtitle B-Senior Health Care

Implementation of TRICARE senior pharmacy program (sec. 711)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 721) that would authorize the establishment of the TRICARE Senior Pharmacy Program. The program would provide Medicare eligible military retirees and their eligible family members the same pharmacy benefit as is currently available to other military health care beneficiaries through the TRICARE preferred provider and fee-for-services options commonly referred to as TRICARE Extra and TRICARE Standard. The House authorized an increase of $94.0 million to the Defense Health Program to fund this requirement.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 731) that would authorize a specific pharmacy benefit for eligible beneficiaries of the military health care system, including those eligible for Medicare. The provision would authorize a national mail order program and a retail pharmacy network.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would grandfather all participants of the Base Realignment and Closure pharmacy benefit program.

Conditions for eligibility for CHAMPUS and TRICARE upon the attainment of age 65; expansion and modification of medicare subvention project (sec. 712)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 725) that would extend the Medicare subvention, or TRICARE Senior Prime, program nationwide and would make the program permanent.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 701) that would extend TRICARE/CHAMPUS eligibility to all military retirees and their dependents, regardless of age.

The House recedes with an amendment that would extend the Medicare subvention program one year and would extend permanent TRICARE/CHAMPUS eligibility to all military retirees and their dependents, regardless of age.

The conferees note that continuation of the Medicare subvention program beyond the extended termination date would be contingent upon the Secretaries of Defense and Health and Human Services jointly developing and implementing program terms and conditions that are fair and equitable to both agencies, providing a report to the Congress, and a subsequent act of Congress.

The conferees recognize that the Department of Defense has provided some level of health care services to the senior population and would not expect reimbursement for that level of effort. The conferees believe the administrative costs and costs of resources expended during the process of approving a military treatment facility as a subvention site should be included when the Secretaries of Defense and Health and Human Services jointly develop the terms of a new subvention agreement.

While extending TRICARE/CHAMPUS eligibility to Medicare-eligible beneficiaries, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to refrain from using deductibles and copayments, in recognition of their participation in Medicare Part B as a condition of participation. The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to implement, wherever reasonable, primary care impanelment programs patterned on the ''MacDill–65'' program which provide opportunities for senior retirees to establish a relationship with a military primary care provider while still taking full advantage of the added benefits under this provision.

The conferees also recognize that the ability of the Secretary of Defense to prepare reliable budget estimates is seriously compromised by the lack of any beneficiary enrollment requirements. With the addition of this significant TRICARE benefit for senior military retirees and their dependents, all retired military personnel will now have access to comprehensive health care services, no matter where they live. Therefore, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to submit a plan for universal, continuous enrollment of all eligible beneficiaries beginning in fiscal year 2002. Through the enrollment system, beneficiaries would select the component of the military health care system through which they would seek their health care services. The conferees expect the period of required enrollment would not exceed one year and some provision would be made for individual exceptions based on unforeseen circumstances. As the enrollment plan is being developed, the conferees encourage the Secretary of Defense to seek the views of affected beneficiary groups. Their views should be included in the final report. The required report shall be submitted to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives not later than March 30, 2001.

Accrual funding for health care for Medicare-eligible retirees and dependents (sec. 713)

The conferees included a provision that would establish an accrual funding mechanism to finance, on an actuarially sound basis, liabilities of the Department of Defense under Department of Defense retiree health care programs for Medicare-eligible beneficiaries.

The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to conduct a study using an independent entity to develop strategies for determining the periodicity and amount of payments from the Department of Defense Medicare-Eligible Retiree Health Care Fund under section 1113 of title 10, United States Code (as added by section 713). The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to report to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives, not later than February 8, 2001, on the results of the study, including any recommendations and, if appropriate, legislative provisions necessary to implement the accrual funding mechanism.

Subtitle C-TRICARE Program

Improvement of access to health care under the TRICARE program (sec. 721)

Additional beneficiaries under TRICARE prime remote program in the continental United States (sec. 722)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 711) that would repeal the requirement for co-payments by family members of active duty military members under TRICARE Prime Remote and would require the same access and claims processing standards as would be available under TRICARE Prime. The provision would also extend the program to all uniformed service personnel and their immediate family members, as defined in section 101 of title 10, United States Code.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 711).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Modernization of TRICARE business practices and increase of use of military treatment facilities (sec. 723)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 713) that would require managers for the Department of Defense TRICARE program to implement improvements in business practices by the end of fiscal year 2001, and would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a plan for improvement by March 15, 2001. The provision would also authorize an increase of $134.5 million for the Defense Health Program to be used solely for the purpose of maximizing the use of military treatment facilities.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 713).

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees note that the Emergency Supplemental Act, 2000 (division B of Public Law 106–246) included $695.0 million for improvements in TRICARE for fiscal years 2000 and 2001. The conferees direct that $134.5 million of these funds be used for maximizing the use of military treatment facilities by improving the efficiency of health care operations in such facilities.

The conferees note that resource sharing initiatives are achieving significant savings by recapturing services in the direct care system. Savings can range from $1.25–$5.00 for every dollar expended. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to utilize the additional funds provided by this provision to achieve comparable savings.

The conferees understand that requirements for additional support staff are dynamic and require a flexible approach to ensure full utilization of military treatment facilities. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to develop a flexible mechanism to acquire additional support staff, as needed. Further, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to include, as part of the plan for improving TRICARE business practices, a methodology for the cost-effective use of additional support staff.

Extension of TRICARE managed care support contracts (sec. 724)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 579) that would provide authority to extend TRICARE managed care support contracts in effect or in final stages of acquisition to be extended up to four years.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees recognize the necessity of a termination of enrollment appeal process and direct the Secretary to ensure appropriate dental expertise is included in such procedures. Additionally, the conferees note the importance of making available a dental benefit for retirees overseas and direct the Secretary of Defense to explore expansion of this program.

Claims processing improvements (sec. 727)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 714) that would require the Secretary of Defense to implement several changes to the TRICARE claims process system.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

Prior authorizations for certain referrals and nonavailability-of-health-care statements (sec. 728)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 715) that would prohibit the Secretary of Defense from requiring any TRICARE managed care support contractors to establish prior approval requirements among network providers.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees do not intend that this provision would in any way interfere with the relationship between the primary care provider and his or her patients or the requirement that patients enrolled under TRICARE Prime be referred for specialty care by their primary care providers. Rather, the conferees intend that the Department of Defense would, in new managed care support contracts, eliminate the requirement for TRICARE primary care providers to seek authorization before making a referral to a specialist who is part of a managed care support contractor's network of providers.

Subtitle D—Demonstration Projects

Demonstration project for expanded access to mental health counselors (sec. 731)

TITLE VIII—ACQUISITION POLICY, ACQUISITION MANAGEMENT, AND RELATED MATTERS

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Acquisition programs at the National Security Agency

The Senate report accompanying S. 2549 (S. Rept. 106–292) would direct the National Security Agency (NSA) and the Department of Defense to manage the ongoing NSA modernization effort as though it were a major defense acquisition program, as defined in section 2430 of title 10, United States Code.

The House report accompanying H.R. 4205 (H. Rept. 106–616) contained no such direction.

The conferees agree that there is a need to improve the acquisition management and oversight processes to ensure sufficient structure, accountability, and visibility for the vital NSA modernization efforts. However, the conferees are not convinced that the DOD acquisition model is sufficiently flexible and timely to allow the NSA to deliver the necessary capabilities against the rapidly changing threat environment.

The conferees understand that representatives from the Intelligence Community (IC), the NSA, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense have jointly begun to define a formal plan to improve oversight of the NSA acquisition efforts, and that an interim oversight board has been used to review a major NSA acquisition program. The conferees understand that the IC and the DOD jointly intend to create a streamlined acquisition management and oversight process that will improve DOD and IC oversight of the NSA Acquisition process.

The conferees agree to allow some time for this new plan to achieve the objectives of providing sufficient structure, accountability, and visibility for the very important modernization efforts underway within NSA. The conferees take this position with the understanding that DOD and the IC will implement oversight procedures that will achieve several objectives: (1) aid the Director of NSA in the effort to accomplish fundamental financial and acquisition management reforms within the agency; (2) improve the linkage between the development of requirements and the acquisition process; (3) ensure that internal NSA acquisition processes comply with DOD and IC policy and with best practices; (4) improve the linkage across agencies for end-to-end performance; and (5) allow the Director to have sufficient flexibility to deliver urgently needed capability.

The conferees direct the Director of NSA, the Director of Central Intelligence, and the Secretary of Defense to provide the Congress with a report, concurrent with the budget request for fiscal year 2002, that outlines the oversight plan, including the changes the plan will make in the acquisition process. If implementation of this oversight plan fails to demonstrate a review mechanism that meets these objectives, the conferees may insist on requiring that NSA manage its programs as major defense acquisition programs in the future.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—Amendments to General Contracting Authorities, Procedures, and Limitations

Department of Defense acquisition pilot programs (sec. 801)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 801) that would amend the Federal Acquisition Streamlining Act of 1994 (Public Law 103–355) to extend until fiscal year 2005 certain acquisition pilot programs and to require a report on the pilot programs.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 806) that would extend this authority through October 1, 2007.

The House recedes with an amendment that would add the 500 pound Joint Direct Attack Munition to the original pilot program and include a reporting requirement.

Multiyear services contracts (sec. 802)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 808) that would amend section 2306b of title 10, United State Code, to clarify that this section applies to the multiyear procurement of services, as well as to the multiyear procurement of property.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would insert a new section in title 10, United States Code, that would clarify the authority to enter into multiyear contracts for the acquisition of services. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to provide to the congressional defense committees, not later than February 1, 2001, a report that contains information comparable to that required by section 2306b(l)(4) for each multiyear service contact and each extension of an existing multiyear service contract entered into, or planned to be entered into, during the current or preceding year.

Clarification and extension of authority to carry out certain prototype projects (sec. 803)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 805) that would amend section 845 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1994 (Public Law 103–160), to extend for three years the authority of the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency, the military departments, and other officials designated by the Secretary of Defense to carry out prototype projects using transactions other than contracts, cooperative agreements, and grants, which must be executed in accordance with statutes or regulations applicable to contracts.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 807) that would extend for three years the other transaction prototype authority, identify appropriate uses of this authority to include cost sharing arrangements and the participation of nontraditional defense contractors, and establish a pilot program for the transition to follow-on production contracts for prototypes developed under the section 845 authority.

The House recedes with an amendment to modify the circumstances under which section 845 authority can be used and to strike the pilot program for the transition to follow-on production contracts for prototypes developed under the section 845 authority.

The conferees note the recommendations contained in the report of the Comptroller General ''Acquisition Reform: DOD's Guidance on Using Section 845 Agreements Could be Improved'' (GAO/NSIAD -00–33, dated April 2000), that the Secretary of Defense provide updated guidance that lays out the conditions for using section 845 agreements and provides a framework to tailor the terms and conditions appropriate for each agreement. The General Accounting Office (GAO) recommended that the Secretary should establish and require the use of a set of metrics, including the number of commercial firms participating in section 845 agreements, which are measurable and directly related to the agreement's use. The GAO also recommended that these requirements should be in place in time to assist in the deliberations on whether to extend the authority past September 30, 2001. The conferees further note that the Department of Defense (DOD) concurred with the need for revised guidance to help determine when section 845 agreements should be used, and that the Department planned to issue an updated guide by April 2000. The conferees direct the Secretary of Defense to issue the revised DOD guidelines for using section 845 agreements within 90 days of the enactment of this Act.

Clarification of authority of Comptroller General to review records of participants in certain prototype projects (sec. 804)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 808) that would clarify the audit access of the Comptroller General over other transaction prototype authority agreements for those contractors who have only done business with the government under other transaction authority or through cooperative agreements.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Extension of time period of limitation on procurement of ball bearings and roller bearings (sec. 805)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 807) that would amend section 2534 of title 10, United States Code, to extend the limitations on the procurement of ball bearings and roller bearings. This provision would also extend the limitations on the procurement of naval valves for another three fiscal years, and authorize limitations on the procurement of polyacrylonitrile based carbon fiber (PAN carbon fiber) for the next three fiscal years.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would extend the limitations on the procurement of ball bearings and roller bearings to October 1, 2005. The conferees note that the domestic source restriction on PAN carbon fiber was first instituted in the 1980s after the Department of Defense determined that it was overly dependent on foreign industry for PAN carbon fibers. The conferees determined that a legislative restriction was unnecessary, because the Department of Defense has extended by three years the regulatory domestic source restriction on PAN based carbon fibers.

Reporting requirements relating to multiyear contracts (sec. 806)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 802) that would clarify the multiyear reporting requirements required by section 2306b of title 10, United States Code.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment that would require an annual report that addresses all multiyear contracts, regardless of the dollar value, and require a separate report prior to entering into a multiyear contract or extension above $500.0 million if the information required by section 2306b, for the contract or extension was not included in the annual report required by this provision.

Eligibility of small business concerns owned and controlled by women for assistance under the mentor-protege program (sec. 807)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 809) that would add small business concerns owned and controlled by women to the list of entities that are eligible to participate in the pilot mentor-protege program established by section 831 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101–510).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Qualifications required for employment and assignment in contracting positions (sec. 808)

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Revision of authority for solutions-based contracting pilot program (sec. 809)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 815) that would amend section 5312 of the Clinger-Cohen Act (divisions D and E of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 [Public Law 104–106]) to remove detailed statutory requirements concerning the development of a pilot plan to include elimination of the direct participation of private information technology specialists as part of a public-private working group.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Procurement notice of contracting opportunities through electronic means (sec. 810)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 818) that would allow electronic postings of solicitations through the single government-wide point of entry designated in the Federal Acquisition Regulations.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Subtitle B—Information Technology

Acquisition and management of information technology (sec. 811)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 363) that would require that for the next three fiscal years all mission essential and mission critical information technology systems be registered with the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense (DOD). The House bill also contained a provision (sec. 806) that would require that in each of the next three fiscal years the Department of Defense Chief Information Officer certify that each major automated information system is in compliance with the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (divisions D and E of Public Law 104–106) prior to granting milestone approval.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 803) with similar registration and approval requirements. The provision would also require the Chief Information Officers of the DOD and the military services to maintain a consolidated inventory of DOD mission critical and mission essential information systems, to identify interfaces between these and other information systems, and to maintain contingency plans for responding to a disruption in the operation of any of these information systems. The Senate provision included similar requirements to the House provisions.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would establish registration and approval requirements to enhance the management and oversight of information technology acquisitions.

Tracking and management of information technology purchases (sec. 812)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 804) that would require the Secretary of Defense and the secretaries of the military departments to administer an automated system to track and manage purchases of information technology products and services in excess of the simplified acquisition threshold.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment requiring the Secretary of Defense to provide for the collection of data on purchases of information technology.

The conferees understand that the requirements of this section will be met through the incorporation of the new data elements into the Defense Contract Action Data System which is the DOD data collection system for reporting contract actions to the Federal Procurement Data System.

Appropriate use of requirements regarding experience and education of contractor personnel in the procurement of information technology services (sec. 813)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 816) that would limit the circumstances in which bid solicitations for contracts of information technology services set forth minimum contractor personnel requirements for contract award eligibility.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would preclude in the bid solicitation for any contract of information technology services, minimum requirements for contractor personnel unless: (1) the contracting officer first determines that the needs of the agency cannot be met without such requirement; or (2) the needs of the agency require the use of a type of contract other than a performance-based contract.

Navy-Marine Corps Intranet (sec. 814)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 332) that would prohibit the Department of the Navy from using fiscal year 2001 funds for payment of a long-term contract for comprehensive end-to-end shore based information services, known as the Navy Marine Corps Intranet (NMCI), until supporting documentation is provided to Congress.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 810) that would require the Secretary of the Navy to submit a report to Congress before beginning performance of the NMCI contract. The Senate amendment would also require that the Marine Corps, the naval shipyards, and the naval aviation depots be excluded from the performance of the contract in the first year; the program be developed incrementally; the impact on federal employees be mitigated; and the program be implemented in accordance with the requirements of the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996, and applicable regulations and directives.

The House recedes with an amendment that would prohibit the Department of Navy to obligate or expend funds on NMCI until the Comptroller of the Department of Defense and the Director of the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) have reviewed and commented on the Department of Navy's June 30, 2000, and July 15, 2000, reports to the Congress; and the Secretary of the Navy and the Chief of Naval Operations have submitted a joint certification to Congress that they have reviewed the business case for the contract, reviewed OMB and Department of Defense Comptroller comments, and have determined that implementation of the contract is in the best interest of the Department of the Navy. The amendment would also require additional certifications by the DOD Comptroller, the Secretary of the Navy, and Chief of Naval Operations before more than 15 percent of the planned total number of work stations could be provided under the NMCI program.

The conferees recognize the need to upgrade the Navy's shore based information infrastructure, but remain concerned about affordability and effective management oversight of the program. To reduce risk in the program, the conferees direct the Secretary of Navy to ensure that contract management organization and procedures are in place before a contract is awarded, service level agreements are fully defined in the contract, requirements are validated for information technology services requested, a comprehensive funding transition plan and schedule, which includes complete and comprehensive cost estimates, are developed, a system for tracking NMCI costs and benefits is established, outcome-oriented performance measures beyond those in the service-level agreements are established, oversight and reporting responsibilities (both within the Navy and DOD) over the NMCI program are finalized, and measures of success are defined for the first increment of the program.

The conferees direct the Comptroller General to review the Department of Navy's June 30, 2000, and July 15, 2000, reports to Congress on the NMCI. The Comptroller General shall report to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives, the Secretary of Navy, and the Chief of Naval Operations on the risks that face the Navy on the NMCI program and recommend actions to mitigate such risks no later than 30 days after the enactment of this Act.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1040) that would express the sense of Congress regarding information technology systems.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

Subtitle C—Other Acquisition-Related Matters

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Technical data rights for items developed exclusively at private expense

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 802) that would amend section 2320 of title 10, United States Code, by modifying the circumstances under which a contractor would be considered responsive to a solicitation.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that section 2320 of title 10, United States Code, establishes the statutory basis for regulations governing rights in technical data under Department of Defense contracts. This provision establishes the basic rule that the government has unlimited rights to technical data developed exclusively with federal funds; the government does not generally have rights in technical data established exclusively at private expense; and rights to data developed in part with federal funds and in part at private expense are negotiable. When the government purchases an item developed exclusively at private expense, however, section 2320 reserves the government's limited right to technical data that '' * * * is necessary for operation, maintenance, installation, or training (other than detailed manufacturing or process data).''

Department of Defense officials have noted that it is increasingly common that commercially-developed systems or components are either returned to the manufacturer for repair or discarded. In such cases, these officials state, the government does not need technical data, and the insistence that contractors provide such data could discourage commercial companies from doing business with the government.

The conferees believes that this concern is based upon a misreading of the statute. Section 2320 requires contractors to provide only technical data that ''is necessary'' for operation, maintenance, installation, or training. This requirement provides executive branch officials with the flexibility to determine what data, if any, is necessary for these limited purposes. If, in view of the manner in which the system or component will be used, no data is necessary for these purposes, the government should not require the seller to provide any such data. The conferees direct the Department to review the regulations implementing section 2320 and adopt any changes that may be necessary to clarify this point.

The House recedes with an amendment that would emphasize the role in fostering the transition of science and technology to higher levels for all of the officers currently assigned such duties: the Undersecretary of Defense for Acquisition, Technology and Logistics, the secretaries of the military departments, and directors of defense agencies with assigned research, development, test, and evaluation. The provision would also specifically address the role of the Chief of Naval Research relative to assigned duties relating to basic and applied research and advanced technology development as provided in section 5022 of Title 10, United States Code. By transition to higher levels of RDT&E, the conferees intend to include the following: transition of technology to higher budget categories of RDT&E; to useful application in industry to operational military techniques; to accessing, retaining, training and educating military and civilian members of the Department of Defense; to procurement and to other applications that improve the effectiveness or reduce the cost of equipment or operations within the Department.

The conferees are concerned that the percentage of technology initiatives incorporated into acquisition programs continues to be low. In some cases, this transition problem may be attributable to the rapid pace of technological developments and the comparatively slow pace of the acquisition system. However, there also appears to be a communication problem between the science and technology community and the acquisition community in all three services. The conferees believe that a strong commitment to technology transition is needed in both communities to ensure the successful incorporation of technology developments into weapon systems.

The amendment would authorize the Secretary of Defense to appoint individuals and fix their compensation without the review or approval of the Office of Personnel Management or any other outside official or agency.

The conferees believe that this is the single most important step the Secretary of Defense could take to enable the defense laboratories to compete with the private sector for scientific talent, and that the applicable requirements could adequately be addressed through after-the-fact review. The conferees urge the Secretary of Defense to provide the laboratory directors with direct hiring authority, as authorized by this section.

TITLE XII—MATTERS RELATING TO OTHER NATIONS

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A-Matters Related to Arms Control

Support of United Nations-sponsored efforts to inspect and monitor Iraqi weapons activities (sec. 1201)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1201) that would extend, through fiscal year 2001, the authority of the Department of Defense to support United Nations-sponsored inspection and monitoring efforts to ensure full Iraqi compliance with its international obligations to destroy its weapons of mass destruction and associated delivery systems. The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 1202).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Support of consultations on Arab and Israeli arms control and regional security issues (sec. 1202)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1211) that would authorize up to $1.0 million from Defense-wide Operation and Maintenance accounts for the support of programs to promote informal, region-wide consultations among Arab, Israeli, and U.S. officials and experts on arms control and security issues concerning the Middle East region.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to convey or to provide nuclear test monitoring equipment to a foreign government, subject to a required agreement.

The conferees believe that section 2608 of title 10, United States Code, already permits the Secretary of Defense to accept and to use contributions for purposes specified in the Senate amendment. Therefore, the conferees do not believe that additional authority is required. If the Secretary, in consultation with the Office of Management and Budget, determines that additional authority is required, the conferees are willing to reevaluate this matter in the future.

Additional matters for annual report on transfers of militarily sensitive technology to countries and entities of concern (sec. 1204)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1075) that would require that the annual report required by section 1402 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) on transfers of militarily sensitive technology to countries of concern include a description of actions taken on recommendations of inspectors general contained in previous annual reports.

Subtitle B—Matters Relating to the Balkans

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would sunset the reporting requirement upon termination of U.S. military activities in the Balkans.

Situation in the Balkans (sec. 1212)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1203) that would require the President to establish, not later than May 31, 2001, militarily significant benchmarks for conditions that would achieve a sustainable peace in Kosovo and ultimately allow for the withdrawal of the U.S. military presence in Kosovo. In developing those benchmarks, the Congress would urge the President to seek the concurrence of North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) member nations. The provision would also require the President to develop a comprehensive political-military strategy for addressing the political, economic, humanitarian and military issues in the Balkans, and to establish near-term, mid-term and long-term objectives in the region. Finally, the provision would require the President to submit semiannual reports, beginning no later than June 30, 2001, on the progress being made in developing and implementing a comprehensive political-military strategy, and the progress being made in achieving the conditions established by the benchmarks.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would direct the President to submit a single semiannual report on the progress made in achieving both the benchmarks for Kosovo and the benchmarks for Bosnia, as required by section 7 of the 1998 Supplemental Appropriations and Rescissions Act (Public Law 105–174), and would make other technical modifications.

Semiannual report on Kosovo peacekeeping (sec. 1213)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1205) that would prohibit the use of Department of Defense funds for the continued deployment of U.S. ground combat troops in Kosovo after April 1, 2001, unless the President certifies to the Congress, prior to April 1, 2001, that the European Commission, the member nations of the European Union (EU), and the European member nations of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) have provided specific amounts and types of assistance to the peacekeeping operations in Kosovo. The provision would also require the President to submit to the Congress, not later than April 30, 2001, a plan for the withdrawal of U.S. ground combat troops from Kosovo, if the President does not make the required certification; and submit a report to the Congress detailing the commitments and contributions of various European nations and organizations and the United Nations to the peacekeeping operations in Kosovo.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 1205) that would require a biannual report from the President to the Congress detailing the commitments and contributions of various European nations and organizations and the United Nations to the peacekeeping operations in Kosovo.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that, since congressional action focused attention on this issue earlier this year, European nations and organizations have made progress in providing the assistance and personnel they have pledged to peacekeeping operations in Kosovo. While more needs to be done by the Europeans in providing needed resources to the international community's operations, the conferees recognize that the pace of the civil implementation effort in Kosovo has improved since the beginning of the year. The conferees remain concerned, however, that U.S. troops, and the troops of other nations serving in Kosovo continue to perform a variety of non-military missions to compensate for remaining shortfalls in the civil implementation effort. In recognition of the fact that the United States bore the major share of the military burden for the air war on behalf of Kosovo, European nations agreed to pay the major share of the burden to secure the peace. The conferees believe that the Europeans must fulfill that commitment. The report required by this provision will provide the Congress with the information necessary, on a regular basis, to evaluate the performance of the nations and organizations covered by this provision in fulfilling their commitments regarding Kosovo. It is the intention of the conferees to pursue legislative options in the future if those commitments are not fulfilled.

Subtitle C—North Atlantic Treaty Organization and United States Forces in Europe

NATO fair burdensharing (sec. 1221)

The provision also would require a report from the Secretary whenever NATO undertakes a future military operation with the participation of the United States. The report would include: (1) how the costs of that operation are to be equitably distributed among the NATO member nations; or (2) how the United States is to be compensated by other NATO member nations, if the costs are borne disproportionately by the United States. The report would be due 30 days after the beginning of a military operation, or later, if the Secretary determines that such a delay is necessary to avoid an undue burden to ongoing operations.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would: (1) delete the requirement for the Secretary to report on whether and how the United States is being compensated by other NATO nations for the costs of Operation Allied Force; (2) change the reporting requirement on future NATO military operations to apply to all NATO operations, and to include information on the contributions to that operation made by each of the member nations of NATO and the contributions that each member nation of NATO makes or has pledged to make during any follow-on operation; and, (3) require the report on future operations to be submitted not later than 90 days after the completion of the military operation.

The study would include an assessment of a number of issues related to the U.S. military presence in Europe and the contributions made by the European allies of the United States. The report would be submitted to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives not later than March 1, 2001.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would change the report to a study of the benefits and costs of U.S. military engagement in Europe and change the date for the submission of the report to December 1, 2001.

The report shall include the Secretary's assessment of the benefits and risks of sharing such data with other countries on a bilateral or multilateral basis.

Annual report of Communist Chinese military companies operating in the United States (sec. 1233)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1208) that would express the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense has not complied with requirements of section 1237 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261) to publish and update a list of Communist Chinese military companies operating in the United States.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would eliminate the sense of Congress and would amend section 1237 to require the Secretary to report on, rather than publish, a list of Communist Chinese military companies operating in the United States. The Secretary would be directed to submit that report to the following: the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives; the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate; the Secretary of State; the Secretary of the Treasury; the Attorney General; the Secretary of Commerce; the Secretary of Energy; and the Director of Central Intelligence.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 1214).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

The conferees believe that the administration needs to adequately assess the national security implications of commercial technological diffusion before new export levels are proposed. For that reason, the conferees direct the Secretary of Defense and the Director for Central Intelligence to jointly submit to Congress, not later than April 1, 2001, a report on the national security implications of trends in the research and development, manufacture, use, and proliferation of information technology in the commercial sector.

The report shall include a discussion of the following matters: (1) whether commercially available information technology has been or could be used for military and intelligence purposes by foreign nations and terrorist organizations, and the threats that such uses could pose to U.S. national security interests; (2) the advisability of inserting commercially available information technology as components into U.S. weapons systems, together with a discussion of the challenges associated with doing so; (3) whether the United States has the ability to control the proliferation of commercially available information technology effectively through unilateral or multilateral export control regimes; and (4) the identification of critical commercially available information technologies and associated knowledge for which unilateral, multilateral, or alternative export controls may be needed in the preservation of U.S. national security interests. The report should also consider the advisability of establishing a center to assess the military utility of commercially available information technology produced by both U.S. and foreign commercial sectors.

Increased authority to provide healthcare services as humanitarian and civic assistance (sec. 1235)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 321) that would allow under-served areas, as well as rural areas, to receive medical, dental, and veterinary services through the humanitarian and civic assistance program.

The amendment would also provide that the members of the Trade Deficit Review Commission, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, shall serve as members of the United States-China Security Review Commission until such time as members are appointed.

Funding allocations (sec. 1302)

The budget request included $458.4 million for the Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) Program.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1302) that would authorize $443.4 million for the CTR Program for fiscal year 2001, a $15.0 million decrease. The provision would increase funding for strategic nuclear arms elimination projects in Russia and Ukraine, decrease funding for defense and military contacts, and deny funding, pursuant to the prohibition contained in section 1305 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65), for activities related to a chemical weapons destruction facility in Russia.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

The assessment would be due 60 days after the date on which the annual report is submitted to Congress.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1305) that would limit not more than 10 percent of fiscal year 2001 Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) funds from being expended or obligated until the Department of Defense submits to Congress an updated version of the CTR multiyear plan for fiscal year 2001, and another provision (sec. 1306) that would require the first report on Russian nonstrategic nuclear arms to be submitted to Congress not later than October 1, 2000.

The House recedes with an amendment that would add the provisions from the House bill to the CTR consolidated report, require the first consolidated report to be due on February 5, 2001, and narrow the scope of the Comptroller General's assessment to a review of the five year plan and the audits and examinations information in the annual report. This assessment would be submitted to Congress not later than 90 days after the date the CTR annual report is submitted to Congress, with the first Comptroller General's assessment submitted in 2001.

The conferees note that there have been repeated delays in the submission of the CTR reports to the Congress. The conferees expect that consolidating CTR reporting requirements into one annual report will facilitate the Department's ability to meet the congressionally mandated due date each year. The conferees believe that meeting this deadline provides the Congress with critical programmatic information crucial to the oversight of the CTR program. Failure to meet such deadlines impedes congressional oversight and is of great concern to the conferees. In light of this concern, the conferees expect the Department to meet the CTR report requirements and deadline, and agree that noncompliance may warrant future legislative measures to limit funding obligations and expenditures until such time as the necessary information is provided to the Congress.

Russian chemical weapons elimination (sec. 1309)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1208) that would amend the prohibition contained in section 1305 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) to limit fiscal year 2000 Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) funds, and funds appropriated after the date of enactment, from being obligated or expended to construct the Shchuch'ye chemical weapons destruction facility in Russia until 30 days after the Secretary of Defense certifies in writing to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives that for that fiscal year four specific criteria have been met. These criteria are: (1) that the government of Russia has agreed to provide at least $25.0 million annually for the construction, support, and operation of the facility; (2) that Russia has agreed to utilize this facility to destroy the remaining four stockpiles of nerve agents located throughout Russia; (3) that the United States has obtained multiyear commitments from the international community for the support of social infrastructure projects for Shchuch'ye; and (4) that Russia has agreed to destroy its chemical weapons production facilities at Volgograd and Novocheboksark.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would express support for international assistance, when practicable, to assist Russia in eliminating its chemical weapons stockpile in accordance with Russia's obligations under the Chemical Weapons Convention. The amendment would also require that the Secretary of Defense submit a report to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives that identifies: (1) the amount of money spent by Russia for chemical weapons elimination during fiscal year 2000; (2) the assistance being provided by the international community for the safe storage and elimination of Russia's stockpile of nerve agents, including those at Shchuch'ye; (3) the countries providing the assistance; and (4) the value of the assistance that the international community has already provided and has committed for this purpose.

The conferees agree not to repeal or amend the existing prohibition contained in Public Law 106–65 on funding for the chemical weapons destruction facility in Russia. The conferees believe the international community should take a more active role in assisting Russia with its chemical weapons elimination efforts. The conferees will continue to monitor progress in the effort to reduce and eliminate the threat from Russia's chemical weapons, including the participation of the international community in this effort. The conferees note that there are a number of options available within the CTR Program to advance U.S. threat reduction and nonproliferation objectives, including assisting Russia in its efforts to secure and eliminate its chemical weapons stockpiles. The conferees note the availability of prior-year funds that may be used to support this effort.

Limitation on use of funds for elimination of weapons grade plutonium program (sec. 1310)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1209) that would prevent more than 50 percent of fiscal year 2001 Cooperative Threat Reduction (CTR) funds from being obligated or expended until 30 days after the Secretary of Defense submits to Congress a report on an agreement between the United States and Russia regarding a new option selected for the shut down or conversion of the reactors in the elimination of weapons grade plutonium program in Russia. The report must also contain the new date when such reactors will cease production of weapons grade plutonium and any cost sharing arrangements between Russia and the United States in undertaking the activities in this program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Report on audits of Cooperative Threat Reduction programs (sec. 1311)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1310) that would direct the Comptroller General to submit to Congress a report not later than March 31, 2001, examining the procedures and mechanisms with respect to audits by the Department of Defense of the use of funds for Cooperative Threat Reduction programs.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Limitation on use of funds for prevention of biological weapons proliferation in Russia

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1311) that would limit Cooperative Threat Reduction funds from being obligated or expended for the prevention of proliferation of biological weapons in Russia until the President submits to Congress the report on the Expanded Threat Reduction Initiative required by section 1309 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65). This report was due March 31, 2000.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

TITLE XIV—COMMISSION TO ASSESS THE THREAT TO THE UNITED STATES FROM ELECTROMAGNETIC PULSE (EMP) ATTACK

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Commission to assess the threat to the United States from electromagnetic pulse (EMP) attack (secs. 1401–1409)

The House bill contained a provision (secs. 1401–1409) that would establish a Commission to Assess the Threat to the United States from Electromagnetic Pulse (EMP) Attack.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Defense to submit a report to Congress commenting on the Commission's findings and conclusions, describing the political-military scenarios that could possibly lead to an EMP attack against the United States, evaluating the relative likelihood of an EMP attack against the United States compared to other threats involving nuclear weapons, and explaining the actions intended to implement the recommendations of the Commission and the reasons for doing so.

TITLE XV—NAVY ACTIVITIES ON THE ISLAND OF VIEQUES, PUERTO RICO

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Navy activities on the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico (secs. 1501–1508)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 1501) that would convey the Navy property, comprising the Naval Ammunition Support Detachment, on the western side of the Island of Vieques, Puerto Rico, except the communication and radar sites, to the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico under the terms of the agreement between the President and the Governor of Puerto Rico.

The Senate amendment contained provisions (secs. 1301–1308) that would support the agreement reached between the President and the Governor of Puerto Rico intended to restore relations between the people of Vieques and the Navy, and to provide for the continuation of live fire training on the Island of Vieques. Specifically, the Senate bill would authorize $40.0 million for infrastructure and other economic projects on the Island of Vieques, and would require the President to conduct a referendum on Vieques to determine whether the people of Vieques approve or disapprove of the continuation of live-fire military training on the island. The conservation zones on the western side of the island, containing seven endangered and threatened species, would be transferred to the Secretary of Interior to be administered as wildlife refuges. If the people of Vieques approve the continuation of live-fire training, the provision would authorize an additional $50.0 million in economic aid for the island. If the people of Vieques disapprove the continuation of live-fire training, the provision would require the Navy and Marine Corps to cease all training operations on the Island of Vieques by May 1, 2003; to terminate any operations at Roosevelt Roads related to the use of training ranges on Vieques, to reduce other defense activities at Roosevelt Roads to levels necessary for national security reasons, and to transfer all Navy property on the eastern side of the Island of Vieques to the Secretary of the Interior. The Secretary of Interior would be required to retain the transferred properties subject to further congressional action regarding disposition.

The conferees remain concerned about the lack of live-fire access to the Naval training facility on the Island of Vieques, and the related negative consequences for Navy and Marine Corps readiness. In testimony before the Congress, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, along with the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps, stated that Vieques provides integrated live-fire training ''. . . critical to our readiness.'' The Secretary of the Navy also testified that ''. . . only by providing this preparation can we fairly ask our service members to put their lives at risk.'' The concern of the Joint Chiefs of Staff were reinforced by operational commanders including the Commander of the Sixth Fleet of the Navy who stated that the loss of Vieques would ''cost American lives.''

The House recedes.

The conferees agree to include provisions that would support the agreement reached between the President and the Governor of Puerto Rico regarding the future of Navy live-fire military training on Vieques. The conferees agree to authorize $40.0 million in immediate economic assistance for the Municipality of Vieques.

The conferees would specifically include a provision that would transfer, with certain exceptions, the land comprising the Navy Ammunition Support Detachment to the Municipality of Vieques. The property would be administered, managed, and controlled by the Municipality of Vieques in a manner that is determined to be most advantageous to the majority of the residents of Vieques. The relocatable over-the-horizon radar site, the telecommunications equipment site on Mount Pirata, and any easements or rights-of-way associated with these sites would be exempted from transfer and retained by the Navy.

The conservation zones on the land comprising the Navy Ammunition Support Detachment would be transferred to the Secretary of Interior to be administered and managed by the Secretary as a wildlife refuge through a cooperative agreement among the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the Puerto Rico Conservation Trust, and the Secretary of Interior. Property adjacent to these wildlife refuge areas could be included in the cooperative agreement, however, such areas would not exceed 800 acres. If the cooperative agreement is not completed before the required transfer date, the Secretary of Interior should begin the administration and management of the land as wildlife refuges.

Given the importance of the Navy training range to national security and the unique circumstances of the people of Vieques, the conferees would also include a provision that would require a binding referendum by the people of Vieques to determine if the range should remain available for live-fire training. The referendum would require that the residents of Vieques vote on the future of live-fire training at the Navy range on Vieques. The vote would take place on May 1, 2001, or 270 days before or after that date. The conferees would authorize the referendum, despite remaining reservations regarding the propriety of such an action, and would also do so with the clear expectation that this represents a unique circumstance, and such local referenda should not be used to determine the status of national security assets.

The conferees agree to authorize an additional $50.0 million to provide economic assistance to the people of Vieques if there is a vote in favor of continued live-fire training at the Navy range.

If the people of Vieques disapprove continued live-fire training, or the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps jointly submit to the congressional defense committees a certification that the range is no longer needed for training by the Navy and the Marine Corps, all Navy owned land on the eastern side of the island, with the exception of the live-fire area, would be transferred to the Secretary of Interior to be administered and managed as a wildlife refuge. The live impact area would be administered as a wilderness area with no public access permitted.

Finally, the conferees would also include a provision that would impose a moratorium on new construction at Fort Buchanan pending a determination that such construction would be required despite the potential for relocation to Roosevelt Roads. Reserve component and nonappropriated fund facilities would not be included in the moratorium.

The conferees recognize and appreciate the sacrifice made by the people of Vieques and other communities located near U.S. military training installations, which have ensured the readiness of U.S. military forces. The conferees remain concerned that future training may be jeopardized as a result of historically poor relations with the people of Vieques, and the tragic accident which resulted in the death of a civilian employee of the Navy. The conferees hope that the Navy and the people of Vieques will successfully develop and sustain a cooperative relationship for the future.

Bill, in whole or in part, to their dependents.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

TITLE XVII—ASSISTANCE TO FIREFIGHTERS

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Assistance to Firefighters (secs. 1701–1707)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 1072) that would authorize a six-year, $3.1 billion competitive federal grant program to provide assistance to local firefighting departments for the purpose of protecting the health and safety of the public and firefighting personnel, including volunteers and emergency medical service personnel, against fire and fire-related hazards. The provision would authorize grant funds to be used for various firefighting related activities including the hiring of additional personnel, the training of personnel, the procurement of vehicles and other equipment, certification of fire inspectors, and similar activities. A 10 percent matching requirement of non-federal funds under this program would be required. The Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) would be responsible for the administration of the program.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize a series of provisions (secs. 1701–1707) to provide assistance to local firefighting departments.

The amendment would authorize a two-year, $400.0 million competitive grant program to provide assistance to local firefighting departments. Each grant could not exceed $750,000. In order for a grant applicant to receive funds, the applicant would have to demonstrate a financial need for the assistance; outline the costs and benefits of public safety in relation to the use of the assistance; and agree to provide information to the National Fire Incident Reporting System. There would be a 30 percent matching requirement of non-federal funds under this program for fire departments that serve more than 50,000 people, and a 10 percent matching requirement of non-federal funds for fire departments that serve 50,000 people or less. The Director of FEMA would be required to ensure that communities protected by volunteer firefighters receive grant funding that at least reflects a proportionate share, as compared to the U.S. population as a whole. The Director of FEMA would also be required to submit a report to Congress that provides the current role and activities associated with the fire services, the adequacy of current funding, and a needs assessment to identify shortfalls. The Director of FEMA would consult with the chief executive of a state when making a direct grant.

The amendment would also include a two-year, $30.0 million program to provide assistance to state foresters or equivalent state officials for firefighting activities. The Secretary of Agriculture would be responsible for the administration of this program. The Secretary of Agriculture would be required to submit a report to Congress on the results of the assistance provided under this program.

The amendment would further authorize a two-year, $30.0 million competitive grant program to hospitals that serve as regional burn centers, to safety organizations that conduct burn safety programs to assist burn prevention programs, to programs that augment existing burn prevention programs, or to other entities that provide after-burn treatment and counseling for burn victims. The Director of FEMA would be responsible for the administration of the program. The Director would be required to submit a report to Congress on the results of the assistance provided under this aspect of the grant program.

The amendment would also require the Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor, to conduct a study regarding the prevalence of hepatitis C among emergency response employees of the United States. The Secretary of Health and Human Services, in consultation with the Secretary of Labor, would also be authorized to make grants to qualifying local governments that are qualified to carry out demonstration projects that train employees to minimize the risk of hepatitis C infection, and to test and treat employees for the disease.

The amendment would further require the Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Attorney General and the Secretary of Commerce, to conduct an engineering study to identify any portions of the 138–144 megahertz band that the Department of Defense can share with public safety radio services in various geographic regions of the United States. The study would include recommended measures necessary to prevent harmful interference between the Department of Defense systems and the public safety systems, and a reasonable schedule for the sharing of frequencies, provided such sharing can be accomplished without causing interference. The Secretary of Commerce and the Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission would also be required to submit a report to Congress on alternative frequencies that are, or could be made, available for use by public safety systems.

The amendment would authorize the Secretary of Defense to transfer excess personal property of the Department of Defense to firefighting agencies if the property is determined to be suitable for use in providing fire and emergency medical services. The property would have to be drawn from existing stocks of the Department of Defense and made without cost to the Department. The recipient firefighting department would accept the property on an as-is, where-is basis and cover all costs of the transfer of the property.

Finally, the amendment would require the establishment of a task force to identify defense technologies and equipment that could be readily put to use by fire service and emergency response personnel, and could be transferred to fire departments. The task force would consist of a representative from the Department of Defense and each of the seven organizations representing various views in firefighting.

TITLE XVIII—IMPACT AID

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Impact Aid Reauthorization Act of 2000 (secs. 1801–1818)

The conference agreement includes provisions that would amend the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7701) to extend the authority for, and to restructure, assistance programs for local educational agencies impacted by federal presence. The provisions would make adjustments to the impact aid program to accommodate military housing privatization initiatives and would restructure the formula to increase impact aid to schools serving military children. Other provisions would hold school districts harmless in cases where military children have been temporarily relocated to off-base housing while on-base housing is renovated and would provide additional support to school districts required to support privatized military housing areas constructed on non-federal land. The provisions would accelerate payment of impact aid to the most severely effected school districts and would authorize the Secretary of Education to provide grants to school districts to renovate and repair schools with the greatest need. The provisions would also establish a minimum funding level for small, poor school districts.

Overview

The budget request for fiscal year 2001 included $8,033,908,000 for military construction and family housing.

The House bill would authorize $8,433,908,000 for military construction and family housing.

The Senate amendment would provide $8,463,908,000 for this purpose.

The conferees recommend authorization of appropriations of $8,821,172,000 for military construction and family housing, including general reductions and revised economic assumptions.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Support for Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams

The conferees included $25.0 million for Unspecified Minor Construction, Army National Guard, to support the activation of the Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams. Applicability of competition policy to alternative authority for acquisition and improvement of military family housing

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 2805) that would amend subchapter IV of chapter 169 of title 10, United States Code, to require that the secretary concerned use competitive procedures when exercising the alternative authorities for the acquisition and improvement of military housing. The secretary concerned could waive competitive procedures if he determines competition would be inconsistent with the public interest and notifies the Congress in writing of such determination not less than 30 days before entering the agreement.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note the innovative approaches undertaken by the service secretaries in execution of the alternative authorities for the acquisition and improvement of military housing. The conferees remain strongly supportive of these authorities and believe competition in the private marketplace has resulted in a number of successful procurements after an early period of difficulty in program implementation. While supportive of a variety of innovative options to construct and acquire military housing under these authorities, the conferees were concerned that a methodology considered by the Secretary of the Air Force in the determination of the awardee of the housing privatization project at Patrick Air Force Base, Florida, appeared to be noncompetitive and to delegate the selection process to the private sector. The conferees are aware that the Secretary has subsequently directed a change in the solicitation process. The conferees reiterate that the use of competitive procedures should apply when exercising the alternative authorities for the acquisition and improvement of military housing, regardless of the process that may be used.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note that the Secretary of the Army and the Ellis School are in the process of negotiating a land exchange under the authority provided by section 18233 of title 10, United States Code. The conferees urge the Secretary to complete the exchange as soon as practical and on an equitable basis.

Land conveyance, Lieutenant General Malcolm Hay Army Reserve Center, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 2832) that would authorize the Secretary of the Army to convey, at fair market value, a parcel of real property, with improvements, located at 950 Saw Mill Run Boulevard in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and containing the Lieutenant General Malcolm Hay Army Reserve Center to the City of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The cost of any surveys necessary for the conveyance would be borne by the City.

The lease would be subject to the condition that the City maintain the property at no cost to the United States, make the property available to the existing tenant at no cost, and use the property solely for recreational purposes. The cost of any survey necessary for the lease would be borne by the City.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

ITEMS OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Report on authorities and limitations in general recurring provisions

The conferees direct the Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Administrator for Nuclear Security and the Assistant Secretary for Environmental Management, to submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives, not later than January 15, 2001, a report on the effect, advantages, and disadvantages of the authorities granted and limitations imposed in sections 3121 through 3129 of this Act.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Subtitle A—National Security Programs Authorizations

National Nuclear Security Administration (sec. 3101)

The budget request included $6.2 billion for activities of the Department of Energy (DOE) National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA).

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3101) that would authorize $6.3 billion for activities of the NNSA, an increase of $91.8 million.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3101) that would authorize $6.3 billion for activities of the NNSA, an increase of $124.7 million.

The conferees agree to authorize $6.4 billion for activities of the NNSA, an increase of $244.7 million.

Weapons activities

The budget request included $4.6 billion for weapons activities, including: $836.6 million for directed stockpile work; $1.0 billion for campaigns; $2.0 billion for readiness in technical base and facilities; $115.7 million for secure transportation asset; $414.2 million for construction; and $224.1 million for program direction.

The House bill would authorize $4.7 billion for weapons activities, an increase of $83.8 million. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $856.6 million for directed stockpile work; $2.1 billion for campaigns; $1.4 billion for readiness in technical base and facilities; $115.7 million for secure transportation asset; $159.8 million for construction; and $216.9 million for program direction.

The Senate amendment would authorize $4.7 billion for weapons activities, an increase of $153.8 million. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $842.6 million for directed stockpile work; $1.5 billion for campaigns; $1.5 billion for readiness in technical base and facilities; $115.7 million for secure transportation asset; $588.2 million for construction; and $221.6 million for program direction.

The conferees agree to authorize $4.8 billion for weapons activities, an increase of $246.3 million. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $862.6 million for directed stockpile work, an increase of $26.0 million; $2.1 billion for campaigns, an increase of $749.8 million; $1.6 billion for readiness in technical base and facilities, a decrease of $524.5 million; $115.7 million for secure transportation asset, the amount of the budget request; and $219.1 million for program direction, a decrease of $5.0 million.

Directed stockpile work

In the directed stockpile work account, the conferees agree to authorize: an increase of $6.0 million for a cooperative research effort with the Department of Defense regarding defeating hard and deeply buried targets; an increase of $5.0 million for life extension and repairs for the B–61 warhead and other directed stockpile work at the Kansas City Plant; an increase of $4.0 million for life extension and repairs for the B–61 and W–76 warheads and other directed stockpile work at the Y–12 Plant; an increase of $5.0 million for radiographic inspection of nuclear weapons components and assemblies, vacuum chamber inspection activities, testing in the accelerated aging unit, and other stockpile evaluation activities at the Pantex plant; and an increase of $6.0 million for quality evaluation and certification activities and joint test assemblies at the Y–12 plant.

Campaigns

In the campaigns account, the conferees agree to authorize: an increase of $15.0 million for the pit manufacturing readiness campaign to begin conceptual design activities for a pit production facility adequate to meet future national security needs; an increase of $477.1 million for the defense computing and modeling campaign to reflect the consolidation of all defense computing and modeling activities into a single program line item; an increase of $144.7 million to reflect the consolidation of all inertial confinement fusion activities into a single program line item; an increase of $10.0 million for joint Department of Defense-NNSA high energy laser research; an increase of $135.0 million for the National Ignition Facility construction, which includes a transfer of $40.0 million from the inertial confinement fusion ignition and high yield campaign operations and maintenance account; an increase of $3.0 million to complete the American Textiles Partnership (AMTEX) project; an increase of $25.0 million for continued preliminary design and engineering development activities in the accelerator production of tritium project (98–D–126); a decrease of $20.0 million to the defense computing and modeling campaign to reflect delays in acquisition of the 100-trillion-operations-per-second computer platform and to slow the rate of growth in the Visual Interactive Environment Weapon Simulation (VIEWS) and university partnership programs; and the budget request of $32.1 million for the University of Rochester's Laboratory for Laser Energetics.

Readiness in technical base and facilities

In the readiness in technical base and facilities account, the conferees agree to authorize: an increase of $56.3 million to reflect the movement of the nuclear emergency search team and accident response group from the other defense activities emergency management account to the weapons activities account; an increase of $20.0 million for the Kansas City Plant to continue advanced manufacturing, modernization, infrastructure enhancement, and skills retention efforts; an increase of $13.0 million for the Pantex Plant for infrastructure improvements; an increase of $8.0 million for the Y–12 Plant for infrastructure improvements; a decrease of $144.7 million to reflect the transfer of inertial confinement fusion activities to the inertial confinement fusion ignition and high yield campaign account; and a decrease of $477.1 million to reflect the transfer of computing and modeling activities to the defense computing and modeling campaign account.

Of the funds available for directed stockpile work, the conferees agree to authorize $5.0 million for a cooperative program with the Defense Threat Reduction Agency to reestablish a vigorous nuclear weapon effects test capability. The program shall emphasize the need to invest in all elements of nuclear weapon effects technologies, including basic phenomenology, analysis and modeling, radiation effects simulation, and hardening technologies.

The conferees recommend that the fiscal year 2002 budget request include a separate program element for the operation of each NNSA facility, rather than one consolidated facility operations program element.

Construction

In the construction account, the conferees agree to authorize no funding. The conferees transferred all construction projects to the campaigns and readiness in technical base and facilities accounts. The conferees direct the Administrator to submit an NNSA budget request in fiscal year 2002 that reflects the alignment of construction projects with associated program elements.

Program direction

In the program direction account, the conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $5.0 million.

The conferees direct that the proposed decrease be achieved through the reorganization and realignment of headquarters and field office roles and responsibilities. The conferees believe that the performance of the Office of Defense Programs will be improved by eliminating duplicative efforts and by streamlining management control of DOE weapons activities.

The conferees continue to believe that the Office of Defense Programs is overstaffed. The conferees note that several independent assessments of the organizational structure of the Office of Defense Programs, dating back as far as calendar year 1997, have also concluded that the Office of Defense Programs would benefit from a realignment of headquarters and field organization personnel. The conferees expect the Department to utilize the authority to make the voluntary separation incentive payments authorized in the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) to fully implement the realignment recommendations described in the calendar year 1997 report by the Institute for Defense Analysis. The conferees encourage the Administrator to make effective use of this authority to establish up to 300 excepted service positions in the Administration provided in section 3241 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (P.L. 106–65). The conferees believe that this authority will be a valuable tool to provide NNSA with personnel competent to manage technically complex projects.

Budget structure for Office of the Deputy Administrator for Defense Programs

The conferees commend the Office of Defense Programs for establishing a more detailed and transparent budget structure. The conferees continue to believe that this new budget structure will greatly enhance the effectiveness of these programs and instill a higher degree of budgetary discipline in the Office of Defense Programs. The conferees further believe that the new budget structure will also assist Congress in assessing the degree of integration among varied experiments, simulation, research, and weapons assessments activities carried out at DOE weapons laboratories and production plants. The conferees direct that future budget requests for weapons activities clearly identify the funding required for each campaign and each program under the directed stockpile work and the readiness in technical base and facilities accounts.

National Ignition Facility

The conferees remain disappointed at the management, schedule, and budget difficulties experienced by the NIF program, but are convinced of the significance of the project in sustaining the U.S. nuclear stockpile. The conferees believe that recent improvements in program management justify the increase for NIF construction.

Nuclear Emergency Search Team

The conferees note that the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104–106) requires that the Nuclear Emergency Search Team (NEST) remain a program function within the Office of Military Applications under the Office of Defense Programs. The conferees have transferred NEST funding from the Department of Energy Other Defense Activities account to the NNSA to reflect this requirement.

Accelerated Strategic Computing Initiative

The conferees note that the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) expressed concern about the rate of growth in the Advanced Strategic Computing Initiative (ASCI) and Strategic Computing accounts. The conferees believe that the rate of growth for the NNSA defense computing and modeling campaign remains very high and that such funding increases have not been adequately justified. The conferees encourage the Administrator for Nuclear Security to properly align resources for ASCI and other computing and modeling activities with other experimental tools required to sustain the U.S. nuclear stockpile.

Plutonium pit production

The conferees are aware that the November 8, 1999, report of the Panel to Assess the Reliability, Safety, and Security of the U.S. Nuclear Stockpile stated that its ''paramount concern'' with the DOE stockpile stewardship program ''. . . is the need to begin work now on an adequate plutonium pit production manufacturing capability.'' The conferees endorse this finding and direct the Secretary of Energy to begin conceptual design activities for a pit production facility with a capacity adequate to meet future national security needs immediately.

Accelerator Production of Tritium

The conferees are concerned about proposals to fund continued APT design activities in the Office of Nuclear Energy, Science and Technology. In order to maintain clear lines of authority, the conferees believe that programs with direct relevance to the core missions of NNSA should be managed and funded by NNSA.

Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation

The budget request included $906.0 million for defense nuclear nonproliferation and fissile materials disposition, including: $233.0 million for nonproliferation verification research and development; $408.1 million for arms control; $213.5 million for fissile materials disposition; and $51.5 million for program direction.

The House bill would authorize $914.0 million for defense nuclear nonproliferation, an increase of $8.0 million. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $233.0 million for nonproliferation verification research and development; $408.1 million for arms control; $221.5 million for fissile materials disposition; and $51.5 million for program direction.

The Senate amendment would authorize $859.5 million for defense nuclear nonproliferation, a decrease of $46.5 million. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $263.0 million for nonproliferation verification research and development; $320.6 million for arms control; $224.5 million for fissile materials disposition; and $51.5 million for program direction.

The conferees agree to authorize $877.5 million for defense nuclear nonproliferation, a decrease of $28.6 million. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $253.0 million for nonproliferation verification research and development, an increase of $20.0 million; $320.6 million for arms control, a decrease of $87.5 million; $252.4 million for fissile materials disposition, an increase of $29.0 million; and $51.5 million for program direction, the amount of the budget request.

The conferees note that the Department of Energy Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation Program was formerly known as the nonproliferation and national security account during fiscal year 2000. Because DOE did not request these funds under separate budget accounts, as required by section 3251 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65), the conferees have renamed and consolidated these activities into a single account. The conferees further note that the request included separate program direction accounts for the Office of Nonproliferation and Office of Fissile Materials Disposition. The conferees established a single defense nuclear nonproliferation account.

Nonproliferation verification research and development

In the nonproliferation verification research and development account the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $20.0 million for detecting and deterring weapons of mass destruction proliferation, monitoring nuclear explosions, detecting and responding to chemical and biological weapons attacks, and conducting evaluations of the technical capabilities of other geographic areas that pose a threat to U.S. National Security because of the potential for development and delivery of weapons of mass destruction.

Arms control

In the arms control account the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $12.5 million for the Nuclear Cities Initiative. The conferees would authorize no funding for the long-term nonproliferation program for Russia.

Fissile materials control and disposition

In the fissile materials control and disposition account, the conferees agree to authorize an increase of $11.0 million to accelerate design activities for the mixed oxide fuel fabrication facility.

Naval Reactors

The budget request included $677.6 million for naval reactors.

The House bill would authorize $677.6 million for naval reactors, the amount of the request.

The Senate amendment would authorize $695.0 million for naval reactors, an increase of $17.4 million.

The conferees agree to authorize $694.6 million for naval reactors, an increase of $17.0 million for expedited decommissioning and decontamination activities at surplus facilities.

Office of the Administrator

The conferees agree to authorize $10.0 million for the Office of the Administrator, an increase of $10.0 million. The conferees note that the budget request did not include funding for the Office of the Administrator. The conferees direct that future budget requests include a separate budget line for the administrative activities of the Office of the Administrator.

Safeguards and security activities

The conferees note that DOE has proposed a budget amendment that would consolidate all safeguards and security funds into a single program to be managed by the Office of Security and Emergency Operations. The conferees do not support this proposal. The conferees direct that all funds authorized for safeguards and security activities pursuant to this section be managed exclusively by NNSA employees or NNSA contractor employees. Consistent with the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (Title 32 of Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 957; 50 U.S.C. 2402) the Administrator for Nuclear Security is not authorized to transfer or delegate responsibility for any safeguards and security activities of the NNSA to any employee or office outside the NNSA.

Defense environmental restoration and waste management (sec. 3102)

The budget request included $4.6 billion for environmental management activities of the Department of Energy (DOE).

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3102) that would authorize $4.6 billion for environmental management activities, an increase of $40.0 million. The amount authorized would be for the following activities: $1.0 billion for site and project completion, an increase of $40.0 million; $3.1 billion for post 2006 completion, the amount of the budget request; $196.5 million for science and technology development, the amount of the budget request; and $359.9 million for program direction, the amount of the budget request.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3102) that would authorize $5.6 billion for environmental management activities, including closure activities, a decrease of $56.9 million. The amount authorized would be for the following activities: $1.1 billion for closure projects, the amount of the budget request; $930.9 million for site and project completion, a decrease of $40.0 million; $3.2 billion for post 2006 completion, an increase of $70.0 million; $246.5 million for technology development, an increase of $50.0 million; and $354.9 million for program direction, a decrease of $5.0 million. The Senate provision would also authorize a decrease of $132.0 million to account for available uncosted, unobligated prior year funds and funds to be deobligated from completed, prior year construction projects.

The conferees agree to authorize $6.0 billion for environmental management activities, an increase of $1.4 billion. The amount authorized is for the following activities: $1.1 billion for closure projects, the amount of the budget request; $941.7 million for site and project completion, a decrease of $29.2 million; $3.4 billion for post 2006 completion, an increase of $324.0 million; $246.5 million for technology development, an increase of $50.0 million; and $355.0 million for program direction, a decrease of $4.9 million.

Post 2006 completion

For post 2006 completion activities, the conferees agree to authorize: an increase of $332.0 million to establish a new construction line item for the Tank Waste Remediation System Project; an increase of $10.0 million for the Columbia River Corridor Initiative at the Hanford Site to continue reactor decontamination and decommissioning activities; and a decrease of $18.0 million to reflect the movement of the Environmental Systems Research and Analysis Program into the Science and Technology Development Account. The conferees recommend full funding for the F-canyon and H-canyon materials processing facilities.

The conferees agreed to establish a separate sub-account within the post 2006 completion account for the activities of Office of River Protection. The conferees have consolidated all post 2006 completion construction projects that support operation of the Hanford site tank farm into this sub-account, including a new construction line item for the Tank Waste Remediation System Project.

Site and project completion

For site and project completion activities, the conferees agree to authorize: an increase of $11.0 million to accelerate compliance with 94–1 requirements at the Savannah River Site, including pre-operational activities to support planned stabilization campaigns, acceleration of the Americium/Curium stabilization project, and continued operation of the HB-Line Phase I to process plutonium residues; a decrease of $27.9 million to reflect the transfer of the highly enriched (HEU) uranium blend-down project (01–D–407) to the National Nuclear Security Administration Office of Fissile Materials Disposition; a decrease of $10.0 million in operation and maintenance funds to reflect transfer of the HEU blend-down project; and a decrease of $2.3 million to reflect the movement of the Environmental Systems Research and Analysis Program into the Science and Technology Development account.

Science and technology development

For science and technology development activities, the conferees agree to authorize: an increase of $50.0 million for applied research and development activities. The amount authorized reflects the consolidation of the Environmental Systems Research and Analysis Program into the Science and Technology Development Account.

The conferees note that the cleanup and waste management efforts of the Department will continue well into the 21st Century with costs anticipated to exceed $150.0 billion and much of the cleanup work scheduled to continue beyond fiscal year 2030. DOE must make meaningful investments in innovative science and technology in order to reduce costs, reduce safety and health risks, and develop solutions to problems for which there are currently no available or effective technologies.

Columbia River Corridor Initiative

The conferees support the Columbia River Corridor Initiative to accelerate cleanup along the Hanford Reach of the Columbia River. The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) directed the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management to establish a schedule by which the 100 square miles of the Hanford site that adjoin the Columbia River could be cleaned up on an accelerated schedule and proposed for removal from the National Priorities List. The conferees note that this schedule has not been submitted to Congress. The conferees expect that this report will be provided not later than November 1, 2000.

Report on pilot program to use prior year unobligated balances to accelerate cleanup of the Rocky Flats Environmental Technology Site

The conferees encourage the Secretary of Energy to use the authority provided by section 3176 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) to accelerate closure of the Rocky Flats Environmental Technology Site.

Safeguards and Security Activities

The conferees direct that all funds authorized for safeguards and security activities pursuant to this section be managed exclusively by Office of Environmental Management (EM) employees or EM contractor employees, and that such activities not be transferred or delegated to any office outside EM.

Other defense activities (sec. 3103)

The budget request included $555.1 million for other defense activities.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3103) that would authorize $557.1 million for other defense activities, an increase of $2.0 million.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3103) that would authorize $466.3 million for other defense activities, a decrease of $88.8 million.

The conferees agree to authorize $523.8 million for other defense activities, a decrease of $31.3 million. The amount authorized would be for the following activities: $38.1 million for the Office of Intelligence, the amount of the budget request; $45.2 million for the Office of Counterintelligence, the amount of the budget request; $284.1 million for the Office of Security and Emergency Operations, a decrease of $56.3 million; $14.9 million for independent oversight and performance assurance, the amount of the budget request; $134.1 million for environment, safety and health-defense, an increase of $25.0 million; $24.5 million for the Office of Worker and Community Transition, the amount of the budget request; and $3.0 million for the Office of Hearings and Appeals, the amount of the budget request.

Office of Security and Emergency Operations

The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $56.3 million to the Office of Security and Emergency Operations emergency management program to reflect movement of the nuclear emergency search team to the weapons activities account authorized in section 3101(a)(1) of this Act.

Environment, safety and health-defense

The conferees agree to authorize an increase of $25.0 million for environment, safety and health-defense to carry out the administrative activities associated with the establishment of an occupational illness compensation program for Department of Energy (DOE) and DOE contractor employees at the Department's defense nuclear facilities.

The conferees note that DOE requested authorization to begin making compensation payments in fiscal year 2001 with Atomic Energy Defense funding. The conferees further note that the Secretary of Energy has not submitted a comprehensive legislative proposal to Congress to establish such an employee compensation program. The conferees agree not to authorize any such payments from Atomic Energy Defense funding.

Office of worker and community transition

Of the funds available for worker and community transition activities, the conferees agree to authorize $5.0 million to support cleanup and infrastructure development at the Allied General Nuclear Site immediately adjacent to the DOE Savannah River Site.

The conferees endorse DOE's decision to remove the requirement that management and operating contracts at DOE sites include provisions for conducting economic development activities in the communities surrounding such sites. The conferees encourage DOE contractors to continue to be good corporate citizens by supporting community-based initiatives. The conferees believe, however, that economic development activities of DOE contractors should not be used as a measure of performance or as a selection criteria for the award of contracts.

Defense environmental management privatization (sec. 3104)

The budget request included $540.1 million for defense environmental management privatization projects and the use of $25.1 million from prior year, uncosted balances.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3105) that would authorize $284.1 million for defense environmental management privatization projects, a decrease of $256.0 million. Of the amount authorized: $194.0 million would be for the Tank Waste Remediation System Project, phase I (Richland); $65.0 million would be for the Advanced Mixed Waste Treatment project (Idaho); and $25.1 million would be for spent nuclear fuel dry storage (Idaho). The provision would authorize a decrease of $25.1 million to reflect the use of prior year, uncosted balances in the defense environmental management privatization account.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3104) that would authorize $390.1 million for defense environmental management privatization projects and would authorize a decrease of $150.0 million to the Tank Waste Remediation System (TWRS) Project. The provision would also authorize a decrease of $25.1 million to reflect the use of prior year, uncosted balances in the defense environmental management privatization account.

The conferees agree to authorize $90.1 million for defense environmental management privatization projects, including $65.0 million for the Advanced Mixed Waste Treatment project (Idaho) and $25.1 million for spent nuclear fuel dry storage (Idaho). The conferees agree to authorize a decrease of $90.1 million to reflect the use of prior year, uncosted balances in the defense environmental management privatization account.

The conferees are deeply concerned with the status of the TWRS project. The conferees note that the cost estimate for the construction portion of this project increased from $3.2 billion to $6.4 billion, translating into a total estimated project cost increase from $6.9 billion to over $15.2 billion under the privatization approach. The conferees further understand that these cost estimates were based on a project design that is only 13 to 15 percent complete and, therefore, subject to additional change.

The conferees fully support the TWRS project and believe that the technological approach proposed is viable and realistic. The conferees also believe it is vitally important that this project proceed to full scale construction provided the Secretary of Energy has established a high degree of confidence in the overall project cost and other facility requirements. As a result, the conferees have moved the TWRS project to the post 2006 completion account and recommend no privatization funds for the project.

In order to make the funds for termination liability available for other purposes, the conferees have included a separate provision in this Act that would prohibit the use of appropriated funds to establish a reserve for contract termination costs for the TWRS project.

Defense nuclear waste disposal (sec. 3105)

The budget request included $112.0 million for the Department of Energy (DOE) fiscal year 2001 defense contribution to the Defense Nuclear Waste Fund.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3106) that would authorize $112.0 million for the DOE fiscal year 2001 defense contribution to the Defense Nuclear Waste Fund.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3106).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Subtitle B—Recurring General Provisions

Reprogramming (sec. 3121)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3121) that would prohibit the reprogramming of funds in excess of 110 percent of the amount authorized for the program, or in excess of $1.0 million above the amount authorized for the program, until the Secretary of Energy submits a report to the congressional defense committees and a period of 45 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received.

The Senate bill contained a similar provision (sec. 3121) that would prohibit the reprogramming of funds in excess of 110 percent of the amount authorized for the program, or in excess of $1.0 million above the amount authorized for the program, until the Secretary of Energy submits a report to the congressional defense committees and a period of 30 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received.

The House recedes.

Limits on general plant projects (sec. 3122)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3122) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to carry out any construction project authorized under general plant projects if the total estimated cost does not exceed $5.0 million. The provision would require the Secretary to submit a report to the congressional defense committees detailing the reasons for the cost variation if the cost of the project is revised to exceed $5.0 million.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3122).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Limits on construction projects (sec. 3123)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3123) that would permit any construction project to be initiated and continued only if the estimated cost for the project does not exceed 125 percent of the higher of the amount authorized for the project or the most recent total estimated cost presented to the Congress as justification for such project. The provision would prohibit the Secretary of Energy from exceeding such limits until 30 legislative days after the Secretary submits to the congressional defense committees a detailed report setting forth the reasons for the increase. This provision would also specify that the 125 percent limitation would not apply to projects estimated to cost under $5.0 million.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3123).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Fund transfer authority (sec. 3124)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3124) that would permit funds authorized by this Act to be transferred to other agencies of the government for performance of work for which the funds were authorized and appropriated. The provision would permit the merger of such transferred funds with the authorized funds of the agency to which they are transferred. The provision would also limit, to not more than five percent of the account, the amount of funds authorized by this Act that may be transferred between authorization accounts within the Department of Energy.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3124).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Authority for conceptual and construction design (sec. 3125)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3125) that would limit the authority of the Secretary of Energy to request construction funding until the Secretary has completed a conceptual design. This limitation would apply to construction projects with a total estimated cost greater than $5.0 million. If the estimated cost to prepare the construction design exceeds $600,000, the provision would require the Secretary to obtain a specific authorization to obligate such funds. If the estimated cost to prepare the conceptual design exceeds $3.0 million, the provision would require the Secretary to request funds for the conceptual design before requesting funds for construction. The provision would also provide an exception to these requirements in the case of an emergency.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3125).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Authority for emergency planning, design, and construction activities (sec. 3126)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3126) that would permit the Secretary of Energy to perform planning and design with any funds available to the Department of Energy pursuant to this title, including those funds authorized for advance planning and construction design, whenever the Secretary determines that the design must proceed expeditiously to protect the public health and safety, to meet the needs of national defense, or to protect property.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision (sec. 3126).

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Funds available for all national security programs of the Department of Energy (sec. 3127)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3127) that would authorize amounts for management and support activities and for general plant projects to be made available for use in connection with all national security programs of the Department of Energy.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Availability of funds (sec. 3128)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3127) that would authorize funds for operation and maintenance or for plant projects and capital equipment within the Department of Energy (DOE) national security programs until the later of the following dates: October 1, 2003; or the date of enactment of the Act that would authorize funds for such activities in fiscal year 2004. The provision would also authorize funds for program direction within DOE national security programs until the later of the following dates: October 1, 2001; or the date of enactment of the Act that would authorize funds for program direction in fiscal year 2002.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3128) that would authorize funds for DOE national security programs to remain available until expended, except for program direction funds which would remain available until the end of fiscal year 2003.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize funds for program direction until the end of fiscal year 2002.

The conferees note that section 3152 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–301) required that the National Nuclear Security Administration submit a budget request that would include funding authorization for a limited number of years. Additional funding limitations for future budget requests are addressed elsewhere in this conference agreement.

Transfers of defense environmental management funds (sec. 3129)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3128) that would provide the manager of each field office of the Department of Energy with limited authority to transfer up to $5.0 million in fiscal year 2001 defense environmental management funds from one program or project under the jurisdiction of the office to another such program or project, including site project and completion and post fiscal year 2006 completion funds, once in a fiscal year.

The Senate bill contained a similar provision (sec. 3129).

The Senate recedes.

Subtitle C—Program Authorizations, Restrictions, and Limitations

Funding for termination costs of River Protection Project, Richland, Washington (sec. 3131)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3131) that would prohibit the Secretary of Energy from using appropriated funds to establish a reserve for the payment of termination costs of contracts relating to the tank waste remediation system at Richland, Washington, and would identify alternatives to pay for these costs should the need arise.

The Senate bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a technical amendment.

Enhanced cooperation between National Nuclear Security Administration and Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (sec. 3132)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3132) that would establish the basis for expanded cooperation between the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization and the National Nuclear Security Administration.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Reprogramming of funds available for infrastructure upgrades or maintenance in certain accounts of the National Nuclear Security Administration (sec. 3133)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3134) that would prohibit the use of funds authorized to be appropriated for the National Nuclear Security Administration for infrastructure upgrades or maintenance in the readiness of the technical base and facilities or construction accounts to be used for any other purpose.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with a clarifying amendment.

Adjustment of composite theoretical performance levels for post-shipment verification reports on advanced supercomputers sales to certain foreign nations (sec. 3134)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3136) that would conform the reporting levels to those established under section 1211 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85) as they apply to the Department of Energy report on sales by participants in the Accelerated Strategic Computing Initiative.

The Senate amendment contained an identical provision.

The conference agreement includes this provision.

Modification of counterintelligence polygraph program (sec. 3135)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3154) that would amend section 3154 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) by authorizing the Secretary of Energy to waive the requirement that certain Department of Energy (DOE) employees and DOE contractor employees successfully pass a counterintelligence polygraph exam before such employees can be granted access to high-risk programs. The provision would allow the Secretary to waive this requirement for any individual for a period not to exceed 120 days, if the Secretary determines that: (1) such a waiver is in the national security interests of the United States; (2) the covered employee has been granted a security clearance; and (3) the covered employee signs a written acknowledgment that the employment is conditioned upon successfully passing a counterintelligence polygraph exam within 120 days of the date of signing such an acknowledgment. The provision would also allow the Secretary to waive this requirement for any individual who the Secretary determines: (1) has completed successfully a full-scope counterintelligence polygraph exam while employed with another federal agency; or (2) should not be examined because of treatment for a medical or psychological condition.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Secretary to waive polygraph requirements on a one-time basis for any individual employee and would prohibit the Secretary from using the need to maintain the scientific viability of a DOE laboratory as a criteria for approving any such waivers. The amendment would further require that employees holding a sensitive compartmented information clearance be subject to these requirements.

Employee incentives for employees at closure project facilities (sec. 3136)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3137) that would provide incentives for retention and separation of federal employees at closure facilities of the Department of Energy (DOE) established pursuant to section 3143 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104–106). Such incentives would include the accumulation of annual leave up to 720 hours, lump sum retention allowances of up to 30 percent of an employee's salary, freeze the cost of and continue health benefits for employees who are either voluntarily or involuntarily separated, and provide authority for voluntary reductions in force. The authority would terminate at a DOE site when closure is completed.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3155) that would provide similar incentives, including lump sum retention allowances of up to 40 percent of an employee's salary, authority to pay voluntary separation incentive payments (also referred to as buyouts), and authority to make temporary assignments of certain DOE employees to private sector organizations, on a non-reimbursable basis. The authority would terminate on September 23, 2001.

The House recedes with an amendment that would provide the following incentives: (1) the accumulation of annual leave up to 720 hours; (2) lump sum retention allowances of up to 30 percent of an employee's salary; (3) freeze the cost of and continue health benefits for employees who are either voluntarily or involuntarily separated; and (4) provide authority for voluntary reductions in force. The authority would terminate on March 31, 2007.

Continuation of processing, treatment, and disposition of legacy nuclear materials (sec. 3137)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3151) that would require the Secretary of Energy to maintain a high state of readiness at the F-canyon and H-canyon facilities at the Savannah River site. The provision would further prohibit the use of funds to begin decommissioning activities at the F-canyon facility, including studies and planning, until the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board and the Secretary of Energy submit a report certifying that all materials currently present in the facility are safely stabilized and the requirements for the facility to meet future fissile materials disposition needs can be fully met utilizing the H-canyon facility. The provision would require the Secretary to submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a plan describing how all long-term chemical separations activities would be transferred from the F-canyon facility to the H-canyon facility beginning in fiscal year 2002. The report would be submitted not later than February 15, 2001.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary to identify those fissile materials disposition needs that will require an alternative capability, including a description of the alternative capability and a justification of why any such requirements cannot be carried out at the H-canyon facility.

Limitation on use of certain funds pending certifications of compliance with Formerly Utilized Sites Remedial Action Program funding prohibition (sec. 3138)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3152) that would prohibit the use of any funds authorized or otherwise made available to the Department of Energy by this or any other Act for travel by the Secretary of Energy or any employees of the Office of Secretary of Energy after March 1, 2001, unless or until the Secretary certifies to the congressional defense committees that no Atomic Energy Defense funds will be obligated or expended for treatment, storage, or disposal activities at sites designated as Formerly Utilized Site Remedial Action Program (FUSRAP) sites.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would limit the use of travel funds by the Secretary of Energy, any employee of the Office of the Secretary, or the Chief of Engineers of the Army Corps of Engineers after November 1, 2001, unless or until the Secretary and Chief each certifies to the congressional defense committees that no Atomic Energy Defense funds will be obligated or expended for treatment, storage, or disposal activities at FUSRAP sites.

The conferees note that the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) prohibits any Atomic Energy Defense funds authorized or otherwise made available to the Department of Energy for any fiscal year after fiscal year 1999 from being obligated or expended to conduct treatment, storage, or disposal activities at sites designated as FUSRAP sites. The conferees continue to support the cleanup of FUSRAP sites in an expeditious, cost-effective manner. The conferees, however, do not support the use of scarce Atomic Energy Defense funds for this purpose.

Conceptual design for Subsurface Geosciences Laboratory at Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory, Idaho Falls, Idaho (sec. 3139)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3156) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to obligate up to $400,000 to carry out conceptual design activities for a new Subsurface Geoscience Facility Laboratory at the Idaho National Engineering and Environmental Laboratory (INEEL), Idaho Falls, Idaho. The provision would prohibit obligation of the funds until 60 days after the Secretary submits a report to the congressional defense committees identifying: (1) the need to conduct mesoscale experiments to meet long-term Department of Energy (DOE) cleanup requirements; (2) the possibility of utilizing existing structures to house such a new facility; (3) the estimated construction costs of the facility; (4) the estimated annual operating costs of the facility; (5) how the facility would utilize the capabilities of other DOE and non-DOE sites; and (6) an analysis of costs, savings, and benefits that are unique to INEEL.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Report on National Ignition Facility, Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, Livermore, California (sec. 3140)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3158) that would require the Secretary of Energy to submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a report setting forth a revised cost and schedule baseline for completion of the National Ignition Facility (NIF) in Livermore, California. The provision would prohibit the obligation of more than 50 percent of the funds available for NIF until the report is submitted. The provision would further require that the Comptroller General report not later than March 31, 2001, to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives on: (1) the relationship of NIF to other elements of the Department of Energy nuclear weapons program; (2) the potential impacts if completion of the NIF were to be delayed; (3) a detailed description and analysis of the funds spent on NIF to date; and (4) an assessment of whether Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory has established a revised baseline for NIF that has achievable goals and milestones.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

River Protection Project, Richland, Washington (sec. 3141)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3135) that would rename the tank waste remediation project at the Department of Energy's (DOE) Hanford Site as the River Protection Project.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would require the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management to delegate, in writing, responsibility for management of the Office of River Protection (ORP) to the manager of that office. The delegation would include authority for contracting, financial management, safety, and general program management that are equivalent to those vested in other operations office managers. The ORP manager would, to the maximum extent possible, be required to coordinate all ORP activities with the manager of the DOE Richland Operations Office.

The conferees note that section 3139 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261) made the manager of the Office of River Protection responsible for managing all aspects of this critical cleanup program. The conferees expect the Assistant Secretary to comply with the requirement for a written delegation of authority as expeditiously as possible. The conferees further expect that the Assistant Secretary will be provided with sufficient personnel and other resources to manage the tank waste program in an efficient and streamlined manner.

Report on tank waste remediation system, Hanford Reservation, Richland, Washington (sec. 3142)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3157) that would authorize an increase of $150.0 million to carry out an accelerated cleanup and waste management program at the Hanford Site in Richland, Washington. The provision would also require the Secretary of Energy to submit a report to Congress not later than December 15, 2000, on the Tank Waste Remediation System (TWRS) project, including: (1) a proposed plan for processing and stabilizing all nuclear wastes located in the Hanford Tank Farm; (2) a proposed schedule for carrying out the plan; (3) the total estimated cost of carrying out the plan; and (4) a description of any alternative options to the proposed plan and description of the costs and benefits of each such option.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the report to include the following additional items: (1) a description of the volumes and characteristics of those wastes or materials that are not intended to be treated during Phase 1(B) of the project and (2) a plan for developing, demonstrating, and implementing advanced vitrification system technologies that might be required to safely treat and stabilize any out of specification wastes or materials, such as polychlorinated biphenyls, that cannot be treated and stabilized with the technologies proposed to be utilized during Phase 1(B) of the project.

Subtitle D—Matters Relating to Management of National Nuclear Security Administration

Term of office of person first appointed as Under Secretary for Nuclear Security of the Department of Energy (sec. 3151)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3131) that would establish a fixed term of office for the first individual appointed as the Under Secretary for Nuclear Security at the Department of Energy. The individual would be subject to removal by the President only for inefficiency, neglect of duty, or malfeasance in office.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Membership of Under Secretary for Nuclear Security on the Joint Nuclear Weapons Council (sec. 3152)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3132) that would designate the Under Secretary for Nuclear Security of the Department of Energy (DOE) to serve as the DOE representative on the Joint Nuclear Weapons Council.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Organization plan for field offices of the National Nuclear Security Administration (sec. 3153)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3135) that would require the Under Secretary for Nuclear Security of the Department of Energy to develop an appropriate staffing and organization plan to carry out the activities of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA). The plan would identify: (1) the roles and responsibilities to be assigned to each NNSA field organizational unit and the NNSA headquarters organization; (2) any modifications, downsizing, eliminations, or consolidations of NNSA headquarters and field organization units; (3) any modifications to headquarters and field office staffing levels that the Under Secretary determines are necessary to implement the plan; and (4) a schedule by which the plan could be implemented. The plan would be submitted to the congressional defense committees not later than March 1, 2001.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Under Secretary to submit the plan not later than May 1, 2001.

Required contents of future-years nuclear security program (sec. 3154)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3133) that would make certain findings that the budget submission for fiscal year 2001 to Congress does not comply with requirements imposed by sections 3251 and 3253 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65); would establish requirements for the content of the future years nuclear security program to be submitted annually by the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) pursuant to section 3253; and would prohibit the obligation of more than 50 percent of funds authorized for appropriation for program direction within NNSA until 30 days after the Administrator provides Congress with the required future years nuclear security program.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would remove the restriction on use of program direction funds.

Future-years nuclear security program for fiscal year 2001 (sec. 3155)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3136) that would require the Under Secretary for Nuclear Security to submit a future-years nuclear security program plan that would contain the estimated expenditures necessary to support the programs, projects, and activities of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA). The report would be submitted to Congress not later than November 1, 2000.

The House contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment.

The conferees note that the Secretary of Energy was required by section 3135 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1997 (Public Law 104–201) and section 3253 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) to provide a five-year budget plan, and that the Secretary failed to comply with such requirements. The conferees further note that the Secretary of Defense provides such future year budget data to Congress concurrent with the submission of the budget request. The conferees believe that such a plan will provide an important planning tool for the Secretary, the Administrator, and the Congress, and would serve as a baseline upon which the congressional defense committees can better evaluate succeeding budget submissions.

The conferees are aware that DOE submitted a future years nuclear security program plan to the Office of Management and Budget as part of its fiscal year 2001 budget request. The conferees believe that this plan will meet the requirements of this provision.

Engineering and manufacturing research, development, and demonstration by plant managers of certain nuclear weapons production plants (sec. 3156)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3175) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to establish a Plant Manager Research, Development, and Demonstration (PMRDD) program to support innovative engineering and systems activities at the nuclear weapons production plants. The program would be limited to the Y–12 plant in Oak Ridge, Tennessee, the Kansas City plant in Kansas City, Missouri, and the Pantex plant in Amarillo, Texas. The program would be authorized at a level not to exceed two percent of the funds available for weapons activities at such plants.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration to authorize the head of each nuclear weapons production plant to establish a PMRDD program and would allow the Administrator to authorize the head of each production plant to obligate up to $3.0 million per year from those funds available in the Advanced Design and Production Technologies Campaign in fiscal year 2001 to carry out the program.

The conferees anticipate that this program would be used to explore viable tools and techniques for understanding and replacing sunset technologies and for developing more agile manufacturing techniques. The conferees believe the creation of this program will support recommendations for addressing workforce problems at the production plants identified by the Commission on Retaining Nuclear Weapons Expertise (also known as the Chiles Commission) by assisting with recruiting and retention of outstanding engineers and craftsmen.

Prohibition on individuals engaging in concurrent service or duties within National Nuclear Security Administration and outside that Administration but within Department of Energy (sec. 3157)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3134) that would prohibit the use of any funds authorized to be appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Energy (DOE) after fiscal year 2000 to pay the basic pay of an officer or employee of DOE who: (1) serves concurrently in a position in the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) and a position outside the NNSA; or (2) performs concurrently the duties of a position in the NNSA and the duties of a position outside the NNSA.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would prohibit the practice of dual office holding.

The conferees recognize that NNSA may benefit from the unique skills of personnel in other federal agencies, other DOE entities not within NNSA, and private entities. The conferees believe that the assignment of detailees with such expertise to the NNSA on an occasional and temporary basis is acceptable, provided that the specific arrangements for detailee assignment to NNSA are consistent with the terms of this provision.

Annual plan for obligation of funds of the National Nuclear Security Administration (sec. 3158)

The conference agreement includes a provision that would require the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) to submit a plan for obligation of amounts requested for each program element and construction line item expressed as percentage of the requested amounts in the annual budget and the two succeeding fiscal years; and an assessment as to whether the NNSA had met the goals of prior year obligation plans and any plan for corrective actions that might be needed. The amendment would also require an assessment by the Comptroller General concerning the adequacy of the NNSA planning, programming, and budgeting process.

The conferees are disappointed that the Department of Energy failed to comply with section 3152 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65), which required the NNSA to forward a budget with funding available for a limited number of years.

Authority to reorganize National Nuclear Security Administration (sec. 3159)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3133) that would limit the authority of the Secretary of Energy to reorganize, abolish, alter, consolidate, or discontinue any organizational unit or component of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Administrator to reorganize, abolish, alter, consolidate, or discontinue any organizational unit or component of the NNSA.

Subtitle E—National Laboratories Partnership Improvement

Technology Infrastructure Pilot Program (sec. 3161)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (section 3163) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to obligate up to $10.0 million per year for a three-year period to establish the Technology Infrastructure Pilot Program. The pilot program would promote establishment of technology partnership clusters in the vicinity of certain DOE laboratories and plants. The provision would authorize each such DOE site to expend available funds to carry out cooperative activities with local businesses, universities, research organizations, or state, local, and tribal governments.

The House had no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would authorize the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) to obligate up to $5.0 million during fiscal years 2001 and 2002 to carry out the pilot program.

The conferees are concerned that technology partnerships within the Office of Defense Programs have not been well managed in the past nor have they resulted in significant return on investment. Nevertheless, the conferees recognize that public-private collaborations may, if properly focused and managed, result in the development of commercially viable technologies that support the core nuclear weapons and nuclear nonproliferation missions of the NNSA. The Technology Infrastructure Pilot Program will allow the NNSA laboratories and facilities to explore new ways to collaborate with private entities in research, training, and shared facilities to enhance these core NNSA missions. The conferees note that technology networks of this kind have proven successful in the private sector. The conferees further note that the provision would not preclude the possibility of subsequent authorizations in appropriate circumstances.

Report on small business participation in National Nuclear Security Administration activities (sec. 3162)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3164) that would require each laboratory to establish a small business advocacy and assistance program to increase the participation of small businesses in all contracting aspects of the laboratory. The provision would also require each laboratory to establish a small business assistance program to help local small businesses obtain more subcontracts at the laboratory and improve the commercial value of their products and services.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) to report to the congressional defense committees not later than February 15, 2001, regarding the effectiveness of NNSA small business programs, recommendations on how to improve them, and any legislative changes required to implement such improvements.

Study and report related to improving mission effectiveness, partnerships, and technology transfer at national security laboratories and nuclear weapons production facilities (sec. 3163)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3166) that would require the Secretary to direct the Laboratory Operations Board to study and to report on the possible benefits of and need for policies and procedures to facilitate the transfer of scientific, technical, and professional personnel among national security laboratories and facilities. The Board would be required to report on the possible benefits of and need for changes in the following: (1) the indemnification requirements for patents or other intellectual property licensed from a laboratory or facility; (2) the royalty and fee schedules and types of compensation that may be used for patents or other intellectual property licensed to a small business concern from a National Laboratory or facility; (3) the licensing procedures and requirements for patents and other intellectual property, including preferences for small businesses started by former laboratory or facility employees who invented the patented technology or other intellectual property; (4) the infringement and protections available to small businesses that have received patents or other intellectual property from a laboratory or facility; (5) the advance funding requirements for a small business that funds a project at a laboratory or facility through a Funds-In-Agreement; (6) the intellectual property rights allocated to a business that funds a project at a laboratory or facility through a Funds-In-Agreement; and (7) the policies on royalty payments to inventors employed by a contractor-operated laboratory or facility, including those for inventions made under a Funds-In-Agreement.

The Board would be required to report to the Secretary not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act. The Secretary would be required to transmit the report to Congress not later than one month after receiving the report of the board concurrent with the submission of the report of the Secretary shall provide recommendations regarding appropriate action and legislative proposals.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Secretary of Energy Advisory Board to prepare and to submit the report related to the national security laboratories and facilities. The amendment would also require the report to include the advantages and disadvantages of providing the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration with special contracting authority, such as ''other transactions'' authority.

Report on effectiveness of National Nuclear Security Administration technology development partnerships with non-Federal entities (sec. 3164)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3137) that would establish funding goals for cooperative research and development agreements (CRADAs) of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) and require that such CRADAs be consistent with and support the missions of the National Nuclear Security Administration. The provision would establish a goal of obligating 0.5 percent of NNSA funds available during fiscal years 2001 and 2002 for CRADAs, or similar cooperative, cost-shared research partnerships with non-federal organizations. The provision would further require the Administrator of the NNSA to submit a report to the congressional defense committees setting forth a recommendation as to the appropriate future percentage goals. The provision would require that the Administrator report to Congress annually on whether the goals of this provision have been met in the successive fiscal year. The provision would require the Administrator to describe the actions necessary to achieve such goals and provide any legislative changes recommended to achieve them, if the goals have not been met.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the Administrator to submit to Congress a report on the efficiency and effectiveness with which the NNSA and its laboratories and facilities carry out cooperative technology development activities with non-federal entities, including appropriate funding levels for such cooperative activities.

Definitions (sec. 3165)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3162) that would define the terms referenced in subtitle E of this Act.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would define the terms ''national security laboratory'' and ''nuclear weapons production facility'' as they are defined in section 3281 of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (Public Law 106–65).

Subtitle F—Matters Relating to Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation

Matters Relating to Defense Nuclear Nonproliferation (secs. 3171–3175)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3153) that would: (1) require an annual report and limit funding for the program until an access policy is established and implemented by the Secretary for the Nuclear Materials Protection, Control, and Accounting Program; (2) establish programmatic management criteria and conditions on funds for the Nuclear Cities Initiative (NCI); and (3) require that funds for the International Nuclear Safety Program be used only for reactor safety upgrades and training for reactor operators participating in the program. The Senate amendment also contained provisions (sec. 3191–3195) that would expand the NCI by authorizing $30.0 million for fiscal year 2001, require an agreement that provides that Russia will close some of its facilities engaged in nuclear weapons assembly and disassembly work within five years in exchange for participating in the NCI, establish additional programmatic criteria, authorize the Secretary of Energy to encourage careers in nonproliferation, and express the sense of Congress on the need for establishing a national coordinator for nonproliferation.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment regarding the International Nuclear Safety Program. The amendment would also: (1) Authorize $30.0 million for fiscal year 2001 for the NCI; (2) prohibit the obligation or expenditure of funds for more than three nuclear cities in Russia and two serial production facilities until 30 days after the Secretary submits to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and House of Representatives a copy of a written agreement that provides that Russia will close some of its facilities engaged in nuclear weapons assembly and disassembly work; and (3) limit not more than $8.7 million from being expended or obligated until the Secretary establishes and implements project review procedures for projects under the NCI and submits to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the project review procedures established and implemented. The amendment would also prohibit amounts in excess of $17.5 million from being obligated or expended until 30 days after the Secretary submits a report to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives that includes: (1) a copy of a written agreement that provides that Russia will close some of its facilities engaged in nuclear weapons assembly and disassembly work within five years in exchange for participation in the NCI; (2) a certification by the Secretary that project review procedures have been established and are being implemented and that any scientific, technical, or commercial projects carried out under the NCI will meet specific nonproliferation objectives and be commercially viable in three years; (3) a description of the project review procedures process; (4) a list of the projects that have undergone review; and (5) detailed descriptions for each NCI project regarding project management costs, budgets, commercial viability, income generation, and the number of Russian jobs created. The amendment would also urge the President to discuss with the Russian Federation the development of a plan for restructuring the Russian nuclear weapons complex, and would authorize $2.0 million for the Secretary to encourage Russian and U.S. students to pursue nonproliferation careers. The funds for nonproliferation careers may only be obligated and expended after conditions are met for fiscal year 2001 funds in excess of $17.5 million, and after the Administrator for Nuclear Security provides prior notification to Congress that these funds will be expended. Finally, the House amendment expresses the sense of Congress on the need for effective and clear coordination of U.S.-Russian nonproliferation programs.

The conferees believe that the Department should support projects that have the greatest potential for commercialization in the near term through the rapid creation of Russian jobs in the closed cities.

In addition, the conferees agree to include a provision that would direct the Secretary to submit to the Armed Services Committees of the Senate and the House of Representatives not later than March 1, 2001, a report on the Department's recent and planned efforts to ensure adequate oversight and accountability of its nonproliferation programs in Russia, and the potential costs and impacts of on-the-ground monitoring. The conferees further direct the Comptroller General to conduct a review of the information contained in the Secretary's report to assess the information and provide the Congress with a report of the Comptroller General's assessment not later than April 15, 2001. The conferees are interested in ensuring that the Department of Energy has adequate assurance that federal funds expended in Russia for nonproliferation programs are being expended for the purposes for which they are intended, as exemplified in the legislative provision on access for the Materials Protection, Control, and Accounting program.

Subtitle G—Other Matters

Extension of authority for appointment of certain scientific, engineering, and technical personnel (sec. 3191)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3171) that would extend the authority of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103–337) related to excepted service hiring for up to 200 positions.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Biennial report containing update on nuclear test readiness postures (sec. 3192)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3172) that would require the Secretary of Energy to update the nuclear test readiness report required by section 3152 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1996 (Public Law 104–106) on a biennial basis. The Secretary would be required to submit the first updated report to the congressional defense committees not later than February 15, 2001. The reports would include a listing and description of those workforce skills and capabilities that are essential to carry out the missions of the site, a listing and description of the required infrastructure and physical plant that are essential to carry out the missions of the site, and an assessment of the readiness status of the workforce and infrastructure. The report would be submitted in unclassified form, but could include a classified annex.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Frequency of reports on inadvertent releases of restricted data and formerly restricted data (sec. 3193)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3173) that would amend section 3161 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65) to require the Secretary of Energy to report inadvertent releases of restricted data and formerly restricted data on a quarterly basis rather than 30 days after any such release.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a clarifying amendment that would make the quarterly report mandatory, regardless of whether there is a reportable incident during the period by the report.

Form of certifications regarding the safety or reliability of the nuclear weapons stockpile (sec. 3194)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3174) that would require the annual certification to the President regarding the safety and reliability of the U.S. nuclear stockpile be submitted in classified form.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Authority to provide certificate of commendation to Department of Energy and contractor employees for exemplary service in stockpile stewardship and security (sec. 3195)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3177) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to award a certificate of commendation for meritorious service to current and former employees of the Department of Energy (DOE), and current and former contractor employees who worked in programs related to stewardship of the Nation's nuclear weapons stockpile.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that the dedication, intellect, and hard work of the scientists and craftsmen employed at DOE laboratories and manufacturing plants are essential to maintaining a credible U.S. nuclear deterrent. The conferees further note that former scientists and craftsmen at DOE laboratories, plants, and materials production sites were instrumental in ensuring the security of the United States during the Cold War. The conferees included this provision to recognize the contributions of former employees at these facilities and to highlight the Nation's continued reliance on the capabilities of the skilled workers at DOE weapons laboratories and manufacturing plants. The conferees commend these individuals for their continued service to the Nation and for the peace that they have helped to preserve.

Cooperative research and development agreements for government-owned, contractor-operated laboratories (sec. 3196)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3176) that would amend the Stevenson-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3710) to streamline the approval process for cooperative research and development agreements (CRADA) at government-owned, contractor-operated (GOCO) facilities by authorizing federal agencies to substitute an annual strategic plan for individual joint work statements. The provision would, for a period of five years after the date of enactment of this Act, authorize the waiver of any license retained by the government if the retention of that license would inhibit commercialization of an invention that would otherwise serve an important federal mission. The provision would further streamline the CRADA process for GOCO facilities by authorizing federal agencies to permit routine CRADAs to be negotiated and signed by GOCO employees.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would limit the applicability of the license waiver provision to the activities of the National Nuclear Security Administration laboratories, and would require a report on all license waivers.

Office of Arctic Energy (sec. 3197)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3169) that would establish the Office of Arctic Energy Research.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would provide the Secretary of Energy with discretionary authority to establish the Office of Arctic Energy Research.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Conformance with National Nuclear Security Administration organizational structure

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3168) that would require the Secretary of Energy to carry out the requirements of Subtitle E of this Act, consistent with title 32 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (Public Law 106–65).

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Construction of National Nuclear Security Administration Operations Office Complex

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3138) that would authorize the Administrator of the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) to begin design and construction of a new operations office complex at the Department of Energy Albuquerque Operations Office located at Kirtland Air Force Base, New Mexico. The authority would have to be carried out in accordance with a Department of Energy feasibility study that would examine the design and construction of the office complex using one or more energy savings performance contracts, consistent with Title VIII of the National Energy Policy Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 8287 et seq.). Construction costs would be derived from energy savings and ancillary operation and maintenance savings that result from replacing the current office complex with the proposed complex.

The Administrator could not begin conceptual design and construction until the later of: (1) 30 days after the date on which the Administrator submits to Congress the NNSA field organization plan required by a provision included elsewhere in this conference agreement; or (2) the date on which the Administrator certifies to Congress that the design and construction of the complex is consistent with the NNSA field organization plan and the feasibility study.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note that the Administrator may seek future congressional authorization for design and construction of a new office complex at the Albuquerque Operations Office.

Energy employees compensation initiative

The budget request included $17.0 million for establishment of an energy employees compensation fund.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3105) that would authorize $17.0 million for the establishment of an energy employees compensation fund to compensate Department of Energy (DOE) contractor employees that have proven health or other medical problems that are directly related to their employment at a DOE nuclear facility.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Environmental management closure projects

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3104) that would authorize $1.0 billion for environmental management closure projects, the amount of the request.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Other transactions

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3167) that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to permit the award contracts on a non-competitive basis, commonly known as ''other transactions'' authority.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

The conferees note that a report on ''other transactions'' authority is required elsewhere in this conference agreement.

Sense of the Congress regarding compensation and health care for personnel of the Department of Energy and its contractors and vendors who have sustained beryllium, silica, and radiation-related injury

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3138) that would express the sense of the Congress that there is sufficient information available to Congress to warrant enactment of legislation regrading personnel of the Department of Energy and its contractors and vendors who have sustained beryllium, silica, and radiation-related injury.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Short title

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3161) that would cite the subtitle E of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 as the National Laboratories Partnership Improvement Act of 1999.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Technology partnerships ombudsman

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3165) that would require each laboratory to establish a technology partnership ombudsman to resolve complaints from outside organizations regarding patents, technology licenses, and other issues.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

TITLE XXXII—DEFENSE NUCLEAR FACILITIES SAFETY BOARD

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board (sec. 3201)

The budget request included $18.5 million for the Defense Nuclear Facilities Safety Board (DNFSB).

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3201) that would authorize $17.0 million for the DNFSB, a decrease of $1.5 million.

The Senate amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3201) that would authorize for the DNFSB the budget request.

The House recedes.

The conferees note that the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (Public Law 106–65), which established the National Nuclear Security Administration (NNSA) within the Department of Energy (DOE), did not repeal or amend the requirements of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2011). The conferees further note that the independent oversight authority of the DNFSB related to health and safety matters at DOE and NNSA defense nuclear facilities was not changed by the National Nuclear Security Administration Act.

The conferees note that the DNFSB is an independent technical body that continually assesses safety issues at DOE facilities and submits formal safety findings and recommendations to the Secretary of Energy, the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environment, Safety and Health, and Congress. As such, the conferees believe that the DNFSB is a cost-effective means of ensuring continuous improvement of the safety culture at DOE nuclear facilities.

TITLE XXXIII—NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Authorized uses of stockpile funds (sec. 3301)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3401) that would authorize the stockpile manager to obligate $75.0 million from the National Defense Stockpile Transfer Fund during fiscal year 2001 for the authorized uses of funds under section 9(b)(2) of the Strategic and Critical Materials Stock Piling Act (50 U.S.C. 98h).

The House amendment contained a similar provision (sec. 3301).

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would authorize $71.0 million.

Increased receipts under prior disposal authority (sec. 3302)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3402) that would increase, by $30.0 million, the amount of revenues that could be achieved through the sale of unneeded materials from the national defense stockpile.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would increase, by $130.0 million, the amount of revenues that could be achieved through the sale of unneeded materials from the national defense stockpile.

Disposal of titanium (sec. 3303)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3302) that would authorize the Secretary of Defense to make available to the military services the titanium sponge in the National Defense Stockpile for use as government furnished material in the production of military equipment.

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3403) that would require the sale of all remaining titanium in the National Defense Stockpile within ten years. The initial $6.0 million worth of revenues generated from the sale would be used for the construction, dedication, and related activities of the World War II Memorial, and the remainder used to defray the costs of health care benefit improvements for retired military personnel.

The House recedes with an amendment that would require the sale of $48.0 million of titanium in the National Defense Stockpile within ten years. The initial $6.0 million worth of revenues generated from the sale would be used for the construction, dedication, and related activities of the World War II Memorial, and the remainder to be deposited in the General Fund of the Treasury.

The conferees believe that with over 1,000 World War II veterans dying each year, it is important to finish construction and dedication of the World War II Memorial as soon as possible in order to recognize the men and women who served during that war. The conferees further believe that, although nothing could compensate for the sacrifices that were made by these veterans, this memorial will demonstrate the appreciation of a grateful nation to those who fought to preserve liberty and freedom for all U.S. citizens and millions of others throughout the world.

TITLE XXXIV—NAVAL PETROLEUM RESERVES

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Minimum price of petroleum sold from certain naval petroleum reserves (sec. 3401)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3301) that would repeal the authority for the Secretary of Energy to sell oil from the naval petroleum reserves for less than full market value.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

Repeal of authority to contract for cooperative or unit plans affecting Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 1 (sec. 3402)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3302) that would amend section 7426 of title 10, United States Code, to repeal the requirement for the United States to contract for cooperative or unit plans in the administration of the Naval Petroleum Reserve Numbered 1 at Elk Hills.

The House amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with a technical amendment.

Disposal of Oil Shale Reserve Numbered 2 (sec. 3403)

The Senate amendment contained a provision (sec. 3303) that would authorize the conveyance of the Naval Oil Shale Reserve-Numbered 2 (NOSR–2), to the Ute Indian Tribe of the Uintah and Ouray Indian Reservation in Utah with the exception of a small parcel to be transferred to the Department of the Interior. The provision would also require the United States to retain a nine percent share of the revenues from the development of any minerals on the land after it is transferred. The provision would further require the environmental remediation and restoration of the uranium mill tailings site in Moab, Utah. The nine percent share of the revenues generated from the mineral development at the NOSR–2 would be available for the cleanup of the tailings site together with any funds specifically appropriated for this purpose.

The House bill contained no similar provision.

The House recedes with an amendment that would retain nine percent of the revenues from the mineral development of NOSR–2 until such time as the cleanup costs of the government for the tailings site have been recovered. The amendment would further require the Secretary of Energy to enter into an arrangement with the National Academy of Sciences to assist the Secretary of Energy in the preparation of a remediation plan that objectively evaluates the costs, benefits, and risks associated with various remediation alternatives for the cleanup of the tailings site.

The conferees understand that the remedial plan proposed by the Secretary of Energy will be prepared in accordance with title I of the Uranium Mill Tailings Radiation Control Act of 1978 (42 U.S.C., 7901). The conferees expect that as part of the remediation plan, the Secretary of Energy will develop a strategy for transferring the legal responsibilities and title to the Moab site, from the present Moab site Trustee to the Department of Energy, and that the Secretary of Energy will consult with the Trustee and with the beneficiaries of the trust, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission and the State of Utah, in developing the plan for the transition of responsibilities.

TITLE XXXV—MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Authorization of appropriations for fiscal year 2001 (sec. 3501)

The budget request included $86.4 million for the Maritime Administration.

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3401) that would authorize an increase of $61.9 million for the Maritime Administration. Of the funds authorized, $94.2 million would be for operations and training programs, $50.0 million would be for the cost as defined in section 502 of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, of loan guarantees authorized by title XI of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended (46 App. U.S.C. 1271 et seq.), and $4.2 million would be for administrative expenses related to providing those loan guarantees.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would authorize $94.3 million for operations and training programs, $50.0 million for the cost as defined in section 502 of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, of loan guarantees authorized by title XI of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936, as amended (46 App. U.S.C. 1271 et seq.), and $4.2 million for administrative expenses related to providing those loan guarantees.

Scrapping of National Defense Reserve Fleet vessels (sec. 3502)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3402) that would amend section 6(c)(1)(A) of the National Maritime Heritage Act of 1994 (16 U.S.C. 5405(c)(1)(A)) to authorize an extension of the period for disposal of obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet (NDRF). The provision would also direct that the obsolete vessels be scrapped outside the United States to the maximum extent possible.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes with an amendment that would eliminate the requirement to maximize financial returns on the sale of its obsolete vessels, as mandated by section 6(c)(1) of the National Maritime Heritage Act of 1994 (16 U.S.C. 5405(c)(1)). Under this provision, the Secretary of Transportation would only proceed with the scrapping of the NDRF vessels listed in the provision, and no others, until the report on the scrapping program has been transmitted to the appropriate congressional committees.

The provision would also direct the Secretary of Transportation, in consultation with the Secretary of the Navy and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, to develop a program within six months of the enactment of this Act to scrap obsolete NDRF vessels. The Secretary of Transportation would then have to submit a report to the Congress that describes the program. The conferees direct the Secretary of Transportation, based on concurrence of the Secretary of the Navy, to include in that report a description of how the Maritime Administration proposes to fund the disposal of obsolete NDRF vessels in the future years. An additional report on the progress of scrapping obsolete NDRF vessels would be required one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every six months thereafter.

In the selection of qualified foreign or domestic scrapping facilities, the provision would require a best value determination, consistent with the Federal Acquisition Regulations (FAR), including the provisions relevant to past performance, and taking into consideration the ability of facilities to scrap vessels: (1) at least cost to the Federal Government; (2) in a timely manner; (3) giving consideration to worker safety and the environment; and (4) in a manner that minimizes the geographic distance that a vessel must be towed when towing a vessel poses a serious threat to the environment. The provision would also require the President to make a recommendation to the Congress regarding whether it is necessary to amend the Toxic Substances Control Act (15 U.S.C. 2601 et seq.) or any other environmental statute or regulatory requirement relevant to the disposal of vessels described in section 6(c)(2) of the National Maritime Heritage Act of 1994 (16 U.S.C. 5405(c)(2)) and to recommend any proposed statutory or regulatory changes.

The conferees direct the administration, in the course of preparing the President's recommendation to Congress, to address directly the issues that impede the disposal of aging, obsolete NDRF vessels. The conferees believe that the public interest is not well served by continued inaction in this matter. Close cooperation by the Secretary of Transportation, the Secretary of the Navy, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency will be critical in developing a successful ship disposal program that prevents these vessels from becoming a serious threat to the environment.

Authority to convey National Defense Reserve Fleet vessel, Glacier (sec. 3503)

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3403) that would authorize the Secretary of Transportation to convey, at no cost to the government, a surplus National Defense Reserve Fleet vessel, to the Glacier Society for use as a museum.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The Senate recedes.

Maritime intermodal research (sec. 3504)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would authorize the Secretary of Transportation to make grants to National Maritime Enhancement Institutes, as if they were University Transportation Centers, for maritime and maritime intermodal research.

Maritime research and technology development (sec. 3505)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would authorize $100,000 for the Secretary of Transportation to provide a report on the status of maritime research and development and to include in the report information on prior year funding for research and development on various modes of transportation.

Reporting of administered and oversight funds (sec. 3506)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would require the Maritime Administration to report to Congress the amount, source, and intended use of funds (other than funds appropriated for the Maritime Administration or the Secretary of Transportation for use by the Maritime Administration) administered by the Maritime Administration.

The conferees note that it is not the practice of the defense authorization conference to adopt provisions relating to the Maritime Administration that have not passed either the House of Representatives or the Senate. The conferees understand that provisions relating to the authorization of the Maritime Administration and national security aspects of the Merchant Marine, including financial assistance for the construction and operation of vessels, maintenance of the U.S.

shipbuilding and ship repair industrial base, cabotage, and cargo preference, will normally be considered by committees of conference for inclusion in future conference reports if these provisions have first been passed in either the House of Representatives or the Senate.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS NOT ADOPTED

Authority to convey offshore drill rig Ocean Star

The House bill contained a provision (sec. 3404) that would authorize the Secretary of Transportation to convey the offshore drill, Ocean Star, to the Offshore Rig Museum, Inc., a non-profit corporation.

The Senate amendment contained no similar provision.

The House recedes.

TITLE XXXVI—ENERGY EMPLOYEES OCCUPATIONAL ILLNESS COMPENSATION PROGRAM

The Senate amendment contained provisions (secs. 3501–3544) that would enact the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Act of 2000. The provision would establish a compensation program for Department of Energy (DOE) employees and DOE contractor employees who were injured due to exposure to radiation, beryllium, or silica while working at a DOE defense nuclear facility or nuclear weapons testing site.

The House bill contained no similar title.

The House recedes with an amendment that would establish the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program.

LEGISLATIVE PROVISIONS ADOPTED

Short title (sec. 3601)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would designate the short title of the title as the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Act of 2000.

Findings; sense of Congress (sec. 3602)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish several findings and express the sense of Congress regarding personnel of the Department of Energy and its contractors and vendors who have sustained illnesses due to exposure to radiation, beryllium, and silica as a result of their employment with DOE.

Subtitle A—Establishment of Compensation Program and Compensation Fund

Establishment of Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program (sec. 3611)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Program. The program would provide timely, uniform, and adequate compensation to certain DOE, DOE contractor, and DOE vendor employees who were injured from exposure to radiation, beryllium, or silica while working in DOE nuclear weapons-related programs and, where applicable, their survivors.

Establishment of Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Fund (sec. 3612)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Fund. The provision would also require the Secretary of the Treasury to transfer to the Fund from the general fund of the Treasury the amounts necessary to pay compensation under this title once amounts appropriated for the Fund have been exhausted. Such payments would be considered as mandatory funding without requiring any additional authorization or appropriation. The provision would further require that no administrative costs for carrying out the program be paid out of the Fund.

Legislative proposal (sec. 3613)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would require the President to submit, not later than March 15, 2001, a legislative proposal to implement the compensation program under this title. The proposal would include, at a minimum, the following elements: (1) the types of compensation to be provided to covered employees; (2) any adjustments or modifications necessary to administer the program; (3) whether to expand the program to include other illnesses associated with exposure to toxic substances; and (4) whether to expand the special exposure cohort to include new classes of employees.

Authorization of appropriations (sec. 3614)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would authorize $25.0 million for the purposes of carrying out the administrative requirements of this title and $250.0 million for the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Fund.

Subtitle B—Program Administration

Definitions for program administration (sec. 3621)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would define the terms and criteria used in this title.

Expansion of list of beryllium vendors (sec. 3622)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would authorize the President, in consultation with the Secretary of Energy, to designate additional beryllium vendors. Such designations would be required to be made not later than December 31, 2002.

Exposure in the performance of duty (sec. 3623)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would specify the criteria for determining whether a covered beryllium employee or a covered employee with cancer was exposed in the performance of duty.

The conferees prohibit the designation of the Department of Energy as the lead agency for establishing regulations for dose reconstruction under this provision. The conferees expect the Secretary to provide information in the possession of DOE and its contractors related to radiation exposures, but direct the President to select another agency to establish regulations required by this provision.

Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health (sec. 3624)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health. The President would appoint members of the Board in consultation with organizations with expertise on worker health issues. The Board would advise the President on matters relating to this title, including dose reconstruction and eligibility guidelines for radiation compensation.

Responsibilities of Secretary of Health and Human Services (sec. 3625)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would require the Secretary of Health and Human Services to carry out the Secretary's responsibilities under this title with the assistance of the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health.

Designation of additional members of Special Exposure Cohort (sec. 3626)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish a process by which the President, upon recommendation of the Advisory Board on Radiation and Worker Health, could designate additional classes of employees at DOE facilities as members of the special exposure cohort 180 days after the President submits a report to Congress that would identify the class and criteria that have been used to justify their inclusion in the cohort. A class of employees would be permitted to be added if the President determines that: (1) it is not feasible to estimate with sufficient accuracy the radiation dose that the class received; and (2) there is a reasonable likelihood that the radiation dose may have endangered the health of members of the class.

Separate treatment of chronic silicosis (sec. 3627)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would express the sense of Congress that further determination by the President is appropriate before employees who were exposed to silica are included in a comprehensive compensation program. The provision would include DOE employees who are diagnosed with silicosis in the program unless the President submits a certification to Congress within 180 days after the enactment of this Act that there is an insufficient basis to include such employees in the program. An employee would be included in the program only if the employee worked at a covered DOE facility for an aggregate of 250 work days.

Compensation and benefits to be provided (sec. 3628)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish an entitlement for compensation for covered employees, or the survivor of a covered employee if the employee is deceased, consisting of a $150,000 lump sum payment. In addition, the provision would establish, for a covered employee, an entitlement for reimbursement of prospective medical expenses related to a covered illness. Employees with beryllium sensitivity would receive medical monitoring only. All such compensation would be paid from the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Fund. The effective date of this provision would be July 31, 2001, unless the Congress provides otherwise in an Act enacted before that date.

Medical benefits (sec. 3629)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would define those medical services, appliances, supplies, and other related benefits to be provided.

Separate treatment of certain uranium employees (sec. 3630)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would establish an additional entitlement for certain uranium miners, millers, and transporters, or the survivor of any such employee if the employee is deceased, who receives, or has received, payment of a claim under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (42 U.S.C. 2210 note). The additional payment would consist of: (1) a $50,000 lump sum payment; and (2) reimbursement of prospective medical expenses related to the covered illness. All such compensation would be paid from the Energy Employees Occupational Illness Compensation Fund. The effective date of this provision would be July 31, 2001, unless the Congress provides otherwise in an Act enacted before that date. The provision would further require the President to establish procedures to identify and notify each eligible individual under this section.

Assistance for claimants and potential claimants (sec. 3631)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would require the President to provide to all claimants under this title the following: (1) assistance in securing medical testing and diagnostic services for covered illnesses; and (2) assistance in preparing claims. The President would also be required to take appropriate action to inform potential claimants of the availability of compensation under this title.

Subtitle C—Treatment, Coordination, and Forfeiture of Compensation and Benefits

Offset for certain payments (sec. 3641)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would require any payment of compensation under this title to be offset by the amount of any other award or settlement of a claim, other than workers' compensation, that is based on the same injury.

Subrogation of the United States (sec. 3642)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would subrogate any payment of compensation under this title to a right or claim of the covered employee against any other party for the same injury.

Payment in full settlement of claims (sec. 3643)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would specify that acceptance of payment under this title would be in full settlement of all claims against the United States, a DOE contractor or subcontractor, beryllium vendor, or atomic weapons employer for the covered illness.

Exclusivity of remedy against the United States and against contractors and subcontractors (sec. 3644)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would specify the liabilities of the United States for future claims related to covered illnesses.

Election of remedy for beryllium employees and atomic weapons employees (sec. 3645)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would allow covered beryllium and atomic weapons employees to elect a remedy for a covered illness. A covered employee could elect to file suit or to file a claim under this provision, if the election is made not later than the later of: (1) the date that is 30 months after the date of enactment of this Act; or (2) 30 months after the date the employee first becomes aware of an illness that may have been sustained in the performance of duty. The provision would provide that any currently filed tort case must be dismissed by December 31, 2003, in order for an individual to be eligible for compensation under this title.

Certification of treatment of payments under other laws (sec. 3646)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would specify that compensation or benefits provided to an individual under the compensation program would be tax exempt and would not affect the eligibility of that individual for federal assistance programs.

Claims not assignable or transferrable; choice of remedies (sec. 3647)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would specify that claims under the compensation program are not assignable or transferable. The provision would also specify that no individual may receive more than one payment of compensation under the program. This would not preclude payment of both lump sum and medical benefits to a covered individual.

Attorney fees (sec. 3648)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would limit the payment of fees to an attorney of a claimant to two percent for filing of an initial claim.

Certain claims not affected by awards of damages (sec. 3649)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would ensure that a payment under the compensation program shall not be considered as any form of compensation or reimbursement for a loss for purposes of imposing liability on any individual receiving such payment, on the basis of such receipt, to repay any insurance carrier for insurance payments, or to repay any person on account of workers' compensation payments. A payment under the compensation program shall not affect any claim against an insurance carrier with respect to insurance or against any person with respect to worker's compensation.

Forfeiture of benefits by convicted felons (sec. 3650)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would require forfeiture of entitlement to any compensation or benefit under the compensation program by any individual convicted of a violation of section 1920 of title 18, United States Code, or any other federal or state criminal statute relating to fraud in the application for or receipt of any benefit under this program or any federal or state workers' compensation law.

Coordination with other Federal radiation compensation laws (sec. 3651)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would prevent an individual from receiving compensation or benefits under the compensation program for cancer and also receive compensation under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (section 2210 of title 42, United States Code) or section 1112(c) of title 38, United States Code, except as provided in this title.

Subtitle D—Assistance in State Workers' Compensation Proceedings

Agreements with States (sec. 3661)

The conferees agree to include a provision that would authorize the Secretary of Energy to enter into agreements with states to assist DOE contractor employees in filing a claim under the appropriate state workers' compensation system for illnesses related to exposure to other toxic chemicals. The provision would also establish procedures for such DOE assistance.

The Secretary of Energy would review and submit applications to an independent physician panel appointed by the Secretary of Health and Human Services. The panel would determine whether the illness or death that is the subject of the application arose as a result of exposure to a toxic substance at a DOE facility. The Secretary would be required to accept the panel's determination in the absence of significant evidence to the contrary. If the Secretary makes a positive determination, the Secretary would be required to assist the applicant in filing a claim under the appropriate state workers' compensation system. The Secretary would not contest the claim and would direct any relevant contractor not to contest the claim. The contractor's cost of fighting the claim would not be an allowable cost under a DOE contract.

Not later than February 1, 2002, the Comptroller General would be required to submit a report to Congress that would evaluate the Department's implementation of this provision and effectiveness in achieving compensation for employees with occupational illnesses.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HOBSON). The Chair will entertain one-minute requests.

PAYING DOWN THE DEBT IS THE RIGHT AND RESPONSIBLE THING TO DO

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, we have an historic opportunity to do what is right for America. We have an opportunity to make a real commitment to paying down our $5.6 trillion public debt by committing 90 percent of our budget surplus to debt reduction.

Republicans are committed to paying down the national debt, to protecting the economy, and the economic prosperity of future generations of Americans.

The Clinton-Gore administration, on the other hand, have other priorities. They want to spend the surplus on more big government programs. Mr. Speaker, I learned in Economics 101 that this is irresponsible to spend money when we are in debt, especially when we have a $5.6 trillion debt.

So I rise today to urge the administration to put their partisan and irresponsible agenda aside and join with this Republican Congress in committing 90 percent of the surplus to paying down our national debt.

Join with us to do the right thing for all Americans today and for generations to come.

AMERICA SHOULD SUPPORT THE FREE ELECTIONS IN SERBIA

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, the people of Serbia have spoken. I hope as the hours proceed, and maybe as we have been on the floor, I have not heard the latest update, that democracy will take hold and they will be free.

I met Mr. Milosevic, and actually went and sat in his office and asked him to promote peace. It was 1995, and he said to me, ''I will do so.'' Some few short years later, I find myself in refugee camps in Albania looking at the threatened, intimidated, and frightened refugees that Mr. Milosevic had sent fleeing out of Serbia.

It is time now for him to lay down his leadership of despotism, and he should at least recognize that the people have spoken. It is time now for his nation to be free, to become part of the world community.

I would ask that they will be able to proceed as free citizens under the duly-elected new president. Mr. Milosevic has served his time, and unfortunately, it has not been a leadership of sharing.

I would hope that we would stand up and support the new and free elections of the people of Serbia, and include in that support the request that Mr. Milosevic, who hopefully will be found and, as well, be able to address the grievances against him, now knows that he no longer serves as president of that Nation.

THE WORK OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON BASIC RESEARCH OF THE COMMITTEE ON SCIENCE

(Mr. SMITH of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to talk a little bit about the work of the Subcommittee on Basic Research, a subcommittee I am honored to chair.

This subcommittee has had a busy and productive 2 years. In the 106th Congress, we have held a total of 25 oversight hearings, field briefings, markups, on a range of important and timely issues.

In addition, we have passed through the House two bills authorizing fire and earthquake programs under this subcommittee's jurisdiction, and oversight for the National Science Foundation, NSF, whose funding we authorize.

I believe the work we do in the subcommittee is truly unique. In our hearings on information technology, than on technology, education research, plant genomics, and biotechnology, for example, we have been able to glimpse the future, and through our oversight and authorization bills I hope we are able to shape that future, as well.

I am proud of our record and the colleguiality and bipartisanship on the subcommittee. I look forward to continuing that effort in the next session.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the staff of the subcommittee who work behind the scenes to get things done. Stephen Eule, Peter Harsha, Mark Harrington, Sharon Hayes, and Steve Howell have made my job easier. I thank them for their good ideas and hard work.

I also compliment and congratulate our subcommittee ranking member,

THE IMPORTANCE OF RESEARCH IN SCIENCE AND TECHOLOGY

(Mr. EHLERS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to follow up on the comments made by the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. SMITH, and also related to comments I made a few moments ago about the importance of improving math and science education in this country.

As I mentioned in my previous comments, we are enjoying an immense economic boom at this time, much of which is due to the results of science and technology. In particular, it is due to the research which has been done over the past 50 years.

That is why the work of the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is so important, because if we wish to maintain a good economy, if we wish to have our children have a good economy, we must make the same investment in scientific research today that our parents and grandparents made 20, 30, 40, 50 years ago, and which we are enjoying the fruits of today.

It is extremely important that we continue that research effort to improve the health, the lives, and the freedoms not only in our Nation, but of peoples throughout the entire planet.

I commend the gentleman from Michigan for his work. I hope this Congress will continue to show a willingness to fund scientific research and maintain our leadership among the nations of this planet.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

WHAT IS BEHIND OPPOSITION TO THE DEMOCRATS' MEDICARE PRESCRIPTION DRUG PLAN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BROWN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, earlier this year a confidential document prepared for House Republicans somehow found its way into the public realm.

It was not big news at the time, just some talking points prepared by Republican polling firms on the Democrats' Medicare prescription drug plan.

According to their analysis, one way to create opposition to the Democratic plan is to call it a one-size-fits-all plan or a big government plan.

□ 1445

One cannot blame the public for bristling at those phrases. I do not know anyone who likes big government for big government's sake. However, one can blame politicians for exploiting those terms instead of confronting the fundamental differences between the Democratic and Republican prescription drug plans. One can blame the drug companies and the chamber of commerce for spending $40 million already and promises of another $40 million on phony groups on television such as Citizens for Better Medicare.

The Democrats plan would add an optional drug benefit to Medicare. The Republican plan, the drug company plan, would bypass Medicare and subsidize private, stand-alone insurance plans.

So is the Democrats' Medicare prescription drug coverage a one-size-fits-all program as the Republicans and the prescription drug companies tell us? I do not think so.

It is difficult to conceive of a program offering more choice than Medicare. The Medicare program covers medically necessary care and services. Beneficiaries can see the health care professional and go to the facility of their choice.

Similarly, under the proposed drug benefit, enrollees can go to the pharmacy of their choice. FDA-approved medications prescribed by a physician would be covered under the Democrats' Medicare prescription drug plan.

Given this level of flexibility, how would a legion of new private health plans enhance the beneficiary's choice in any way that matters? It is more likely that the Republican plan, the prescription drug company plan, like any other managed care product, would restrict choice and add to the insurance and drug company's bottom lines.

Medicare is a single plan that treats all beneficiaries equally, provides maximum choice and maximum access for patients and doctors.

The Democrats' prescription drug coverage proposal embraces the same principle. Is that a one-size-fits-all program?

Under the Republican prescription drug proposal, under the drug companies' plan, Medicare beneficiaries would have to choose among private stand-alone insurance company prescription drug plans. They say that enables seniors to tailor their prescription drug coverage to their particular needs.

None of these private plans, however, will provide more choice to the Democrats' plan than the Medicare plan in terms of which medications are covered since the Democrats' plan covers all Medicare doctor-prescribed medications. None of these private plans could provide a broader choice of pharmacy since the Democrats' plan does not restrict access to pharmacies.

Under the Republican plan, under the prescription drug company plan, it appears that choice is actually code for ''wealth.'' Higher-income seniors could, in fact, afford a decent prescription drug plan, one with the same level of coverage as would be available to all beneficiaries under the Democrats' Medicare plan. Lower-income enrollees, however, would be relegated to restrictive alternatives. Some choice.

Is the Democrats' prescription drug coverage plan a big government program as the Republicans and the prescription drug companies' executives tell us? Hardly.

Medicare is a Federal Government program with the beneficiary population of 39 million. It is definitely big. But Medicare is also one of the most enduring popular public programs in the Nation's history. Medicare far outranks both employer-sponsored and individually purchased private insurance as a trusted source of health care coverage.

So when opponents of the Democrats' prescription coverage plan berate it for being one size fits all or big government, they, in fact, are berating Medicare itself.

In fact, the Republican prescription drug proposal, the plan from the big drug companies, which ignore Medicare to establish new private insurance policies, is an insult to the Medicare program. Their plan pays homage to those Members of Congress who favor privatizing Medicare. Parenthetically, I have to say I have not yet met anyone outside of Washington who wants to privatize Medicare.

It is no coincidence that the only way a Medicare beneficiary could avoid carrying multiple health insurance policies under the Republican plan, under the prescription drug company plan, is to join a private-managed Medicare-managed care plan.

As Congress and the presidential candidates debate the merits of competing prescription drug coverage proposals, watch for allegations to be thrown around like one size fits all and big government program. Because when applied to insurance coverage offering maximum choice in matters that matter, choice of provider access to medically-necessary care, which is what Medicare is all about, those, those threats, those accusations of one size fits all and big government program, those terms simply fall flat.

Bear in mind that more than the structure of prescription drug benefit is at stake. The future of Medicare hangs in the balance.

VICE PRESIDENT GORE'S SOCIAL SECURITY PROPOSAL WILL INCREASE FUTURE PAYROLL TAXES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. SMITH) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I am very concerned about what it looks like might happen to the FICA taxes, the payroll taxes, if we move ahead with Vice-President GORE's proposal for Social Security.

This first chart reflects what the FICA taxes are now, 15.3 percent of what a worker makes. Then what is going to happen in terms of when we start running out of money? There is not enough money in the Medicare surplus as early as 2006. Then if we continue with the same program without doing anything else, without getting a better return on some of this money that is coming into the system in Social Security Trust Fund and the Medicare Trust Fund, then to keep the same benefits that we have promised continuing we are going to, the taxes would have to go up. Either taxes would have to go up or benefits drastically reduced. We are not going to reduce those benefits.

But, also, let us make some changes now so that we do not have to let the taxes go up, as we see on this chart, to 22.41 percent versus 27.96 percent.

If Vice President GORE's Medicare prescription drug program goes into effect, then those taxes will have to go up to 47 percent of what one makes. Look, it is some time ahead, so one can say somebody else could worry about it. But these are our kids; these are our grandkids that are going to have to pay that kind of tax. Let us make these kinds of changes now.

Let me just reemphasize how serious this tax is today on the payroll deduction tax. Seventy-eight percent, 78 percent of American workers now pay more in the FICA tax for Social Security and Medicare than they do their income tax. We cannot allow these taxes to go up. We cannot simply say, look, we have got to put Social Security first or Medicare first and say, look, we are going to add these benefits. That is what the Vice President does.

Somehow the American people have got to look seriously at the consequences of simply the attractiveness of saying we are going to increase benefits without making some changes in the program to get a better return on the money.

The better return, as suggested by Governor Bush, is to start investing some of that money. Right now, the average return for one's Social Security money that is paid in in taxes is a real return of 2 percent. That is 7 percent less than the average return on equities. Let us balance it. Let us not do all equities. It is going to be limited stock investments. There is going to be safe investments that a person can invest. But it is going to be in their name, their account. If they die, instead of losing everything, their heirs get it.

Let me show my colleagues this third chart. It simply says, no new taxes. Let us not force ourselves into a situation where the payroll deduction has to go up and we have to increase taxes. We have got to have a strong resolution that we are simply not going to cavalierly do what is politically attractive today to get votes today and leave the problem and an increased obligation of higher taxes to our kids and our grandkids.

Again, if we do nothing, if we go with a Gore plan, the 15.3 percent that we are paying in payroll deductions go up to the high of 27.96 percent. If we go with their prescription drug program that says, look, here is prescription drugs that taxpayers are somehow, some way, some time are going to have to pay for, then we end up with a payroll tax that goes as high as 47 percent.

Let us look at a program where one gets better investment from some of that money going in, where government cannot mess around with those benefits by letting at least part of that payroll tax equivalent go into personal investments. Let us not mess around with the trust fund. Let us keep the trust fund growing.

But let us take some of this surplus on-budget money and use it to make this kind of transition that is going to keep probably America's most successful, maybe America's most important, program continuing and keep it solvent.

WE NEED ''POWER'' TO CONTROL UNSCRUPULOUS ENERGY PRODUCERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FILNER. Mr. Speaker, as our colleagues are going off to their home districts for the weekend, I want to remind them all of the crisis that is going on in my district in San Diego, California. They are the first city in California and, perhaps, the first in the Nation that has experienced full deregulation of its electricity prices. The cost of electricity to the average consumer, small business person, big business person has doubled, tripled in 3 or 4 months alone.

I want to remind my colleagues about what is going on in San Diego because San Diego is the harbinger of things to come for the rest of California and possibly the Nation. We are the poster children for what happens when deregulation of a basic commodity like electricity takes place in a monopoly situation.

Those who control the commodity can charge whatever price they can get. In fact, deregulation and the restructuring of the electricity industry is so flawed in California that electricity producers are allowed to charge wholesale prices four to five times higher than they were just a year ago. This is criminal, Mr. Speaker, and I use the word advisably.

Energy producers are making obscene profits on the back of our senior citizens, our schools, our hospitals, our libraries, our businesses. Our whole economy in California is threatened.

The electricity generators and marketeers have just in the last 4 months alone sucked almost $5 billion, that is billion with a ''B,'' from our State economy, more than $450 million from San Diego alone.

Now these generators claim that the high rates are simply the result of supply and demand forces in a marketplace. That is nonsense, Mr. Speaker. The facts are that Southern California has been using less energy than last year, but wholesale prices have gone up from highs of $50 per megawatt in 1999 to $300 and $500 and even higher at the sharpest spikes in the year 2000.

The energy producers have figured out how to manipulate the market and set artificially high wholesale prices. They withhold power until the last minute. They launder power throughout out-of-state companies, they overload transmission lines, all to cause prices to rise to unprecedented levels and to raise their obscene profits. They already have killed off many small businesses in San Diego, caused unbearable suffering among those on fixed income, and robbed our whole community possibly of our future.

I have introduced a bill, H.R. 5131, the HELP San Diego Act, which means Halt Electrical Price gouging in San Diego, with bipartisan support of the gentlemen from California (Mr. HUNTER and Mr. BILBRAY), my San Diego colleagues. Because although the State legislature has removed the gun from our head in capping retail prices, those prices are merely deferred for the next couple of years. Those bills will become due, and those debts will have to be paid. 5131 says that the wholesale generators and marketeers of electricity should pay that bill. They should refund the overcharges that they have made over the last 4 or 5 months.

Now, as I said, this bill has bipartisan support. Yet the Republican leadership of this House will not schedule on the agenda a bill that is necessary to save the economy of San Diego.

I call on the Republican leadership of this House to help San Diego, to put that bill on the agenda with bipartisan support, so we can, in fact, make sure that the future of San Diego's economy is secure.

I have also introduced a bill today that we call the POWER Act. Quite simply, the POWER Act protects our communities by imposing 100 percent excise tax on windfall profits that are the rule of market manipulation and price fixing.

If we cannot pass H.R. 5131, which directs the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to roll back the wholesale price and refund the overcharge to consumers, the POWER Act says that 100 percent tax on windfall profits shall be assessed.

This does not affect legitimate profits. It does not jeopardize any electrical producer. But it protects our senior citizens, our children, our small businesses, and our economy from the predatory actions of some unscrupulous companies that are taking advantage of their monopoly on the production of this vital and indispensable resource.

I ask my colleagues, as they return to their districts, to keep a close eye on San Diego.

□ 1500

We need your help in this last week of Congress. We need to pass H.R. 5131, a bipartisan bill to roll back wholesale prices in the western electric market, and to refund the consumers the obscene overcharging and profiteering they have been subject to.

I hope this Congress can act and act quickly. We must help San Diego.

THE FOUR CORNERSTONES OF MY SEASON IN THE CONGRESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SMITH of Michigan). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentlewoman from Idaho (Mrs. CHENOWETH-HAGE) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the majority leader.

Mrs. CHENOWETH-HAGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise on this occasion to give a very special sort of address. I am not here today to talk about a specific piece of legislation or to discuss any one thing in particular that the administration is doing or failing to do, but my message here today is both personal in nature and something that I hope that my colleagues and future Members of this great body will find useful in times to come.

Mr. Speaker, I am here to talk about the experience that one very average American citizen has had over the course of the past 6 years in being a part of what has been termed the greatest deliberative body on earth: The United States Congress. And although people call me Congressman, or sometimes Congresswoman, I am very much simply an average American citizen, an American citizen who took leave from her ordinary, average American life to serve for a time as an advocate for over half a million people in a State 2,000 miles away. And that can only happen in America.

Now, after serving here for 3 terms, I am fulfilling a pledge that I made in 1994, and I am leaving this body of my own will, returning to a life of an average American citizen to live under the laws that I hope that we have made a little bit better here.

I want to share with my colleagues and for the record some of my observations about this great government of ours, the daunting responsibilities we hold here, and my hope for the future. So I want to talk about several things.

I want to discuss the purpose of this mighty Congress and what its proper role is in the lives of ordinary Americans. I want to discuss how certain matters become very real and very practical matters in our everyday life, matters that may have at one time been theory but have become reality. And I want to raise some real questions and concerns about the future.

First, however, I would like to say a few words about some of the people who have worked for me and assisted me over the years. I feel that I have an extraordinary staff. I have been blessed, not through my own skill but I think it was just a blessing, that I was able to pull together a staff that I think are unusually brilliant and unusually fine Americans and who, within themselves individually, the flame for liberty and freedom beat within their hearts and, therefore, we were able to accomplish much together, this Chenoweth team.

My staff consisted of: Lois Anderson, Judy Boyle, Chris Caron, Doug Crandall, Georgia Golling, Ann Heissenbuttel, Chad Hyslop, Dave Kroeger, Dean Lester, Lisa Lovell, Matt Miller, Linda Mullin, Nathan Olsen, Karen Roetter, Keith Rupp, Valerie Schatz, Elizabeth Schwarzer, Tereasa Sinigiani, and Rhonda Tilden. And to all of them I just want to say thanks so much for the wonderful job.

There is a great deal of personal affection and admiration that I hold for my office staff, and there is among all of us the thing that has always bound us together and given purpose to our days here on Capitol Hill, which has been our shared commitment to a vision, a vision of our Nation and our government here in America. Let me tell my colleagues a little bit about that vision.

My vision as a Congressman for the first district of Idaho has been that America would continue to be a land where people live in peace with one another; that they respect each other's individual rights and property; and that people are free to advance as far as their individual talents and commitments to work hard will take them.

I believe that the rights of the people are not derived from government but, rather, the inalienable rights of the people to life, liberty, property and the pursuit of happiness are God-given rights that existed prior to the formation of any government. It is because these rights exist that governments are created by the people to help protect these rights that are God given. My vision is for a government that is keenly aware of this relationship between the governed and the governors, and which views its primary role as a protector of people's rights as opposed to a protector of people's persons or what they may think, and which views itself as the servant of the people and never the people's master.

I envisioned a congressional office staff which recognized the primacy of the citizens over the government, and I insisted that my staff recognize that they work for the constituents in Idaho's first district and across America, not the government; and that advancing the vision of freedom and individual liberty and providing service to constituents is the first priority in our office.

Most people who serve in this institution, I daresay, have a vision for the country and for their constituents. Those visions must be larger than our own personal ambitions and they must spring from a sense of purpose not necessarily for ourselves at all but for our fellow Americans and future generations. But what is the source of that purpose? To ponder that question is to ponder the purpose of government itself.

Since the beginning of time, man has wondered how to live together in harmony. Volumes have been written about it. It certainly has never been easy to figure out. There has always been a tendency for people to equate might with right. The philosopher Thomas Hobbes famously argued that man tends to be self-serving and to have a natural tendency to strive against and to plunder his fellow man. This is the basis of why we have government. People exist, people are born with certain natural rights. They have a right to continue to exist, and no one has a right to harm or kill another.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlewoman would yield for just a moment, I just wanted to say, on behalf of many of us in the United States House of Representatives, I would like to thank the gentlewoman for her very diligent and hard work not only in representing the gentlewoman's district but in helping the United States of America. It is not easy. The gentlewoman has sacrificed, like many of us, a great deal.

So I thank the gentlewoman very, very much for her tremendous contribution that she has made in the last 6 years.

Mrs. CHENOWETH-HAGE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan, and I will always have very fond memories of landing in the gentleman's office and asking him to help me go over an appropriations bill and help untangle the mystery of the appropriating process here. The gentleman has been a great teacher.

I want to remind my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, that liberty is something that people have a right to their own freedom and they may not be held in bondage to one another. That is what liberty means. It is so important that we remember people's property rights. People simply do have a right to own things, and we have a responsibility to make sure that we respect the ownership rights of others.

The philosopher John Locke expounded on this notion when he said labor, in and of itself, is the origin and justification of property, according to Locke. And whatever a man ''mixes his labor with'' is his to use. It is his property. So in the state of nature, men have a right to protect their natural rights and to punish transgressors. So civil society arises when men agree to delegate this job of protecting their rights to an unbiased entity: A government. So because men establish this entity, government, they have the right to set limits on its authority, to modify it, or even to dismantle it should the need arise.

Now, a century later, this served as the rational foundation for our own Declaration of Independence. It is that very doctrine that gave us Americans the very moral authority to rebel against the tyranny of the British Crown. Why, my colleagues might ask, am I going over all this ancient history? Well, it is very simple, Mr. Speaker. It is because people forget. People forget across this Nation, but people forget in this body as well.

Mr. Speaker, if during one of my colleagues' town hall meetings that we all hold in our respective districts, they were to ask their constituents why we have a government, people would be likely to stare at them like a tree full of owls and they would probably experience an uncomfortable silence. Then, suddenly, some wiseacre might pipe up and say that he has been trying to figure that out all of his life. But then, usually, someone will say, well, we have government because we need to provide for the national defense. Well, they are on the right track, but that is not all there is to it.

Seldom will we hear one of our constituents recite those vitally important words of Thomas Jefferson, those words that he wrote in the Declaration of Independence, which states: ''We hold these truths to be self-evident: That all men are created equal, and that they are endowed by their creator with certain inalienable rights, rights that among us are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. And that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed.''

Oh, I hope that that will become emblazoned indelibly on our souls and our spirits and our minds; that government receives its just power from those who are governed. But to secure the rights of government, governments are instituted among men, and the reason our government exists is to secure the inalienable rights of the American people. No more, no less.

That has been my message over the past 6 years. It is very simple, it is very old, but it works for freedom and liberty. And while I am certain that a poll of our colleagues would find universal agreement and sentiment for that very sentiment that I just expressed, we have differing opinions on how we turn those eloquent words into action. It has been my experience that turning those values into real action seems to be one of the hardest things for some people to really, truly understand.

Sometimes my colleagues seem to think that little things are unimportant. But, Mr. Speaker, the little things are so vitally important. I think every schoolchild has heard the poem about the importance of little things by George Herbert when he wrote that: ''For the want of a nail, the shoe was lost; For the want of a shoe, the horse was lost; For the want of a horse, the rider was lost; For the want of a rider, the battle was lost; For the want of a battle, the kingdom was lost!''

Yes, Mr. Speaker, little things matter. Little nails in horses hooves matter. They matter to all of us. And these little things are very important in the fight and the maintenance of our freedoms.

Some of my colleagues have certainly scratched their heads in wonder over some of the positions that I have taken over these years, and they wonder why I make such a big deal about language affecting private property rights or over some language that some might consider obscure issues, like the primacy of State water rights. My insistence that these rights be protected has certainly inconvenienced some Members of this House and served to annoy some Members and their staffs. And though it is sometimes an inconvenience, I hope that all who love freedom can understand how much more inconvenient it would be if we carelessly neglected the little nails and just began to give away our freedoms and liberty.

If the first job of government is to protect the rights of the freedoms of its citizens, then that is the standard by which we must first measure every single act we undertake.

I would like to discuss how I have attempted to apply these ideals to certain legislation in the hope that it might help some understand the importance of these issues, and perhaps some of my colleagues might take up this banner and continue to carry it forward as I leave this fine institution.

There are four areas in which I have seen the struggle most closely and I felt it most deeply. These have been the four cornerstones of my work here in Congress; and that is protecting the Constitution and protecting the rights of citizens, protecting our property and the wealth of our people, and protecting our national sovereignty.

Mr. Speaker, each of us swears an oath to uphold the Constitution of the United States of America and to protect it. But, Mr. Speaker, there are so many Americans, and I daresay a few of our colleagues here in this House, who seem to think that this is a matter of evolving and galloping interpretation.

But I remember when I first came to Congress in 1995, during those heady days of the Contract with America, one of the first matters that was considered in the Contract with America was granting the President line item veto authority. The power, in effect, would grant to the President the power to rewrite our legislation by eliminating certain specific provisions in the bills that we sent to him and then immediately signing that legislation into law.

I felt that that was unconstitutional. But this was an issue that had been championed by the people, especially Republicans, and it was a proposal favored by my favorite President, Ronald Reagan.

But I broke ranks with the leadership of my own party to oppose the line item veto. I did oppose it. I did vote against it because I believed that it constituted an unconstitutional shift away from legislative power to the administration.

So, Mr. Speaker, I can remember that it was difficult to go home after that vote, and I can remember a lot of my fellow Republicans criticizing me for that position. Who was I but a freshman Member, just an ordinary woman from Idaho, from a small western State, to oppose this kind of gigantic reform.

But I must confess that it gave me some small degree of satisfaction when the United States Supreme Court ruled that it was, indeed, unconstitutional for the President to have the power to rewrite legislation by vetoing part of it and struck down the line item veto.

Likewise, I have always thought that one aspect of the Endangered Species Act was especially silly, and I have fought against the ramifications of the Endangered Species Act since I first came to Congress.

But it was a legal tradition that held under the Endangered Species Act in and of itself that people did not have legal standing under the Endangered Species Act.

In fact, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that humans are not within the realm of jurisdiction under the Endangered Species Act. So if your private property was taken under the Endangered Species Act, you had absolutely no recourse for the damages. The only way a person could be an advocate in court under the Endangered Species Act, according to the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, was if they went in there and sued on behalf of an endangered species. They had to represent the species, not the human.

So, Mr. Speaker, I offered legislation to correct this obvious flaw in the law. And my colleagues should have heard some of the hoots offered up when I did that. Some people assumed that I was being facetious when I argued that people should have at least the same legal rights as the bugs and the snails and the animals and the plants.

But while my bill was working its way through the system, the United States Supreme Court beat me to the punch and ruled that, yes indeed, people do have legal standing under the Endangered Species Act. So, once again, I felt vindicated by the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Speaker, I want to remind my colleagues that the genesis of the Constitution has been proven by the test of time as well as the genius of that great document. It has succeeded when others have failed. The United States is now the longest running democracy in the history of the world, but it will only continue to be so if we jealously guard and protect the Constitution and if we do not give in to the political expediency of the day and begin to weaken it.

I think about the political correctness that is now beginning to drive public policy in this Nation, and I have to remember what Charlton Heston just recently said, and this was that ''political correctness is simply tyranny with manners. Oh that we would have the courage to do that which is unpopular but that which we feel is right and constitutional.''

Heston went on to say that ''political correctness is today's pocket change, but that courage is the currency of history.''

So if we give in to political expediency, we will be crying out in this Nation for the want of another nail, the little things that can bring down a nation. Which brings me to the second issue, protecting the rights of our citizens.

The Constitution is the document free men wrote with the central purpose in mind of protecting God-given rights. And let us never weaken in that defense. Because the most important of these rights to be protected by government is the right to life.

And this is why have I been such a staunch defender of the rights of the unborn children. That child, that weakest citizen among us, is the most important and most needy when it comes to having a fair and impartial government to protect his or her life.

Simply put, that is why I speak out in defense of the unborn. And if you believe that life begins before birth, then government has a responsibility to protect that life. It is the first rule of law.

Mr. Speaker, I am also a very outspoken defender of the second amendment. I am a defender of all of the Bill of Rights, but it seems to me that the second amendment is the one that is actually under political attack most often. It is under political attack through political correctness, through massive marches, and just through the shear emotionalism that is reigning today.

No American takes lightly the threat of violence, and no American can ignore the issue of crime and personal safety. No American can dismiss the violence that has erupted in our schools. But to say the problem with crime and violence is the availability of guns is to cop out with an easy answer.

The problem is not the inanimate or the things or the guns or the knives or whatever else, it is a person who will casually use these objects to plunder or hurt or kill other persons.

To diminish our right to keep and bear arms by entangling us in more gun control is to want to loose yet another nail that may ultimately destroy our Nation.

It was precisely that danger that George Mason in 1788 wrote about and addressed this Nation when he addressed the Congress then and he said, ''When the resolution of enslaving America was formed in Great Britain, the British parliament was advised by an artful man, who was governor of Pennsylvania, to disarm the people, that it was the best and most effectual way to enslave them, but that they should not do it openly but just weaken them and let them sink gradually.''

Well, is that not the picture of gun control? But addressing the human factor is much more difficult than taking things away.

I find it amazing, for instance, that some of these same people who make the most noise about limiting their fellow American's second amendment rights are those same entertainment industry leaders who produce music, movies, and video games that glorify violence and debase our values. They, in essence, pit one basic right, one freedom of expression against another.

I find it amazing, Mr. Speaker, and I find it amazingly cynical. And yet where is the outrage over this? Rather than simply control themselves, the Hollywood moguls and the product they produce, they want to take the constitutionally guaranteed rights away from all their fellow men. It is cynical. It is selfish. It is short sighted, Mr. Speaker.

Let us seek solutions to our problems, but let us do it in a way that respects the rights of all of our citizens. Those rights are so essential.

Another early debate in which I became involved is centered around the efforts to reform the writ of habeas corpus and the rights under habeas corpus, that great writ.

It pained me, Mr. Speaker, to take a position in opposition of some of those great committee chairmen, some of my colleagues for whom I have enormous respect. But I fought against a proposal that sought to punish terrorists but which would cause ordinary citizens to lose their constitutionally guaranteed rights against search and seizure.

So the rights to speak and assemble freely, to be ensured of due process of law, and to be protected against false imprisonment belong to all Americans. We cannot allow ourselves to be frightened by one issue into giving up all of these freedoms or taking them away from our citizens.

So what Thomas Paine said in 1795 is as true today as it ever was before. Thomas Paine said, ''He that would make his own liberty secure must guard even his enemy from oppression.''

I remembered that expression by Thomas Paine when I joined my colleagues on the other side of the aisle to protect this profoundly important right of Americans.

To protect our rights, we give the government very powerful law enforcement powers. These powers are what enables society to move away from the concept of making might right.

A fair and responsible authority is supposed to act to protect our rights and to punish transgressors. But what happens when these law enforcement agencies themselves abuse the law or act in ways that cause distrust in the minds the very people they are supposed to be serving and protecting?

And this is what happened in a remote part of my district shortly before I was elected. It happened in a place called Ruby Ridge. Men who were supposed to protect people's rights and their lives instead perverted their mission into a bizarre siege of a man and his family.

Admittedly, the man held some unpopular opinions. But in a land where a person's right to his own opinion constitutes the first amendment, that is no justification for the killings of Randy Weaver's young son and the killing of his wife, Vicky, who held nothing more threatening in her arms than her infant 10-month-old daughter.

Mr. Speaker, this was a sad day in America; and this is an outrageous abuse of law enforcement power. And it did much more damage to us than the personal tragedies of the killings in this incident. It began to kill the trust and the respect that many Americans had for their government, and we reaped the whirlwind in the years that followed.

I think of Waco and I think of the seizure of Elian Gonzales, and it all amounts to the fact that we are beginning to numb America's senses to the outrage against the intrusion of Federal law enforcement in our homes and the security of our properties.

In the years ahead, Mr. Speaker, it is one of my most fervent hopes that my colleagues will continue to be ever vigilant against the possibility of anything like that ever happening again.

Mr. Speaker, as important as it is to protect the rights of our people, it is also important to protect their property. The right to own property, to keep that for which you labor, is perhaps the essence of a really truly free society. And it is one of the most essential roles of government, to protect private property. In fact, John Adams said that property is as sovereign as the laws of God, and that there must be a force of law and justice to protect property. Without property, Adams said, liberty cannot exist. And now with this Nation owning or controlling in the 40 percentile of this entire land base, we have to ask in this generation what has happened to our property rights? To own our property has been something that has allowed America to grow, to become a Nation that has been able to produce for its people the greatest standard of living in the history of civilization.

Over the centuries, many students of human nature have commented on the tendency of man to ignore other people's property rights if it suits his own individual interests. One of the philosophers whom I most admire was a Frenchman named Frederick Bastiat. If one of the signs of genius is to be able to distill complex ideas into a short, easily understandable form, then Bastiat was, by definition, a genius because in 1850 he published a little book, it is only 75 pages long, called ''The Law.'' It is such an influential and important work that I actually require anyone who wants to work in my congressional office to read this book and to write an essay or a book report on their reactions to it so I can read their essay before I interview them. Bastiat was able to distill what the relationship between the governed and the governors really should be.

With regards to property, Bastiat wrote this:

''Man can live and satisfy his wants only by ceaseless labor; by the ceaseless application of his faculties to natural resources. This process is the origin of property.

''But it is also true that a man may live and satisfy his wants by seizing and consuming the products of the labor of others. This process is the origin of plunder.

''Now, since man is naturally inclined to avoid pain —and since labor in and of itself is pain—it follows that men will resort to plunder whenever plunder is easier than work. History shows this quite clearly. Under these conditions, neither religion or morality can stop it.''

Bastiat continues:

''When, then, does plunder stop? It stops when it becomes more painful and more dangerous than labor.

''It is evident, then, that the proper purpose of law is to use the power of its collective force to stop this fatal tendency to plunder instead of work. All the measures of the law should protect property and punish plunder.

''But, generally, the law is made by one man or one class of men. And since law cannot operate without the sanction and support of a dominating force, this force must be entrusted to those who make the laws.

''This fact, combined with the fatal tendency that exists in the heart of man to satisfy his wants with the least possible effort, explains the almost universal perversion of the law. Thus it is easy to understand how law, instead of checking injustice, becomes the invincible weapon of injustice. It is easy to understand why the law is used by the legislator to destroy, in varying degrees among the rest of the people, to destroy their personal independence by slavery, to destroy their liberty by oppression, and to destroy their property by plunder.

''This is done by the person who makes the law, and in proportion to the power that he holds.''

Well, those were very interesting words by Bastiat, words that really go deep in my soul. And so you see in a representative democracy such as ours, we are more insulated from the whims of a single person or a single class of people than were the citizens of France in the mid-19th century. Yet I think it is foolish if we ignore human nature, and I think it is even more foolish if we ignore the nature of government to by nature grow more powerful and bigger and more oppressive. There are certain classes of citizens who, still today, seek to gain political power in order to take advantage of the labor of others, and they use the power of big government to do just exactly that.

Bastiat goes on to argue that men naturally rebel against the injustice of which they are victims. ''Thus,'' he says, ''when plunder is organized by law for the profit of those who make the law, all the plundered classes try somehow to enter, by peaceful or revolutionary means, into the making of laws. According to their degree of enlightenment, these plundered classes may propose one of two entirely different purposes when they attempt to obtain political power: One, either they must wish to stop lawful plunder; or, two, they may wish to share in it.

''Woe to the Nation when this latter purpose prevails.''

Mr. Speaker, we see today American citizens being plundered by other American citizens for a wide variety of purposes. We see Americans paying higher cumulative taxes than ever before to sustain programs that channel wealth from one class to another, or from one person to another. We see some of the leaders of this Nation proclaiming that some Americans are just too wealthy and that they do not deserve to be treated fairly and equitably under the law. We see class warfare motivated by personal envy. We see some citizens who live in populous parts of the country decide they want to take land from some people in the less populous western States and they argue that they want this land not for personal wealth but for aesthetic purposes or aboriginal purposes. But the end result is still the same: They are actually taking something from someone else and they are locking other Americans out of their beloved land.

We see a concerted, shortsighted effort on the part of some to seemingly attack the sources of original wealth in this Nation. And we know that it is a combination of land, labor and capital, only land, labor and capital, that creates original wealth. Yet that is being exploded apart with the seizure of our land.

In a time in which the new economy provides fabulous wealth overnight based on the trading of information, we are forgetting that all original wealth originates in the land. Wealth is created by the proper combination of land, property, and labor and capital, no more, no less. Wealth comes first from the things that we mine or mill or harvest, and without those things there can be no stock markets and no information superhighways and no bridges to the future.

But, Mr. Speaker, we are today turning our backs on this original wealth. To hear the way some would talk, you would think that mining minerals from the Earth or harvesting crops, including timber and raising livestock, are somehow morally reprehensible and wrong. Instead, our natural resources are the sources of our economic strength which built this country, which in turn became magnified and powerful through the strength of our economy.

President Theodore Roosevelt, commonly referred to as the father of today's environmental movement, said in a speech to the American Society of Foresters way back in 1903:

''First and foremost,'' Roosevelt said, ''you can never afford to forget for one moment what is the object of our forest policy. That object is not to preserve the forests because they are beautiful, though that is good in and of itself, nor because they are refuges for the wild creatures of the wilderness, though that, too, is good in itself; but the primary object of our forest policy, as of the land policy of the United States of America, is the making of prosperous homes. It is part of the traditional policy of home-making of our country. Every other consideration comes as secondary. The whole effort of the government in dealing with the forests must be directed to this end, keeping in view the fact that it is not only necessary to start the homes as prosperous but to keep them so.''

He went on to say, ''Your attention must be directed to the preservation of the forests not, as an end in and of itself, but as a means of preserving and increasing the prosperity of this Nation. Forestry is the preservation of forests by wise use of the forests.''

But those who call themselves environmentalists today would have turned their backs on Roosevelt's vision. What has happened when we impose an extreme and narrow political policy on our natural resources? We have this year experienced catastrophic wildfires, burning more board feet this year of timber than we have ever logged off our national forests. That is sheer waste. That is sheer destruction.

We must not cut off our noses to spite our face, Mr. Speaker. We must responsibly use and promote these industries. We must be wise stewards of our Earth and our resources. But those resources are there for us to use.

Just as there are some citizens who would plunder other citizens, there are other nations in this world who would seek unfair advantages from us, this great Nation. We must protect our Nation's interests and our national sovereignty. Sovereignty forms the fourth cornerstone of the policies that I have advocated. Just as with any community, there is a global community, and we should and do try to be a good and responsible neighbor in that community. Yet there are those who would argue that we are such a part of this global community that we can lose our identity and that people in other nations should have a voice in such matters as our own land policies or consumer protection laws or our judicial systems. That goes beyond being a good neighbor into becoming the neighborhood's doormat. Let America never become the global doormat.

That is why I and some of my colleagues put up such a fight over such seemingly small issues as World Heritage Site designations and the Man in the Biosphere programs of the United Nations. These are the neighborhood's busybodies, offering their opinions on the state of our yards and gardens. Everyone welcomes praise, but when the praise starts to turn into a sanctioning of what we may and may not do, a bright line has been crossed, a bright line has been crossed and an invasion into our sovereignty.

In the recent film about the American Revolution entitled ''The Patriot,'' I saw that and I think everyone, Mr. Speaker, in this body should view the movie ''The Patriot.'' It would remind everyone here in this body why we are here. The main character in that film rose and asked a body of his compatriots, ''Would you be ruled by one tyrant 3,000 miles away or by 3,000 tyrants one mile away?''

Mr. Speaker, we now seem to face the prospect of thousands of would-be tyrants trying to rule us from all around the world. Nowhere is the fight to preserve our national sovereignty more important than in preserving our national security. I have often said that in my heart of hearts I really am a dove. But I want America to be the best armed dove on the planet. George Washington said it more eloquently when he said, ''To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving the peace.'' And Ronald Reagan carried that out effectively.

Sadly, we have allowed the readiness of our military to deteriorate badly. Training missions are compromised by tight budgets, we have military families eligible for food stamps, and retention levels are becoming difficult to maintain. And we often fail to meet our duty to our past warriors, our veterans, those great Americans. We provide them with inadequate health services. We dishonor them with neglect. In my home State of Idaho, we have not even provided them with a specific field of honor in which to lie when they pass on to the next world.

I am very pleased to report, Mr. Speaker, that as one of my proudest accomplishments, it does look like we will have that field of honor for our brave military veterans soon under construction at a place in Idaho just outside of Boise.

But we must be very careful that we do not trade away our national sovereignty in some ill-considered effort to become popular with the rest of the world. Our military exists to protect American land and vital American interests. We cannot bully the rest of the world into behaving like we do. But I just cringe when I think of American soldiers serving under foreign command, and I think that should never, never happen.

And when it comes to protecting our sovereignty, we must not compromise our internal laws to suit foreign interests, nor must we allow our thirst for trade with other nations to allow us to ignore the aggressive and threatening natures of some of our other neighbors in this global community. And we certainly must not casually give away any more of our important strategic assets, whether they be the secrets to our most powerful weapons, or important avenues for commercial and military traffic, such as the Panama Canal, which is now being run by the Red Chinese in violation of the Panama Canal Treaty. The Red Chinese are now piloting our ships through the Panama Canal.

Mr. Speaker, it is my belief and has been my work for the past years and will continue after I leave Congress, to defend these four cornerstones of freedom. This is the most important job that we have as legislators, to preserve the lives, the liberty and the property of our fellow citizens, and to protect our national sovereignty.

There has, however, been an almost inexorable trend against those unalienable rights. There is no mistake in my mind that those rights have weakened as our Federal Government has grown bigger and stronger. The efforts that work against those rights often come clothed in garments of good intentions.

When we seek to remedy some problem through the expansion or consolidation of power into a smaller set of hands, remember the words of Lord Acton, that power corrupts, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.

That corruption will twist and bend the law away from what our Founding Fathers intended and into something future generations will regret and future generations would suffer under.

So, Mr. Speaker and my fellow Members of Congress, it has been a great privilege to serve in this body, this great body representing this great land, this powerful government of the people, by the people and for the people. I hope that you will remember my words, and I hope that you will remember the lofty, yet very simple reason that we are here. And years hence, when some colleague takes the floor of this magnificent Chamber and speaks out for the cause of freedom and liberty, I hope that you will take those words to heart.

(2) the National Park Service should expeditiously—

(B) restore the Grange to a state befitting the memory of Alexander Hamilton.

TITLE X—CONTINUED DUMPING AND SUBSIDY OFFSET

SEC. 1001. SHORT TITLE.

SEC. 1002. FINDINGS OF CONGRESS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Consistent with the rights of the United States under the World Trade Organization, injurious dumping is to be condemned and actionable subsidies which cause injury to domestic industries must be effectively neutralized.

(2) United States unfair trade laws have as their purpose the restoration of conditions of fair trade so that jobs and investment that should be in the United States are not lost through the false market signals.

(3) The continued dumping or subsidization of imported products after the issuance of antidumping orders or findings or countervailing duty orders can frustrate the remedial purpose of the laws by preventing market prices from returning to fair levels.

(4) Where dumping or subsidization continues, domestic producers will be reluctant to reinvest or rehire and may be unable to maintain pension and health care benefits that conditions of fair trade would permit. Similarly, small businesses and American farmers and ranchers may be unable to pay down accumulated debt, to obtain working capital, or to otherwise remain viable.

(5) United States trade laws should be strengthened to see that the remedial purpose of those laws is achieved.
